Former Klemme Couple Married Fifty Years Ago

MR. AND MRS. JOHN LARSON CELEBRATE THEIR 50TH ANNIVERSARY

Former Klemme Couple Held Open House To Friends At Belmond Thursday

Mr. and Mrs. John C. Larson, of Belmond, celebrated their 50th or golden wedding anniversary at their home in Belmond on Thursday, December 28, 1950, by holding open house from 2:00 until 4:00 p. m., at which time relatives, neighbors and many old friends called on them to offer congratulations. A nice lunch was served to all who attended.

Mr. and Mrs. Larson wish to thank all who called on them and also thanking all who sent them cards, gifts and flowers in remembrance of the happy occasion.

Were Married At Jewell

Miss Mary Kalling of Jewell, Iowa, became the bride of John C. Larson, also of Jewell, on December 28, 1900 at the Lutheran Church in Jewell. The late Rev. Johnson performed the ceremony which was witnessed by Andrew Larson and M. H. Brock.

The couple started farming south of Blairsburg, Iowa, but later moved to Hancock County, where they spent most of their married life. For many years they were residents of Klemme community and lived on their farm southwest of Klemme.

In February of 1945 they retired from their farm and moved to Belmond where they purchased a nice home. Mr. and Mrs. Larson are the parents of nine children. They have 19 grandchildren, all are living.

Seventy-two people registered at the Larson home on their anniversary and they came from Belmond, Goodell, Klemme, Garner, Jewell, Williams, Ackley, Iowa Falls, Mason City, Stanhope, Waterloo, Goshen, Indiana and Racine, Wisconsin.

ABIGAIL HUENEMAN SINGS IN DALLAS, TEXAS

Miss Abigail Hueneman, Hancock County Rural Youth member sang at the American Farm Bureau Federation meeting in Dallas, Texas. According to Frank W. Ehman, Director of Young People's Activities of the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation, Abigail sang four times during the convention. Once on the Talent Find Program of the Rural Youth Session, once as a duet with a boy from West Virginia at the Rural Youth banquet, once as a duet with Fred Battles, of Polk County at the all-Iowa Wednesday morning banquet, and then again as a soloist before the entire American Farm Bureau Federation Conservation. She was accompanied by her sister, Miriam Hueneman.

Abigail is known throughout Iowa Young People's groups for her ability to sing. She and Miriam are both members f the Hancock County Rural Women's Chorus.

Irma Bird, Vice-President of the Hancock County Rural Youth represented her group as the delegate to the National meeting.

PLAY WELL ATTENDED GIVEN BY REFORMED YOUNG PEOPLE

The play, "Strangers At Home" presented by the Young Peoples Bible Class of the Reformed Church at the school auditorium was attended by a large crowd. The offering received amounted to $60.50.

Special musical number were presented by the Junior Choir. The Times does not have the time this week to give the entire cast and program.

FATHER OF GILBERT JONES DIED HERE WEDNESDAY

Funeral For Belmond Man Was Held Saturday At Belmond

Funeral services were held for William Jones, 72 at the Fulton Funeral Home Saturday afternoon with the Rev. Heber Miller, pastor of the Belmond Methodist Church, officiating. Bruial was in the Belmond Cemetery.

Mr. Jones died Wednesday at the home of his son, Gilbert Jones where he was being cared for the past few weeks. Mr. Jones had been ill for some time before coming to Klemme. He had been a resident of Belmond for many years.

He leaves to mourn his death his son, Gilbert of Klemme, the only immediate relative.

DID YOU EVER SEE A RABBIT WITH HORNS?

Henry Ward shot a cotton tail rabbit the other day that was a freak. Henry brought the rabbit to the Times office to show it to the Editor.

The rabbit looked like any other cotton tail except that he had a hard mony substance, resembling horns, growing out of his head near the ears. Otherwise the rabbit was normal in appearance.

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY RAY EASTMAN

Fred, the last guy to see Bill alive and talk to him, sees the irony of their last conversation. It went something like this:

* * *

"Man, I'm telling you," said "Bill's wife was just putting on not suck all us veterans back in. I had enough the last trip."

"I know what you mean," said Fred.

"Even the fighting wasn't the worst part," Bill went on. "It was the waiting. Wait in line for clothes, for laundry, for shots, for chow . . everything. 'Hurrp up and wait.' Boy that's the army." He shoved his chair back. "Well. Freddie, I gotta be going."

"What's the hurry?" Fred drained his coffee and rose.

"Oh, nothing special," said Bill. "The wife's at her bridge club, and I'm supposed to pick her up. Probably have to wait a half hour before they get through gabbing, though."

"And that's a fact," said Fred, telling about it the next day. "Bill's wife was just potting on her coat to leave the bridge party when she got the phone call from the police. She thought he got tired waiting and had gone on home.

"A man who saw the accident said Bill must have been doing at least 60 when he hit that patch of ice on the curve and rolled.

"Bill was sure in a hurry . . . and he got a mighty long wait out of it.'

FARM PRICES RISE ABOUT FOUR PER CENT

Washington—Farm prices rose about 4 per cent between mid-November and mid-December, the agriculture department reported Friday.

The advance put prices about 15.6 per cent above the level prevailing just before the Korean war. But they were still about 7 per cent below the record set in January, 1948.

Commodities which increased during the month included eggs, wheat, corn, sardines, flaxseed, cottonseed and wool.

Lower prices were received for cotton, grapefruit, hogs and chickens.

Nine major commodities were at or above permissive minimum price ceiling levels authorized by economic stabilization legislation. They included cotton, rice, flue-cured tobacco, wool cottonseed, sardines, beef cattle, lambs and veal calves. All other important commodities were selling for less than minimum veiling levels. No price ceilings have been set on any farm commodities.

The department said prices paid by farmers for goods and services used in family living and farm production went up nearly one per cent during the month to set a new record.

The index of prices received by farmers in mid-December was 286 pr cent of the 1910-14 average compared with 276 per cent a month earlier and 233 per cent a year ago. The record index was 306 set in January, 1948.

GOVERNMENT TAKE OVER ALL RUBBER

Washington— The government placed virtually all rubber supplies Thursday, announcing it will be sole importer and distributor of natural rubber

The natural production authority ordered that effective Friday only General Services Administration Jess Larson may import natural rubber and natural rubber latex.

Heretofore government agencies have had control over synthetic rubber because the government owns the synthetic rubber plants. It has been attempting to cut down the use of rubber in civilian goods.

An official statement said it is necessary for the government to take over the natural rubber buying and distributing program "to safeguard the supply and to assure that it is distributed and utilized most advantageously to the national defense."

The government already allocates to tire and other rubber companies all natural and synthetic rubber; Thursday's action goes far beyond—it excludes private companies from making rubber importations.

As an indirect effect, officials said, the removal of competing private buyers from the field should help hold down rubber prices which have been soaring since the outbreak of fighting in Korea.

FIRE AND SMOKE DAMAGED FARM HOUSE TUESDAY

Shortly after one o'clock Tuesday afternoon the Klemme Fire Department was called to the Dean Rasmus home just west of Klemme to battle a fire in the house which was filled with dense smoke.

It took some time to locate the fire because of the smoke. Fire had started in a closet. Quite a lot of damage was done by smoke and water before the flames could be extinguised.

Creamery Workers, Officials, Wives Had Annual Dinner

The officers, directors and personnel and their wives of the Klemme Cooperative Creamery Company held their annual dinner and party last Wednesday evening at Hull's Cafe party room where they enjoyed a good dinner, after which they played 500.

All enjoyed a fine evening.

LET'S LOOK FORWARD TO A SAFER NEW YEAR
The displayer of this poster is co-operating with the Iowa Safety Congress by offering you this public service.
YOUR HELP IS NEEDED FOR A SAFER IOWA

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

Your help is needed for a safer Iowa!"

It's true. The prevention of accidents and fires is an individual proposition, a responsibility that must always, in the final analysis, depend on your individual effort.

This year, more than ever before, safety-minded citizens, newspapers and radio stations are helping to set up guide-posts to safety. Each week you'll see or hear a new safety message in the yellow "stop sign" posters, in this paper and on your local radio station.

Your Iowa Safety Congress, in cooperation with state departments of government and state-wide organizations interested in safety, is maintaining and expanding its program this year—the program carried out by you and the men and women of your county safety congress.

State officials and state-wide business, farm and service organizations are all working to promote safety.

But—"Your help is needed for a safer Iowa!"

How can you help? By seeing, hearing and heeding the weekly "Safety Sake" messages. By working in or with your county safety congress. And by following the safety rules and regulations set up by the state, by the company you work for, or by the organizations you belong to.

Now, especially, in time of national and international crisis, we must keep fires and accidents from crippling Iowa's productivity.

No one man or group can accomplish that. It's the responsibility of every citizen. That's why the Iowa Safety Congress says: "Your help is needed for safer Iowa!"

BARKEMA-DeGROOTE WEDDING SOLEMNIZED

(Britt News-Tribune)

Miss Evelyn Barkema, daughter of Hilko Barkema of Hampton, and Harlan E. DeGroote, U.S.N., son of Mr. and Mrs. Perrie DeGroote of Corwith, were united in marriage in the Meservey Reformed Church parsonage with the Rev. M. Kampman officiating at the double ring ceremony.

They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth VerHelst of Ventura.

The bride wore a moss green suit with brown accessories to match. Her corsage was of red roses and carnations.

Her matron-of-honor was attired in a green dress with accessories to match. Her corsage was of red and white carnations.

The bridegroom wore his navy uniform.

His attendant wore a blue suit with a white carnation boutonniere. A reception was held at the church parlors with the immediate families attending.

Miss Mayvis Kaduce, Mrs. Joe Kaduce of Meservey, Mrs. Fred Wolters of Belmond and Mrs. Luke Esk of Thornton served.

CROP Chairman Reports Drive Now Nearly $2,400

E. H. Olsen, Britt, Hancock County Christian Rural Overseas Program chairman, reports that a total of $2,323.83 has been contributed this far in the recent campaign now under way in Hancock Couny. Final reports have been received from the following precints:

Townships; Bingham, Crystal, Orthel, Britt, Boone, Erin, Magor and Amsterdam. Towns; Woden, Corwith and Kanawha.

Mr. Olsen advises that the deadline for the end of this campaign is past and kindly requests that all solicitors complete their task immediately and forward the final report to him or Ray Higdon, CROP treasurer at Britt. Individuals who have not been contacted and wish to help in this worthy cause are requested to send their donations direct to Mr. Olsen or Mr. Hidgon.

CIVIC CLUB WILL MEET NEXT WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 10TH

The Civic Club will meet at the Council rooms in the grade school building on Wednesday, January 10th at 7:30 o'clock. There is important business and all business men are requested to be present.

IOWANS CELEBRATE XMAS DAY IN SUNNY TEXAS

Christmas Day was celebrated at the J. M. Neuberger home in Brownsville, Texas by a group of Iowans. A turkey dinner was enjoyed by the following: Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Neuberger and Mrs. Wm. Ax and son, Irvin of Klemme; Mr. and Mrs. Gregg Arnold and Mary Jo of Mason City; Mr. and Mrs. Dave Henry and two children of Ventura; Mr. and Mrs. George Gann of Humbolt; Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Ax of Brownsville. Marcia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Neuberger was home from the Southwestern University, Georgetown.

Later in the afternoon the entire group took a picnic supper to a cave along the Rio Grande River where they built a big camp fire and made coffee. The fire added a cheery note to the gathering.

PRIMARY ROAD BONDS ARE PAID

Final payment on the last outstanding bonds authorized by 98 counties for primary road surfacing was made on November 1st. Only Louisa county followed a pay-as-you-go plan throughout.

The total amount of these primary road bonds, interest and principal of which was paid from the revenues derived from gasoline and motor vehicle taxes, was $118,186,000. Interest paid during the nearly 30 years amounted to $49,871,960.

Interest is what you PAY for the privilege of OWNING AND USING an article while you are paying for it. For a number of years these bonds were bearing only about 1½ percent interest so that money was costing us less than the portion we had already paid.

Of course, public policy calls for payment of such debts even where it might be good business to use the money for investment at a higher rate and thus realize a theoretical profit. So we are all glad that these obligations are all paid, and from now on we will very likly proceed on a current revenue basis.

DRAINAGE BENEFIT HEARING POSTPONED

The hearing on the assessment of benefits in Hancock county drainage district No. 153 was adjourned at Garner Wednesday, Jan. 3, to enable the board to survey the lands in the district.

Numerous objections to the assessment were filed and numerous objectors appeared in support of their objections to the assessment of benefits as reported by the assessment commission. L. W. Mahone of Clear Lake is the engineer on the project which is located near Crystal Lake.

IOWA TO GIVE 1,300 DRAFTEES FOR THE THIRD MONTH

Des Moines—With announcement of a national draft call of 80,000 for March, Iowa will be called on for the 3rd month in a row to furnish about 1,350 draftees for the army, state selective service headquarters.

The Iowa quota for January and February also is 1,350 and reports from over the state indicate the manpower squeeze is growing a little tighter. A few Iowa 19-year-olds will be inducted into the army in January and it is expected larger numbers of them will be needed for the February and March calls.

December Full

Col. Ralph A. Lancaster, the state director of selective service, said the December quota now has been filled.

This means that in the four months since inductions were resumed in September, Iowa has furnished about 3,500 men.

Taking the next 3 months into account, this state's quotas for the 1st 7 months total more than 7,500 men.

At least one county draft board—Wapello—is getting down to 20-year-olds to meet its calls. Indications there were that the present available registrants, under current regulations, would last through March.

Colonel Lancaster said he had no way of knowing whether this situation was typical over the state. He said further there is no way to anticipate here what national selective service would do if such a condition existed in the country.

Deferments Could Tighten

However, he explained, regulations could be changed on order of President Truman to tighten up deferments. He added that the draft boards are continually reviewing deferments.

He said he believes quite a large number of men can be obtained under present regulations by more closely reviewing past deferments. He indicated he felt the situation could be handled in this way for a while yet without a change in regulations.

Iowa veterans groups have urged that the names of men deferred and the reasons be made public.

As to induction of college students, he related: Many of them may be called up for physical examinations in the next month. But under present regulations none will be inducted until they finish this academic year next June.

BELMOND BUILDING WAS DESTROYED BY FIRE SAT.

Belmond—Fire early Saturday destroyed the billiard parlor owned by Andrew Koppernagel and the Ted Behrends shoe shop in the same building, and the apartments above on the Main street. Cleon Brady, Belmond fireman was overcome by smoke and had to be taken home.

The fire was discovered at 2:30 a. m. by Mrs. Ben Smith, a blind woman, who occupied one of the upstairs apartments. She aroused other occupants of the apartments and all escaped safely.

Firemen believe the fire started in the stairway between the pool hall and the shoe shop. They battled the blaze for 3½ hours before it was completely under control. Their efforts prevented it from spreading to other buildings. The Belmond department was assisted by firemen from Clarion.

Most of the contests of the shoe shop were saved, but the loss was practically complete for the pool hall and those living upstairs. The loss is partially covered by insurance.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

By DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

Jesus' New Year

SCRIPTURE: Mark 1:1-20. DEVOTIONAL READING: Isaiah 42: 1-9.

THERE is no room in this one thin column for a commentary on the whole Sunday school lesson each week. If the reader is interested, as it is hoped he will be, he will first study the Bible passages themselves, with whatever aids his own denomination furnishes him. The Sunday school teacher or Bible student who wishes to do really thorough work will need a Bible Dictionary and at least a one-volume commentary on the entire Bible. (Dummelow's [Macmillan Co.] and the Abingdon Commentary [Abingdon Press] are among the best of these.) As a background for the studies of the next three months, the student should read one or more good "Lives" of Christ. Write to your own church bookstore for suggestions.

When Is New Year's Day?

EVERY day is a New Year's Day for somebody. The legal holiday that goes by that name seldom comes at a real turning-point in any one's life.

The real occasion is when some momentous change occurs, so that after that day life never flows in its old channels. In this sense, a very important New Year's Day for Jesus was the day when he was baptized in the Jordan river.

Before that day he lived as a carpenter in one village; after that day, as a public man, indeed THE public Man of all times. The pattern of his life completely changed.

Decisions

NEW YEAR'S is a good time to review three things: your decisions, your life's work, and your friendships.

If you are off a decision or a course, get off it. Face it. Have you been making "unfortunate" decisions, choices you regret? Now is a good time to look into these and see why you have been taking the wrong road too often. Have you any bed-rock principle on which you base all your decisions? — Jesus' New Year was marked by certain decisions made once and for all.

To begin with, there was his baptism. One thing it surely meant: Jesus that day decided deliberately to be counted among those who need repentance rather than among those who think they don't. Not everybody came down to the Jordan to be baptized. Some came only to criticize. Jesus sided with the sinners, not the critics. It was a life-long decision. He became known as the "Friend of sinners."

There were also the further decisions in the wild country where he went through his temptations. Each temptation faced Jesus with a choice; each time his choice was on God's side.

Life's Work

THERE is a great thrill in getting out on the work one is going to do for the rest of one's natural life. Out of the harbor traffic on to the open sea! Jesus now becomes a preacher, and this was his work for the rest of his life. His carpentry has long since mouldered to dust; his preaching and teaching are immortal.

But suppose Jesus had been a slipshod, inefficient, careless carpenter? Would he have ever become a great teacher and preacher? It is quite true, the products of his shop have vanished, but there was something taking shape in that shop which did not vanish: his character.

Your choice about your future and final life's work may still be in the future; your best work may not yet have been begun. But the way you do what you have to do, today, will help set a pattern for every choice and every work in your life.

Friendships

NEXT after Jesus' life-work came his choice of friends. No doubt he had known Simon and the others before, and Mark simply records in his abrupt way the climax of a long story, in telling how Jesus "called" them.

We cannot imagine Jesus without his disciples. It is not exaggeration to say that even the Son of God would have been a failure, as a man, had he won no friends. There would have been no Christian religion if Jesus had had no friends.

Around New Year's time it is well to ask oneself the question: Am I as careful in selecting my friends as Jesus was in selecting his?

SO SORRY!

An officer of ancient Rome, called away to the wars, locked his beautiful wife in armor. Then he gave the key to his friend with the admonition:

"If I don't return in six months, use this key. To you, my dear friend, I entrust it."

He then galloped off to the war. About ten miles from home he saw a cloud of dust approaching and waited. His trusted friend, on horseback, galloped up and said:

"You gave me the wrong key."

Modern Methods

"Do you know," said the young student at the agricultural college to an old farmer, "your methods of cultivation are a hundred years behind the time?"

Looking around, he remarked, "Why, I'd be surprised if you made a dollar out of the oats in that field."

"So would I," smiled the farmer, "it's barley."

HIGHER EDUCATION

Mr. Biggs liked to know all about the employees who toiled in his vast business. One day he came upon a new young man who was dexterously counting out a large wad of the firm's cash.

"Where did you get your financial training, young man?" he asked.

"Yale," the young man answered.

Mr. Biggs was a staunch advocate of higher learning.

"Good," he said, "And what's your name?"

"Yackson," was the reply.

Misdirected Laugh

The boy's mother found him bawling in the basement.

"Willy, darling, what's the matter?"

"The hammer fell on Daddy's foot," sobbed Willy.

"Why, honey, that's nothing to cry about."

"I laughed!"

TOO MUCH TROUBLE

In one of his classic stories George Ade told of a thug who murdered his wife and then was put through five hours of grilling at the local police station. He finally exploded. "Gee whiz, Lieutenant, I'd never have killed her if I'd known there was gonna be all this red tape."

SENILE DELINQUENT

A group of prohibitionists looking for evidence of the advantage of total abstinence were told of an old man of 102 who had never touched a drop of liquor. They rushed to his home to get him up in bed and guiding his feeble hand along the dotted line, they heard a violent disturbance from the next room—furniture being broken, dishes being smashed, and the shuffling of feet.

"Good heavens, what's that?"

"Oh," whispered the old man as he sank exhaustedly into his pillow, "that's Pa, drunk again."

SLAP-STICK

NOT SURPRISED

A grave digger, absorbed in his thoughts, dug the grave so deep he couldn't get out.

Came nightfall and the evening chill, his predicament became more and more uncomfortable. He shouted for help and at last attracted the attention of a drunk.

"Get me out of here," he shouted. "I'm cold."

The drunk looked into the grave and finally distinguished the form of the uncomfortable grave digger.

"No wonder you're cold," he said. "You haven't got any dirt on you."

Eye for Business

Bernard Gimbel, the New York department store owner, has always been interested in Sunday schools. Once he addressed a group of youngsters on the lower East Side. After his talk he asked if there were any questions.

"Yes, sir," one little miss said promptly. "How much is that big French doll in your window?"

REMIND ME . . .

NEIGHBOR lamenting for the good old days. "What fun my wife and I used to have at the beach," he said between puffs on his corncob pipe. "First she buried me in the sand, then I buried her. One of these days I'll certainly have to go down and dig her up."

Burning Passion

Reggie: "Are you in love with Phyllis, Old Boy?"

Reggie: "Well, when she kissed me the other evening, my hair began to smoke, so I suppose I should say I am in love with her."

FARM "BOSS" AT 15

● A 15-year-old farm boy of Canandaigua, New York, is proving to his neighbors that the future of American agriculture is in safe hands. When his father died suddenly less than two years ago, young Dewitt E. Van Noy, then only 13, shouldered the job of running the family 65-acre farm and somehow finding time to keep up in his school work. With the encouragement and help of his mother he is building up the farm and installing new labor-saving electrical equipment. He won New York state honors in the Westinghouse-sponsored 4-H farm and home electric program. At left he works on an electric fence.

● As his reward in the electrical equipment program, Dewitt received an all-expense trip to Chicago where he attended the recent 4-H club contest along with 39 other state winners. In high school, he studies a wide variety of subjects. Above, with industrial arts instructor Floyd D. Butler, he works on a "return call" wiring hook-up which is complete with battery and doorbells.

● In Dewitt's farm electric program are many labor saving devices. He can complete the milking chore in about half an hour using the electric milking machine above. His chief hope for the farm's future is the dairy herd. At present he has seven cows producing. At left the youth gathers eggs which are sold to a local sanitarium as well as to neighbors. The flock numbers 41 hens.

● After dinner, darkness outside doesn't end the work day. As if school didn't require homework, Dewitt sometimes helps his mother wrestle with the farm's necessary bookkeeping. Most of this job, of course, is handled by Mrs. Van Noy who was elected town clerk this year. In this position she issues licenses to hunt, fish and get married, files mortgages, acts as secretary of the town board and receives a modest salary for same which helps to make ends meet.

HOGMANAY

St. Andrews' Day Touches off Scots' New Year Doings

The celebration of St. Andrew's Day touches off a series of Scottish celebrations that reach their peak at New Year (Hogmanay) and continue with little respite to Burns's Day on the 25th of January

Few national festivals occasion more uninhibited gusto over more of the world's face From Houston to Hong Kong, Scots of all vintages dream of haggic, heather, highlands and the skirl of bagpipes Indeed, they spare no effort to make the dream come true. The Illinois St. Andrew's Society, for instance, have been known to "fly-in" their supply of haggis and heather direct from Scotland, and to have "piped it" all the way from the airport to the dinner table.

One of the most engaging customs of Hogmanay is the ancient rite of "first-shooting" in the "wee sma' hours" of New Year's morning. A "First-foot" is literally the first person outside the family, to cross the threshold of the home after the clock has ushered the Old Year into history. For the best of portents, the visitor, if a man, should be dark and handsome; if a woman, she must be fair. In either case, the visitor should carry "handsel," which may be anything from an orange to a bottle of whiskey. You don't have to ask a Scot his preference, but an empty-handed "first-foot" will bring poverty and privation, so even an orange is worthwhile.

Assuming that the "handsel" is in liquid form, the head of the house takes the first drink and then passes the bottle round the family. Thus fortified, all attack the traditional Hogmanay fare; round shortbread cake nipped round the edges to simulate the sun (the Druids were responsible for this); and Black Bun, a superior sort of mince pie containing fruits, almonds, spices and brandy.

What happens after this is your own responsibility, but the Scots themselves ward off indigestion with music and dancing (with a capital D). Sometimes "first-footers" appear as "guisards" (a mummer or a strolling p... and the greater the number of first-footers," the more honored is the household. So nobody need be shy.

Those "not to the tartan born" may wonder why the Scots lay such stress on the New Year, rather than Christmas. To find the answer you have to flick back a page or two of history. The Vikings probably started the Yuletide festivities and the Christian reformers merely took it over and invested it with the dignity of the Feast of the Nativity.

HANDS ON THE TIME . . . Cecilia Bialy is lighting the old year out and the New Year in and making sure the hands of the clock get safely to midnight at the Old Sturbridge Village museum and crafts center in Sturbridge, Mass. The clock collection at the museum is one of the largest in the country.

New Year, 452 B.C.

Celebration of New Year's Day on January 1 began in Rome in 452 B.C. and therefore, contrary to logical reasoning, had nothing whatsoever to do with the birth of Christ.

The Julian calendar, effective by decree of Caesar in 46 B.C., was adjusted to the Christian era in 516 A.D. by Dionysius who meant to begin the era from the year of Christ's birth.

However, an error in chronology figured the event four years later than it actually occurred. Therefore, the latter half of the 20th century should have begun four years before 1950, and 1950 should have been 1954, really!

Gayest Day in Canada Is the 'Jour de l'An'

The famous "Jour de l'An"—New Year's day—is probably the gayest day in the calendar of the French-Canadian. That is the time of family re-unions and of exchanging of gifts.

It is a religious celebration also, with the city churches conducting midnight mass on New Year's eve, but in the rural areas there are no church services to celebrate the arrival of another year.

NEW YEAR FLING . . . Typical of Scotland's genius for uninhibited fun is this Highland dancer performing a traditional Scottish reel. The tartan kilt, velvet jacket and lace ruffles add color and grace to the Scottish Hogmanay celebrations. Hogmanay, incidentally, is the Scots' name for New Year's.

New Year Calls Were All the Rage In U.S. in 1900

The custom of making short calls on New Years' Day was in full swing in the United States around the turn of the century.

Newspapers carried columns of 'at home' notices specifying the hours during which visitors would be received. Hosts and hostesses, having duly received, closed their open house to become guests at somebody else's.

'Open House' on New Year's Day was introduced into America by the Dutch who settled in New Amsterdam. Friends were accustomed to dropping in to offer the compliments of the day and refreshments centered around home-made snacks, plus the host's favorite concoction of punch.

The custom grew with the country, finally attaining the newspaper announcement stage, with its eventual time-table and scurrying from one 'open house' to another. It was inevitable that some guests, punch [illegible] succession of nine or ten rassed their tenth [illegible] sometimes embar-ess; and receptions sometimes 'crashed' by total strangers tempted by the possibility of free punch,

Perhaps it is just as well that the publicly announced New Year reception is no longer a la mode. If only a small percentage of city dwellers inserted 'at home' notices in their favorite metropolitan newspapers, what colossal editions would result, what headaches for everybody, from the swamped linotype operators to the staggering newsboys.

Ten Days Were Killed In Calendar Change

Many things have been suppressed in this world, but the strangest was act of Pope Gregory III when he suppressed 10 days in 1852 by ordering that October 5 be called October 15.

It came about like this. January 1 was designated to be New Year's day when Julius Caesar established the Julian calendar in 46 B.C.. However, the calendar year thus established was 11 minutes longer than the astronomical year.

For this reason the Pope ordered the 10 days suppressed.

England and its colonies, however, did not adopt the Julian calendar until 1752. For almost three centuries New Year's was celebrated twice every year—both times on January I.

But New Year's isn't always New Year's day even in these modern times. The actual date varies among the Egyptians, Chinese, Jews, Romans and Mohammedans from September 6 to March 1.

Danes Eat Doughnuts, Toss Broken Crockery

What the Wassail is to Scotland on New Year's Eve, coffee and doughnuts are to Denmark.

The Danes also observe an unique crockery tossing tradition in connection with their doughnuts and coffee. Every piece of crockery which comes to grief during the year is saved for tossing against the doors of friends and neighbors on New Year's Eve in anticipation of being invited in for doughnuts and coffee.

The old calendar sign for the winter solstice was a circle with a dot in the center, representing the wheel of the sun. Could it be that the doughnut has come to represent the circle and the dot—well, there is a hole in the doughnut!

American New Year

New Year's day has long been celebrated enthusiastically in the United States, and from colonial times to the present it has been a day of great significance. The custom of visiting friends and relatives is one which has survived until the present. In the gay 90's this visiting back and forth attained a tremendous vogue and the young blades looked forward to it with keen anticipation.

Majority Rules

Stepping out between the acts at the first production of one of his plays, Bernard Shaw said to the audience:

"What do you think of it?"

This startled everybody for the time being, but presently a man in the pit assembled his scattered wits and cried:

"Rotten!"

Shaw made a curtsey and melted the house with one of his Irish smiles.

"My friend," he said, shrugging his shoulders and indicating the crowd in front, "I quite agree with you, but what are we two against so many?"

Mission: Pots and Pans—

SELECTING KITCHENWARE

This new year will mean many things to Iowa families. From sunrise to noontime to evening story hour for the toddler, it will mean new demands on time and energy, and an increased need for family operation and planning.

Small pots, big pots, deep pans, shallow pans. And every time you buy them you're confronted with a wide choice of materials. Into your mind pops a question mark as to which is better for what, and why.

First, says Louise Peet, head of the Household Equipment Department at Iowa State College, let's explode the propaganda that cooking in aluminum is dangerous. After countless experiments there's not a shred of evidence to support this theory. Just to disprove the story of one propagandist that tomatoes cooked in aluminumware and left to stand overnight are poisonous, Dr. Peet conducted a little experiment of her own. She took one white rat and started his day with a dish of these "poisonous" tomatoes" tomatoes for 3 weeks. You should have seen his little nose wiggle in anticipation of those [illegible] every morning. The end of 3 weeks he had tripled his weight!

Not Harmful

There isn't one fact to back the belief that the body's intake of aluminum is harmful. Aluminum pans aren't the only source of aluminum absorption either. The double-action baking powder contains sodium aluminum sulfate. Gum and candy often come packaged in aluminum foil, and remmeber that you have wrapped in aluminum foil many of the meats stored in your freezer.

Both aluminum and copper are excellent conductors of heat, and aluminum is easily cleaned. Copper, difficult to keep bright and shiny, is used mostly as an undercoating for less conductive metals. In choosing aluminum utensils, remember that medium or heavy guage is more durable and will resist warping. A lighter guage is satisfactory for ovenware.

Stainless steel is practically indestructible. However, it is wise to buy these utensils with a copper or aluminum bottom, as stainless steel alone heats unevenly and can be used only over a low heat. Vigorous cleaning and scouring cannot hurt it.

Tinware, long used for cookie, cake and pie tins, is steel or iron coated with tin. Be careful to buy a good grade, the the less expensive ware frequently has a thinner tin coating with pinpoint holes that leave the base open to rust.

Enameled Ware

Here are a few points to jot down about enameled ware. The shining coating on steel utensils is easy to clean and resistant to stains. This ware is particularly good for milk and acid foods such as puddings and pie fillings. Treat it as you would glass—avoid harsh cleaners and store carefully.

Popular for ovenware and coffee makers, glass is now appearing in saucepans and double boilers. The transparency of this heat-resistant glass gives it a unique advantage in range-top use. Glazed pottery is good for casseroles and custard cups. Like glass, it holds heat well and makes a good serving dish.

Cast iron is an old favorite for fry pans and Dutch ovens. It heats slowly and evenly and improves with use. It should be washed and dried thoroughly after each use. Cast aluminum makes a good fry pan. Easier to lift and also good are fry pans of heavy guage sheet aluminum, or stainless steel with a heat-distributing surface of copper or aluminum.

TWO-CYCLE ENGINE WILL BURN LEADED GASOLINE

Most two-cycle engine burn either leaded or unleaded gasoline, contrary to the belief of many farmers who refuse to burn leaded gasoline in this type of engine.

Two-cycle engines generally have a low compression ratio which permits the burning of either type, says Iowa State College extension agricultural engineer D. O. Hull. If an unleaded gasoline is available, he suggests using it in preference to the leaded—not because leaded gasoline harms the engine but because lead ash tends to corrode spark plugs and foul exhaust ports.

More important than the type of gasoline used, Hull says, is that oil be mixed properly with the fuel. He recommends regular type motor oils which do not contain special additives. About a half-pint of oil very thoroughly mixed with each gallon of gasoline is usually satisfactory. SAE 20 or 20W will give the best results in two-cycle air-cooled engines. For larger engines and outboard motors it's common to recommend SAE 30 or 40 motor oil.

Heavy duty and premium type lubricating oils should not be used in two-cycle engine. These oils tend to increase spark plug fouling, Hull says.

Fuel tanks on two-cycle engines should be drained when the engines are not in use for a long period. Otherwise residues will form in the tank. These will clog mixing valves or the carburetor, and may even stick the rings in the engine. A 50-50 mixture of alcohol and benzol will clean residues from the tank, Hull says.

GIVE WAYS FOR FEEDER TO SAVE TIME, LABOR

Iowa beef cattle feeders can save themselves time and make their work a lot easier by following a few labor-saving practices, says Rex Beresford, extension beef specialist at Iowa State College.

He points out that cattle feeding operations vary greatly in volume from farm to farm, but labor saving and efficiency in feeding operations is important for all of them.

The first step in getting the cattle feeding operations on a time-and-labor-saving basis is to arrange the feed storage, shelter, lots and gates in a convenient manner.
convenient manner.

One of the greatest labor savers is the presence of an adequate, convenient, automatic and dependable water supply. Water comes ahead of feed in importance and must be before the cattle at all times.

Hauling rather than carrying feed will save a lot of work. If the number of cattle being fed is small, the feed wagon may serve as a temporary storage bin in the yard. This will eliminate the necessity of hauling feed every day. These wagons should be filled directly from the silo, bins or place of hay storage to save handling.

If cattle are on full feed, Beresford says the large-capcity self-feeders will permit the handling of feed in full loads with a minimum of labor.

Operators feeding a lot of cattle can usually make good and profitable use of elevating, conveying and processing equipment. However, the overhead cost of mechanization makes this impractical for the small feeder.

Mr. And Mrs. Fred Etchen Had Party For Virgil Schlawin

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Etchen entertained at an oyster supper followed by playing 500 in honor of Virgil Schlawin who enlisted in the Air Forces and will leave for a camp in Texas January 4.

High scores in 500 were won by Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Lau and second high by Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Schlawin. Bobby Schlawin won high in Bunco.

Those who attended the party were Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Schlawin and Virgil; Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Schlawin and family; Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Lau and Cozette; Mrs. Edna Thada; Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Schlawin; Mrs. Winnie Smith and Avery Bier.

Virgil was presented with a purse of money and a number of gifts which will be useful in camp. He leaves with some other Hayfield boys who enlisted in the Air Force.

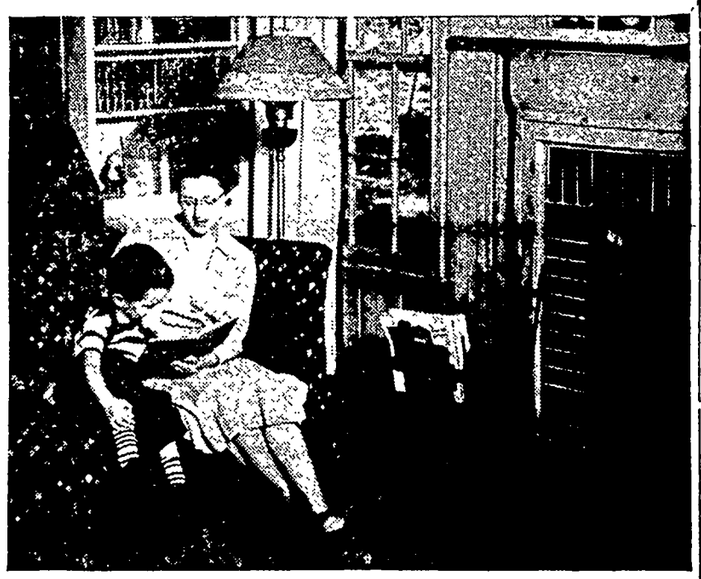
Homemakers Look Ahead—

THE CHALLENGE OF 1951



The amazing range of materials used for cooking utensils on the counters of Iowa hardware stores makes us wonder which type will best suit our needs. No one metal is best for all utensils, so let's go on a reconnaissance mission of kithenware.

Women have a big job ahead of them in 1951. It's going to be a year when a family draws more closely together, hoping to find there the peace and stability to offset new drains on its energy and emotions.

Labor shortage and stepped up production on Iowa farms will leave the homemaker less time to spend on her housework and her family. It is certainly a year that will bring tensions and challenge. Family dollars will have to be juggled to try to keep up with rising prices. Our buying power will be curbed by high taxes and rising prices, so we'll find it necessary to do a little rethinking on what we need and what we can get along without.

Personal Management

What is the key to coping with all these problems and piloting the family craft through dangerous waters? Louise Rosenfeld, head of home economics extension work at Iowa State College, tells us the most important aid to a homemaker now will be her own emotional stability.

A wife and mother who has mastered the art of personal management is in a much better position to help out the rest of the family and keep things running smoothly. Enough rest, nourishing food, keeping your mind off yourself as much as possible—all these are essentials of maintaining emotional and physical stability. If ye're healthy and have a good mental attitude in general, it's a good deal easier to meet the crisis that come up and to withstand the strain of everyday living in a period of emergency and uncertainty.

Families who came through the year of World War II the best seem to be the ones who played up the values of family cooperation in both work and play. And one of the homemaker's biggest jobs is to see that work is allocated so that no member of the family has so much to do that it works a hardship on him. There are limits to personal stamina. Reorganizing these limits and guarding the family health are important.

Taking care of what we have, whether it be clothes, the family car or the washing machine, will keep down our family spending and help us meet the higher taxes and rising prices.

Job Of Homemaking

What it all comes down to, says Miss Rosenfeld, is that strong families make for a strong country. And these families revolve so closely today around the wife and mother that she has a tremendous job of homemaking ahead of her. The days are gone when the sign of a good homemaker is in the pie she bakes or in the whiteness of the clothes drying on the line. Now with the progress of science and research into this whole business of family relationship and welfare, she has become much more than the housekeeper and the provider. She is also the health guardian, the buying expert, and an organizer of human and material resources.

The new year is going to put fresh emphasis on the American family. It will test the mettle of family closeness and cooperation and of the homemaker herself, in a time of change and heartache and plain hard work.

BIG DAIRY COWS HEAVIEST MILKERS

Must Be Well Fed As Heifers To Grow Out

Farmers like to have a bucket full of milk when they finish milking a cow. Cows that fill pails pay for their keep and bring in big milk or cream checks. But some cows never have a chance to produce at their inherited capacity because they had to rough the winter when they were heifers and didn't grow out.

Iowa State College extension dairy husbandman Robert Fincham says that results of studies on the correlation between a dairy cow's weight and yearly production show some interesting results. These tests indicate that big cows produce on an average more milk than small ones.

Cite New York Study

Out of nearly 10,000 dairy cows tested in dairy herd improvement associations in New York, records from each breed were separated into groups that were made up of cows differing in live weight by about 100 lbs. Fincham says. An average yearly increase of about 20 pounds of butterfat was noted for every 100 pounds increase in live weight, showing that it's the big cows in a breed that usually produce the most milk.

Hay, Silage Good

The only way to raise big cows is to grow out the heifers to full, normal size, Fincham remarks. This takes good management and the proper feed with plenty of nutrients, minerals and vitamins. Good legume hay and corn silage is the ideal combination in the winter ration, he says.

Farmers who have only legume hay should feed some oats and possibly a little corn with it. If corn silage is the only feed available, heifers will require some protein concentrate. The main thing is to keep heifers in a thrifty growing condition, Fincham says. This will not only make bigger heifers for maximum milk production, but they will also have an easier time at calving.

COPPER BANNED IN 300 ITEMS BY GOP.

Washington — The government Saturday prohibited nonessential use of copper in more than 300 civilian products, effective March 1st.

The banned uses range from pots and pans, building hardware, furniture and electrical appliances to jewelry, toys, cocktail shakers and paper clips.

The order was issued by the national production authority to conserve copper for "defense and defense-supporting needs," said William H. Harrison, the NPA administrator.

Throughout the list—except in the case of such items as toys and other non-essentials—copper will be permitted where it serves a functional purpose, as in working parts, and where no practical substitute is available.

But the NPA action completely eliminates copper from "bright work" and trim on automobiles, as well as in auto wheel disks, defrosters and heaters, gas tank caps, mirrors and brackets.

ORDER INSECTICIDES NOW FOR SUMMER USE

It looks now as if there'll be a shortage of DDT and other insecticides next summer when they're needed the most. That is why it's a good idea for farmers to order and take delivery on their supplies now.

Increased demand and shortages due to the present international situation will help contribute to a short supply, according to Harold Gunderson, extension entomologist at Iowa State College. Prolonged strikes in the chlorine industry on which the production of the new insecticides is based will be another factor involved.

Manufacturers also are faced with problems of storage and transportation. They cannot put out a product if they have no place to put it.

Gunderson urges all farmers who can anticipate their needs to order their insecticides now. It'll help everybody, including the manufacturer, distributor and dealer, and the farmer will be sure to have the insecticides he wants.

The entomologist points out that a farmer may not get the kinds and amounts he wants if he waits until the day he is ready to use them to put in his order.

AROUND IOWA

She's 109

At Exira, Mrs. Mary Kilworth has recently observed her 109th birthday. Friends believe she is the oldest living resident of Iowa.

Conscious

It was a slightly merrier Christmas in the Tate home at Spencer. After 22 days in a coma following the accident which took the life of his father, the late Hugh Tate, nine year old Hugh Jr., regained consciousness a week before Christmas.

54th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Neer of Lacona observed their 54th wedding anniversary recently. They were married in 1896 and have lived all of their married life in Warren County, with the exception of four years spent in Lucas county.

Arrested

When Clarence Skelly of Scranton saw some one robbing a country mail box near Jefferson recently, he reported it to a highway patrolman and the men were in custody with a few minutes.

SUPPLY SHORT

DDT is going to be short. We are taking orders now for DOW CHEMICAL.

Farmers report as much as 20 bushels per acre increase in yield in 1950 using DOW DDT for borer spray.

OUR ASSESSMENT POLICY

The time (Jan. 1, 1951) for again listing property for the 1915 personal property assessment has arrived. We expect to follow substantially the same procedure as last year.

Blanks will be mailed to all rural taxpayers and distributed to urban taxpayers. Field Assessors will call on all business establishments and on any rural taxpayers demanding this service.

In order to expedite the completion of the listing of property we solicit the full cooperation of all taxpayers. List actual figures, as shown by your books, income tax and sales tax reports.

It is our desire to be absolutely fair and equitable in our assessment values and the more information we have, the better we can do the job.

In order to have uniformity it is necessary for us to have comparitive figures on various types of business.

Dog license applications should be made with the County Auditor. The fee is $1.50 for males and $4.00 for females, except in towns having their own license where the fee is $1.00 for males and $3.00 for females.

Applications for Homestead Tax Credit must be made with assessor until May 1st and with the County Auditor after May 1st and until July 1st.

In making the assessment we are merely your servant and suggestions on the improvement of service will be appreciated. Our aim is to do the job in the most efficient and economical manner with the most possible convenience to both the taxpayer and the Assessor's office.

Social and Economic Problems A Part of UCPA's Big Battle

This is the second of two articles on the United Cerebral Palsy Associations, Inc., and the work to which the organization is dedicated.

Last week's article gave a short history of UCPA, the year-old organization that is doing everything in its power to help palsy stricken children. This article deals more with social and economic background of the problem.

The cause of cerebral palsy is unique in that it is a crippler which strikes with mathematical ruthlessness, here, then there, at the very inception of life. Sometimes its cruel hand has done its damage before birth.

Ten thousand times each year the same scene occurs, tragic because when the mother and father discover their baby is palsied there is so little in the way of help. Sometimes they know it immediately, but in other cases it may be months before they learn their child has suffered a brain injury that affects speech or use of arms, legs or head.

Since it is not a disease, we do not need to worry about a germ, microbe or virus. But the cold statistics of cerebral palsy strike fear into the hearts of parents awaiting the birth of a child. They know that fate is methodically counting off the babies, and that each year seven out of each 100,000 of total population will be cerebral palsied It could be theirs—or yours—regardless of all precautions exercised or all the care that parents or the best physicians can provide.

The disability of cerebral palsy also is found at the opposite end of the life span. Whatever the cause, the adults who suffer a cerebral hemorrhage (stroke) require care and treatment common to young suffers of cerebral palsy. Estimates vary as to the number of adults who are affected, but it is untold hundreds of thousands.

UNTIL COMPARATIVELY recent years, the human race all over the world considered itself helpless to fight this great unknown malady. If a child were so affected, the thing to do was to hide it in the back rooms. The heartache and the heartbreak of parents has sometimes been hidden, but cerebral palsy has left a trail of needless social devastation: broken home, parents often accusing each other, the live of other children and relatives seriously affected, as fate continued droning off the numbers.

Vicious as has been the effect on the relatives, it doesn't compare with the injustice to the sufferers. Our nation, priding itself on living in an enlightened age, continues to treat many of these injured as half-wits, idiots or feebleminded, when tests show that 77 out of 100 have average or superior intelligence. That makes as much sense as giving such consideration to a person who was hit by an automobile.

An idea of the huge economic waste may be obtained by simple multiplication. The most conservative estimate of children born with cerebral palsy in the United States is 200,000. Merely to give them custodial care costs an average of $500 a year. They have a normal life expectancy Taking an average of 60 years, each child costs $30,000 for a lifetime merely vegetating his years away. For the 200,000 children, the cost reaches the staggering total of $6,000,000,000.

The actual bill is much more, because there are 10,000 new babies born with cerebral palsy each year, and several million adults who are palsied in later years of their lives.

But this is only part of the cost. The rest is in heartbreak and broken homes. These are the problems of the United Cerebral Palsy Associations, Inc.

Star Dust
STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

GERALDINE BROOKS' stage career began when she was in her 'teens, and was pretty impressive—she toured in Shakespearian productions for the Theatre Guild—before Hollywood grabbed her and glamorized her. You saw her in "Possessed" and "The Reckless Moment", among other pictures But her big thrill came when she was taken to Italy to make "Volcano", with the famous Anna Magnani, which will be released by Eagle Lion. They worked on a barren island, next to the one where "Stromboli" was being made. There was no water but the sea, only the peasants' food, but Geraldine says that she loved every minute of it.

"Theatre Guild on the Air" will continue, this new year, to present outstanding theatrical successes as magnificently as in the past. The best casts, the best productions, are insisted on. For instance, in "Carousel" Cornel Wilde and Patrice Munsel, of the Metropolitan, co-starred, and John Baker, also of the Met, had the male vocal lead.

Allene Roberts does a fine job as the blind girl in "Union Station", playing a heavy emotional role. Her career began when, at a tender age, she was named America's "Most Charming Child" in a big newspaper competition.

Ruth Roman stormed Alfred Hitchcock's office five years ago, when he was casting "Spellbound" to ask for a part, and he turned her down; said she wasn't the type. But she was exactly right for his new picture, "Strangers on a Train."

THE FICTION CORNER
CHANGE OF PACE

By Willard Olvan Persing

"I don't care if you have to buy a sawmill to get that lumber, just see that it gets there today!"

3-Minute Fiction

Mike Clanahan slammed the phone back on its cradle, mumbling to himself about young pups who quit trying as soon as they'd heard 'No' mentioned a time or two.

The slender, black-haired girl, sitting on the corner of his desk, grinned at him. "Pops, if everyone bulled their way through like you do, there'd be quite a crop of cracked heads."

As he looked up at his daughter, Mike's face softened into a smile. "Something on your mind, Cathy?"

"Yes, but I think this job is a little too delicate for your methods." She stared out the window for a moment before continuing.

"James refuses to marry me," she said. "Now, he's decided that it's better if we don't even see each other any more."

"Refuses to marry you!" The windows rattled as Mike came up out of his chair. "Why I'll—"

Cathy's frown put Mike back into his chair. "That's what I mean about your methods. I'd like to have enough of him left to carry me over the threshold."

"Why won't he marry you?"

"Rich girl, poor boy. He says he won't have it appear that he married me for my money."

Mike stared thoughtfully at her. "You really love him, don't you?"

Cathy nodded her head.

"All you need," Mike said as he leaned back and stared at the ceiling, "is just a diamond-studded, fourteen-carat miracle."

"That's a thought to cheer a girl's heart," Cathy gave her father a wry glance. "That is, if you have an extra miracle you won't be needing for a few days."

"Pops, please don't try anything," Cathy said. "Your tactics are about as subtle as those of an old billy goat."

MIKE CLOSED HIS eyes and studied a moment. "I could arrange for a high-salaried job to fall his way."

"Pops, please don't try anything like that. If he found that we had a hand in it, he would probably leave town. Your tactics are about as subtle as those of an old billy goat."

"All right, so I'm not in the habit of pussy-footing around," growled Mike. "What are you going to do?"

"Same as I have been doing Argue some more and try to wear him down."

"That settles that." Mike stood up and absently walked over to get his hat and coat. "You want me to drop you off at home? I've got to run over to the hospital.'

"The hospital?"

"Yes, old Zeke, the fellow who owns the newsstand down on the corner, thinks he's going to die, and I thought some company might cheer him up."

Cathy frowned "He must be the one who has been giving me some competition. James spends two or three nights a week, playing chess and arguing politics with some old fellow named Zeke."

Mike stopped and stared at Cathy. "Come on," he said hurriedly, "if I don't get a move on, visiting hours will be over before I get there."

The windows were still rattling from Mike's conversation when he slammed the phone back into its cradle and glanced up at the young woman who was struggling to keep the exasperated expression on her face.

"Mike Clanahan, I thought you were asked to keep your strong-arm tactics out of my love affair."

Mike grinned up at her. "What do you mean?"

"You know very well what I mean." Cathy's stern expression broke into a happy laugh. She came around the desk and kissed him on the forehead.

"But I still don't know—"

"Don't play innocent with me Having Zeke leave everything to James was a stroke of genius. But what I want to know is how you managed to get forty-seven thousand dollars in old bills hidden in Zeke's room."

"Did it work?'

Cathy held her left hand up in front of Mike's face. A diamond on the third finger twinkled merrily at him.

It Takes a Youngster to Tell Rose About Show Business

By BILLY ROSE

One of the actors I recently interviewed for my television show was a young fellow named Bill Ferguson.

"Haven't I seen you in something?" I asked.

"If you didn't blink," said the youngster, "you might have noticed me in the chorus of 'South Pacific.'"

"Still with the show?"

"No, I left it a few months ago to try my luck at television."

"Show business is a tough racket," I oracled.

"I haven't found it so," said Bill. "Matter of fact, ever since I got to town it's been one good break after another. Incidentally, your friend, Dick Rodgers, was responsible for the first one."

Billy Rose

"What did Richard do for you?" I asked.

"Well," said the youngster, "it started when Mr. Rodgers and Mr. Hammerstein were holding auditions for the chorus and bit parts in 'South Pacific.' My wife—her stage name is Evelyn Colby—also does some singing and dancing, so we tried out for the show together. Only one of us, however, got picked—Evelyn."

"DOESN'T SOUND like too good a beginning."

"It wasn't," said Bill, "but we figured there wasn't any point moping about it—the important thing was not to be separated. So when the show went up to New Haven to break in, I went along with it and, as luck would have it, I landed a job as waiter in Casey's Chop House—the place on College Street across from the Shubert Theatre.

"It was the best thing that could have happened," the youngster went on, "because a couple of days before the opening who should come in and plunk himself down at one of my tables but Mr. Rodgers.

"He recognized me, and when he quizzed me about what I was doing in a waiter's get-up, I told him I had taken the job so as to be near my wife. The story seemed to tickle him, and when he went back to the theatre I understand he held up a rehearsal to repeat it to Oscar Hammerstein and Josh Logan, the director. An hour later the three of them came into the chop house looking for me, and the next morning I was on the stage of the Shubert learning the lyrics of 'There Is Nothing Like A Dame.'"

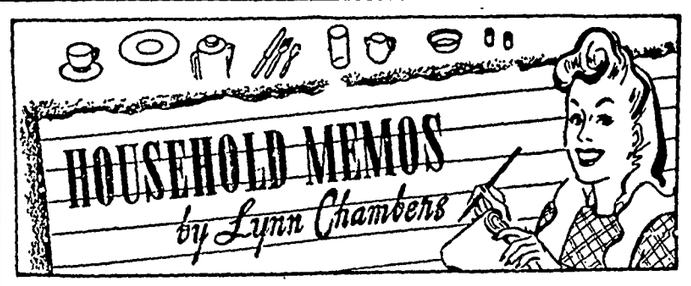
"CUTE STORY," I said.

"There's more to it," said Bill. "A columnist heard about what happened and wrote it up, and as a result I got a couple of television nibbles. Then the nicest thing of all happened. One night Margaret Truman came backstage, and after congratulating Pinza and Mary Martin she asked for the Bill Ferguson she had read about. You see, we went to the same high school in Independence, Missouri, and broke into the singing business together in the choir of the Baptist Church."

"Did your wife get to meet the President's daughter?"

"Not that evening," said the youngster, "but she did a few days later when Miss Truman came around to our apartment to see the new baby."

"It's been nice talking to you," I said, "but I'm afraid I can't use you on next week's show—I'm looking for someone to play a sad, miserable little man."



Welcome the New Year With a Festive Party, In an Informal Style

WHETHER YOU PLAN to await the New Year or to hold open house on the first day of the year, an informal type party is best. Either occasion will last for several hours, and you'll want to have the kind of food that can be set on the table for eating and nibbling when it's convenient.

Cold succulent slices of turkey, roast beef or ham are ideal for the main platter. Serve with this tossed or molded salad, assorted relishes, bread and rolls.

The dessert can take the form of a festive, creamy punch to be served in low mugs or punch cups with stick cinnamon stirrers, sugar cookies, candies and assorted, salted nuts.

Make your preparations in advance since nothing needs cooking just before serving. You'll appreciate the last minute ease of a party meal thus managed.

Red Cabbage Salad
(Serves 8)

- 3 cups shredded red cabbage
- 1 cup diced celery
- 3 tablespoons oil
- 4 tablespoons minced parsley
- ¼ cup minced watercress
- 3 tablespoons tomato juice
- 2 tablespoons minced onion
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper

Cover cabbage with water for 1 hour. Drain and add celery. Mix oil, parsley, watercress, tomato juice, minced onion, salt, and pepper together thoroughly and pour over cabbage and celery. Mix well, chill and serve.

Frozen Pineapple Salad
(Serves 8)

- 2 cups diced pineapple
- 24 cherries, quartered
- 24 marshmallows, cut into sixths
- 8 tablespoons confectioners' sugar
- 6 ounces cream cheese
- ½ cup salad dressing
- ⅔ cup cream, whipped
- 2 tablespoons vanilla

Combine pineapple, cherries, marshmallows, and confectioners' sugar. Blend well. Thin cream cheese with salad dressing. Mix with fruit. Fold whipped cream and vanilla into fruit mixture. Pour into refrigerator tray and freeze at coldest temperature just until cream mixture is firm. Unmold and serve with additional salad dressing or whipped cream. Garnish with pineapple wedges and cherries.

Raisin-Bran Muffins
(Makes 9 medium muffins)

- 1 cup ready-to-eat bran
- ⅔ cup milk
- 1 cup sifted flour
- 2½ teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ cup sugar or molasses
- 1 egg
- 2 tablespoons soft shortening
- ½ cup seedless raisins

Combine bran and milk in mixing bowl. Sift together flour, baking powder and salt; add to soaked bran with sugar or molasses, egg, shortening and raisins. Stir only until combined. Fill greased muffin pans ⅔ full. Bake in pre-heated moderately hot oven (400°) about 25 minutes.

There'll be plenty of good nibbling about if you have an assortment of easily made candies including honey fudge, cream pralines and coffee creams on your buffet table.

LYNN SAYS:
Seasonings are Essential To Glamorizing Foods

Rolls for the holidays can be made prettier if you frost them while still warm with confectioners' sugar icing and dot with candied fruits.

Toasted cheese sandwiches are a favorite that will be more so if you make them with cheese plus a deviled ham spread.

Have you tried dusting peeled sliced apples and putting them between thin pork chops as a stuffing? Very good flavor!

An exciting way to greet the New Year consists of serving this creamy, nourishing punch made with milk, ice cream and subtle seasonings of cinnamon, nutmeg and orange rind. Cinnamon sticks make attractive stirrers for the rich punch.

Creamy Spiced Milk Punch
(Serves 10 to 12)

- 1 quart milk
- 2 teaspoons cinnamon
- 1 teaspoon nutmeg
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- 1 quart vanilla ice cream
- ½ pint whipping cream
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 4 tablespoons grated orange rind

Pour milk into cold punch bowl; mix in seasonings. Add ½ of the ice cream, stirring until partially melted. Whip cream until stiff and fold in vanilla. Place remaining ice cream, and whipped cream on top of spiced milk. Sprinkle with grated orange rind. Serve in mugs with stick cinnamon stirrers.

Cream Pralines
(Makes 20 patties, 2½ inches in diameter)

- 1 cup brown sugar, firmly packed
- 1 cup granulated sugar
- 2 cups pecans (¼ pound)
- ½ cup evaporated milk

Mix all ingredients thoroughly in heavy saucepan. Cook over medium heat to soft ball stage (236°), stirring constantly. Cool slightly, then beat until mixture begins to thicken. Drop candy rapidly from a tablespoon onto waxed paper or a buttered sheet to form patties. If candy becomes too stiff at the last to drop into smooth patties, stir in a little hot water.

(Makes 1¼ pounds)

- 1 square unsweetened chocolate (1 ounce)
- 2 cups granulated sugar
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- 1 cup evaporated milk
- ¼ cup honey
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1 cup nuts

Melt chocolate over hot water in the saucepan in which candy is to be cooked. Add sugar, salt and milk, and cook over medium heat 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Add honey. Continue cooking over medium heat to soft ball stage (236°), stirring all the while. Cool. Add vanilla. Beat until candy begins to stiffen. Add nuts and beat until crystalline. Turn into buttered pan Mark in squares.

(Makes 1 pound)

- ⅓ cup strong coffee
- 2 cups granulated sugar
- ⅓ cup evaporated milk
- 2 tablespoons butter

Mix coffee, sugar and milk in heavy saucepan. Cook slowly, stirring constantly, until sugar is dissolved. Then cook over medium heat to soft ball stage (236°), stirring all the while. Cool. Add butter and beat until crystalline. Turn onto a buttered board or marble slab and knead until smooth. Press into a buttered pan and cut into squares. Note: Strong coffee can be made quickly by dissolving 1 teaspoon soluble coffee in ⅓ cup boiling water.

Quick supper can be made from chicken livers sauteed with chopped onion and green pepper. Add soured cream and heat ever so slowly so the cream won't curdle.

Plain gelatin plus fruit is a good base for a salad, but it's even more flavorful if you use ginger ale in place of water for the gelatin mixture.

Try wrapping oysters in bacon and heating them in tomato soup which has been seasoned with green pepper and a dash of tabasco sauce. Serve on a bed of fluffy rice.

Use Chewing-Gum Laxative—
REMOVES WASTE... NOT GOOD FOOD

● When you can't sleep—feel just awful because you need a laxative—do as MILLIONS do—chew FEEN-A-MINT.

FEEN-A-MINT is wonderfully different! Doctors say many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon—right in the stomach. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy—you feel weak, worn out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes only waste, not good food! You avoid that weak, tired feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel fine, full of life! 25¢, 50¢, or only 10¢

Robert Burns' Auld Lang Syne New Year Boon

"AULD LANG SYNE" has become such an integral part of our modern New Year's eve that no celebration, however gay, would be complete without it.

The music sheets for those nostalgic strains simply say "Robert Burns—Scotch Air," and Robert Burns generally is supposed to have written it after he had settled down on a farm and taken himself a wife, following the sweeping success in 1778 of the second edition of his "Poems." Well and good, but Auld Lng Syne was not exclusively Burns' product, nor did he claim it to be.

In a letter to George Thomson, a publisher, Burns explained:

"It is an old song of olden times, which has never been in print. I took it down from an old man's singing."

Modern scholarship has discovered that Burns was wrong when he told Thomson "Auld Lang Syne" never had been in print. Its refrain, at least, was printed obscurely long before Burns heard his "old man singing." In Watson's collection of songs (published in 1711), these verses were attributed to Francis Sempill, who died in 1682.

Further, the original song often has been credited to Sir Robert Aytoun (1570-1638). Aytoun was one of the earliest Scots to use the Lowland dialect as a literary medium. Multitudes of Americans descended from non-British stock are perpetually mystified by this dialect, nor does it seem to make much sense in the standard English translation which comes out "Old Long Since."

Regardless of its original author or origin, it was Burns who gave "Auld Lang Syne" its immortality. And though the bells now welcome the New Year with joyous peals symbolizing mankind's hope for a bright future, the nostalgia of "Auld Lang Syne" summarizes an inherent reluctance to leave the security and friendships of the past and embark upon a future which, however promising, may not be more pleasant. Thus, it remains a part of the English speaking heritage to

"Drink a cup of kindness yet
For Auld Lang Syne."

GREETINGS . . . Some people sit around in night shirts, house slippers, and with their hair up in curlers waiting for the New Year. This picture is submitted as evidence to prove that other persons take a different view of the matter. Well, everyone to his own taste.

Tokyo Is Converted Into Green Forest Six Days Every Year

For the first six days of every year it has been the custom of the Japanese to convert Tokyo into a green forest. And although events have changed in Japan in the last few years, much of the city will be decorated.

On each side of the gate of every household that can afford it will be pine trees and bamboo, while ropes of rice straw and other decorations will grace the lintel.

It is a custom that goes back 300 years or so, this planting of a forest in a city for the space of six days. The pine, with its evergreen branches, is emblematic of eternity, and the straight trunk of the bamboo symbolizes truth and manly courage.

The third of this trio, the plum blossom, signifying womanly virtue, is not used in the out-of-doors decorations, but is within the house. A pine tree stands on either side of the door, and with it are three, five or seven bamboos. There are other decorations peculiar to the New Year tide which are to be seen on every hand.

New Year Evokes Many Superstitions

There are a number of old superstitions and customs that have been observed for centuries and come down almost to this day. To bring good luck one must wear something new on the first day of the year, according to an old English custom.

In some parts of England and Ireland it is supposed to be unlucky to leave a house until some one has first entered it.

POLIO REPORT FROM THE TREASURER

Last year receipts were $4,643.74 during the January drive. $2,191.93 or half was sent to the National Fund and they in turn spent 70 percent for medical, 5 percent for iron lungs, etc. and 25 percent for Research Work. They have found there are 13 different types of Polio.

Our receipts for Hancock County last year per capita were only .3022. Sioux Co. was highest for the State with 1.0212 per capita. We had ten patients in Hancock County during 1950. After paying all these expenses we have a balance of $191.71. Some of these may have to go back for a check-up yet. Hancock County still owes the National Fund $1,500.00.

This year the county is set up with Township Chairmans, and they or their helpers will call on you direct. Following is a list of the chairmans for 1951:

Garfield Twp., Mrs. Ed. Malek; Concord Twp., Mrs. Roy Strate; Boone Twp., Mrs. Carl Long; Erin Twp., Mrs. Leon Hanson; Liberty Twp. Mrs., Kenneth Schultz; Ell Twp., Mrs. Orris Lundy; Major Twp., Miss E. Lucille Miller; Amsterdam Twp., Mrs. Archie Nelson; Twin Lake Twp., Mrs. Doris Burk; Avery Twp., Mrs. Selma Hanson; Ellington Twp., Martin Bluck; Orthel Twp., Mrs. Leo Sankey; Crystal Twp., John Faris; Bingham Twp., Mrs. Martin Smith; Madison Twp., Mrs. Carl Johnson; Britt Twp., Mrs. Albert Rasmuson; Hayfield, Mrs. Lila Meyers; Britt, Mrs. Ben Johns and Mrs. Haralan Stevenson; Klemme, Mrs. Lester Stille.

Lets get the County out of the Red. Joe Osman, Chairman. Mrs. Ray Jorgenson, of Klemme, Treasurer.

NINETY-SIX MARRIAGE LICENSES ISSUED PAST YEAR

Ruth Hughes, Hancock County Clerk of Courts, reports that 96 marriage licenses were issued at her office during 1950 as compared to 99 the previous year.

DRAINAGE MEETING AT COURTHOUSE IN GARNER

Will Be Held January 24th At 1:15 P. M.

DALE O. HULL

Dale O. Hull, Iowa State College Agricultural Engineer, will discuss private and public drains. Mr. Hull will point out the newest information on draining agricultural land.

This meeting was requested by farmers in Hancock County through the County Soil Conservation District Commissioners, Ben Riemer, S. A. Barber and W. J. Rasmuson. According to Paul Henderson, County Extension Director.

All interested persons in the county are invited to attend and bring their questions concerning drainage to the meeting with them.

Mr. Hull will also discuss the maintance of open ditches. Hancock Counties Agriculture is very dependent on a well organized system of public and private drains that need constant maintenance. All farmers have a stake in these drains. Do learn more about your drainage by attending the meeting January 24th at the County Court House in Garner.

REPRESENTS BLUE CROSS IN HANCOCK COUNTY

Mrs. Elsie Oxley, Corwith, is a new Blue Cross-Blue Shield special rural representative, according to an announcement made by Russell A. Nickols, Blue Cross-Blue Shield Rural Enrollment supervisor. Mrs. Oxley has been selected by the Hancock County Health Im-Improvement Association and Blue Cross-Blue Shield to do service work with subscribers in Hancock County and to cooperate with the HIA board in its activities.

FARMERS, STOCKMEN TO RECEIVE DIVIDENDS

About 300 farmers and stockmen in Winnebago and Hancock counties will share in a special 7 per cent dividend now being paid by the United National Farm Loan Association of Forest City, Iowa.

Wm. F. Johannaber, secretary-treasurer, announced that checks totaling more than $5,900.00 are now being mailed to farmers and stockmen who have Federal Bank loans through the cooperative association.

He explained payment of the dividends was possible because of a dividend recently received by the association from the Federal Land Bank of Omaha. The land bank is owned entirely by cooperative National Farm Loan Associations in a four-state area, he said, and the associations in turn are owned by farmers who obtain land bank loans.

Directors of the association at Forest City are C. M. Palmer of Forest City, president; J. E. Reed of Forest City, vice president; R. B. Puffer and Lyal Fox of Britt, and Melvin J. Bergland of Lake Mills.

"I Skidded!..."
...IS NO EXCUSE
FOLLOW THESE RULES ON ICY ROADS...
TAKE IT EASY...especially on curves.
AVOID quick, sharp turning of steering wheel.
BEWARE of sudden changes of speed.
DON'T slam on brakes...pump lightly for safe stops.
YOU CAN STOP AT 20 MILES PER HOUR
On Dry Concrete 21 ft.
On Glare Ice it takes 183 ft.!

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

Last year, one-fourth of all the traffic accidents in Iowa happened on snowy or icy roadways.

If that doesn't sound like too big a fraction, then figure out how much driving you do on snow and ice, even counting wintertime Not nearly a fourth, it it?

That means just one thing: Driving on snow or ice is a special problem that requires special attention on your part. Here are some "special-attention" suggestions:

1 Reduce speed.

2. Every time you encounter ice or snow, slow down, make sure no other vehicles are near, and try out your braking and steering ability.

3 Reduce speed.

4. When you have to stop, lightly "pump" your brakes, instead of slamming them on and holding them.

Use chains on icy and snow roads, because they cut down braking distances as much as 40 or 50 per cent, but remember: Even chains aren't a cure-all. Drive carefully, even when you have them on. And . . . .

7. Reduce speed! Remember, at 20 miles per hour, you can stop in 21 feet on dry pavement . . but it takes 183 feet on ice! And those figures are just braking distance. They don't even include the 22 feet you travel before you get your foot on the brake.

Your Iowa Safety Congress reminds you: "Go slow on snow—think twice on ice!"

$359 MILLION PAID BY IOWA TAXPAYERS

Des Moines—Iowans paid in $359755,130 in federal taxes in 1950, the U.S. collector of internal revenue for Iowa reported Friday. That was a gain of nearly $90,000 over 1949.

The total compared with $487,010,270, the record for a calendar year. That amount was collected in 1948. Contracted with these figures in the 1940 total of $27,502,087.

High month for 1950 was Jan., when income taxes came in volume. The total for that month was $62,042,873, more than twice the total for the full year of 1940.

The low month last year was December, when total revenue amounted to $19,396,315.

Sources of these collections are the income tax, social security tax, withholdings, estate and gift taxes, and numerous levies classed as miscellaneous.

New Family In Klemme

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Evans and three sons, who moved here from the Rowan community, are residing in the Johnson house, vacated some weeks ago by Martin Karsjens and family, in the east part of Klemme.

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY RAY EASTMAN

"Boy, I'm coming all unstuck on this idea of trying to be a safe driver"' said Harry laying down his newspaper.

Fred raised his eyebrows. "That doesn't sound like you. What's the trouble,"

"Well, look at this," Harry pointed, "this nine-month report on fatal traffic accidents in Iowa. It says here that out of 491 drivers involved, 304 were between the ages of 25 and 64, which is supposed to be the safest age group. Out of that same 491, there were 361 driving less than 50 miles an hour. And 356 of 'em had never had an accident or traffic violation, 444 had no physical defects, 411 weren't drinking, and 455 were driving with clear vision."

He looked up. "So what's the use? Why try to look out for all those things? The way it looks o me, if you're going to get it, you're going to get it, and that's all."

"All right," said Fred. "Now let's look at the other side." He did some figuring on the margin of the paper. "There were 491 drivers, it says, involved in fatal accidents. Well, then, there were 187 of them either under 25 or over 65 years old. There were 135 who did have records of previous accidents. 130 who were driving over 50 miles an hour, 47 who did have some physical defect, 80 who had been drinking, and 36 driving with obscured vision."

He figured again. "Add those all up and what do you get? Five hundred and fifteen! That means 515 contributing factors, for only 491 drivers."

"Ah," said Harry, 'comes the dawn."

"Sure," said Fred. "There were plenty of causes for all those accidents. "The only way to drive safely is to be safe in all ways . . . because falling down on any one of them can kill somebody. Maybe you!"

INITIATION SERVICE HELD BY AUXILIARY

Three new members were initated at the regular meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary meeting, January 2, 1951. They were Mrs. Marian Arnold, Mrs. Blanche Stille, and Mrs. Mary Ahrenkiel.

Helen Stille reported on the sale of the Safety Posters.

It was voted to give the Girl Scouts $25.00 for their regular expenses plus a $10.00 bonus for helping with the weekly distribution of the Safety Poster inserts.

Auxiliary units of Hancock County have been appointed to send gifts to the Woodward Institution during January. We allowed $10.00 to purchase gifts for that purpose.

Mrs. Nellie Arnold won the door prize.

Truman's Temper

ALL presidents, being human, sometimes lose their temper. And Harry Truman, being intensely devoted to his family, has an understandable tendency to shoot from the hip when it comes to his wife and daughter.

However, those on the inside of the White House know that presidential fuse-blowing is not confined to protecting his family. More and more the President's temper has influenced public policy Quick decisions, swayed by personal peeve, can affect the lives of millions, and the public has a right to know about them.

Take, for instance, price controls. Failure to impose price controls has shot up the cost of living by billions of dollars, has increased the cost of rearmament to Uncle Sam, and started an inflation spiral which may do inestimable damage.

Yet congress long ago voted presidential power to impose price controls. In fact, Republicans led in giving the President more power than he requested. However, this power has not been used.

Anti-Baruch

One reason is that Bernard Baruch came down to Washington and helped persuade the Republicans to vote these powers; and the President hates Bernard Baruch. He hates him with a passion that distorts and discolors his judgment. When Baruch's name comes up in conversations, dispassion and reason leave the President.

The hatred began when Baruch declined an invitation to serve on a committee of Democrats to raise money during the 1948 campaign. The President then wrote him a letter not unlike the one sent to music critic Paul Hume; later, he fired Baruch's brother as ambassador to Holland and timed it to occur on Baruch's birthday. Bernie, once a frequent caller at the White House, has never been near there since.

Later, the President blamed Baruch for getting revenge on him by blocking confirmation of Truman's close friend, Mon Wallgren, as chairman of the national security resources board. Baruch denies this. But his influence with southern senators is considerable, and White House advisers gave him credit for the fact that Wallgren was never confirmed.

Anti-Taft

Another illustration of what presidential peeve can do to national policy is Sen. Bob Taft.

For a long time the President has been wanting to get the bipartisan foreign policy back on an even keel. But the cornerstone of such a policy is Senator Taft—most influential Republican on capitol hill.

For his part, Taft has made no secret of the fact that he would like to be summoned to the White House. When other Republicans, Senators Wherry and Wiley, return from presidential conferences, Taft has queried them like a cub reporter afraid of getting scooped. And when he heard that the White House might call him in last week, Taft was like a schoolgirl about to go to her first prom. He even offered to cancel a trip to Yale, where he is a member of the board of trustees.

But the President who has a personal prejudice against Taft, would not invite him.

Pearson Prediction

Another illustration of presidential peeve which upset his own applecart was the proposed loyalty review board, composed of Judge John Parker of North Carolina, Judge John Patrick Higgins of Massachusetts, and Adm. Chester Nimitz. White House advisers had sold the President on appointing this board to supersede the Tydings committee for the purpose of thoroughly examining the question of communism in the state department.

A nonpartisan board of judges, it was argued, would lift the question of state department loyalty out of partisan politics and give a categoric answer to Senator McCarthy. The President, at first, was all for it.

Then this commentator predicted that the board would be appointed. Immediately the President got peeved. He was not, he made it clear to advisers, going to help to make a "Pearson prediction come true."

The bipartisan loyalty board was scrapped, McCarthy's charges became the chief issue of the campaign, and some of the President's stanchest supporters were defeated

Palace Guard

Every member of the White House secretariat knows what the President's peeves and pet aversions are. But up until recently they did little to put a quietus on them. In fact, the man who tried hardest to buck the President on certain idiosyncrasies, Clark Clifford, was the object of an intense and jealou- campaign by John Steelman

The White House staff know, of course, that anything even remotely critical of his wife or daughter makes the President blazing mad

AROUND THE HOUSE

When there's nobody around to hold a hank of yarn while you wind it into a ball, drop the hank over a lamp shade that revolves easily and start winding.

Leather chairs can be cleaned by rubbing them with a soft cloth dipped in ordinary milk—or better still, in beaten egg white. When they're dry, go over them again with a clean soft cloth.

Mild soap and lukewarm water will do for imitation leather. To prevent cracking and peeling, follow the washing with a thin coat of petroleum jelly.

Lots of house dresses, ready for discard, can easily be made over into aprons; so can cast-off playsuits, but more easily. Just take the skirt of a playsuit which you used to tie in front and reverse it. That is, tie it in back, and you'll have an apron in front of you.

To stiffen organdy curtains, mix up a tub of very thin starch water and let the curtains soak for quite a while. Then hang them up and iron when they are dry.

Ordinary starch will often put a whitish cast on black and dark-colored clothes, unless you do something about it. Put a small amount of leftover coffee—the brew, not the grounds—into the starch.

If the stocking you want to discard is the same shade as some of the ones you're still using, unravel the threads in the useless hose and wind them on a spool They'll be just right for mending the stockings you still have.

If someone burns a hole in a leather-covered table top, hide it by melting candle wax of a matching color; pour it into the hole and smooth it out while it's soft.

In starching flimsy curtains, ordinary methods won't always distribute the starch evenly throughout the fabric Try this: have the starch solution boiling hot, dip the curtains in, and then put them through the wringer.

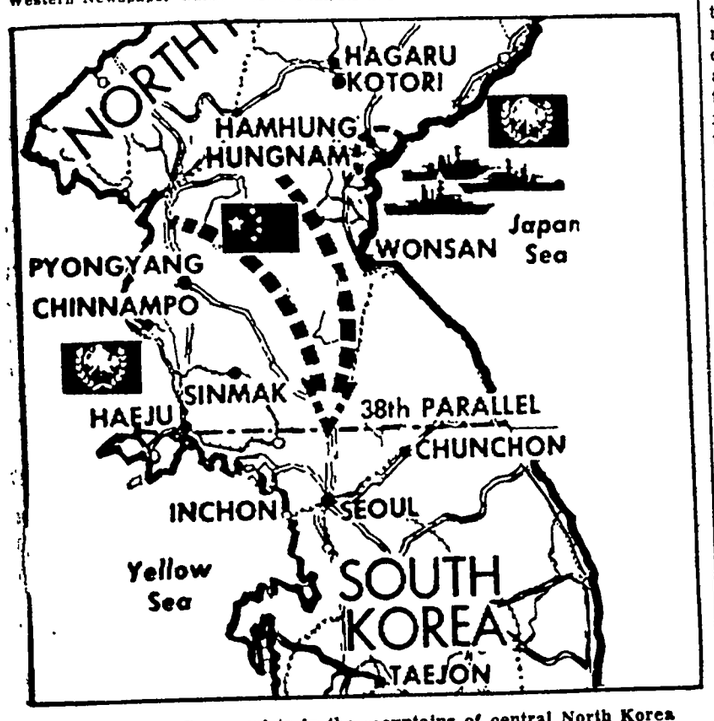
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

A State of National Emergency Is Proclaimed by President Truman; Russia Threatens Western Europe

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



Chinese Communists in the mountains of central North Korea prepared for another big sweep down the middle of Korea (broken arrow). Meanwhile, 60,000 United Nations troops were evacuated from the Hamhung-Hungnam beachhead after withdrawing from the Yalu river.

EMERGENCY:

Near-War Footing

With a series of proclamations and executive orders, President Truman put the nation on a near-war footing. In a world-wide radio address the President proclaimed a national emergency and told the American people they must pay higher taxes, work longer hours, and give up many civilian goods to speed up the defense program.

"Our home, our nation, all the things we believe in, are in great danger," the President said in his address.

"The future of civilization depends on what we do—on what we do now and in the months ahead."

He announced the administration would impose some wage-price controls and bring 3,500,000 men under arms "as soon as possible."

Then he outlined the buckling-down program:

1. Compulsory price ceilings "at once" on some items essential to defense production and the cost of living.

2. Voluntary ceilings over rest of the economy of publishing "fair standards of prices and wages."

3. To provide the necessary materials for defense production, a "cut back on many lines of civilian production" and expanded output of steel, copper, aluminum, electric power, and agricultural commodities.

4. Workers to labor more hours.

5. Still further taxes.

6. Federal spending for non-defense purposes slashed "to the minimum" in the fiscal 1952 budget.

Within hours after the declaration of a national emergency, the President created the Office of Defense Mobilization by executive order. The new office was given unprecedented power with full authority over civilian agencies already at work building United States war strength. Truman named Charles E. Wilson to head the agency. Wilson was president of General Electric

Also within hours after the President's proclamation, the Economic Stabilization Agency froze the price of new automobiles at the level of December 1, 1950. The action rolled back price increases averaging five per cent announced by Ford, Chrysler, General Motors, and Nash, on the 1951 models.

The automobile industry protested the price roll-back and stopped the sale of some makes. Observers did not believe the protest would carry much weight in Washington.

Most observers believed the President had set the stage for further drastic curbs. There is no doubt but that a speed-up in re-armament—to suit the quickening tempo of the Kremlin time-table—will cause economic injuries. Some people are going to lose jobs. Some business men are going to lose money. And all Americans are going to find life a lot tougher.

Some observers believed it may be necessary to cut back civilian production as much as 30 to 50 per cent before war production can go into high gear.

Marines

The first truckloads of U. S. 1st marine division are shown above as they rolled into the area near Hamhung after their 12-day battle to free themselves from the death trap set by Chinese and North Korean Communists near the Changjin reservoir.

EUROPE:

Reds Threaten

The Soviet Union did not say exactly what it would do, but in notes to Great Britain and France warned that the rearmament of Germany would not be tolerated. The threat brought a new feeling of crisis to western Europe.

The Kremlin sent notes to Britain and France which asserted:

1. Arming of Germans by Atlantic allies would violate the Potsdam pact of 1945.

2. Western Germany's inclusion in the Atlantic pact setup would invalidate Russia's alliance treaties with Britain and France.

A number of observers were asking if the Soviet warning wasn't the kind Red China made—and later fulfilled—as United Nations forces crossed the 38th parallel in Korea. Others, however, do not think the Communists are ready for all-out war.

The note is having its effect on western Europe and may slow down the execution of defense plans.

London described the Soviet note as a "patently tactical device" timed to coincide with the Brussels meeting.

MARSHALL:

Opposes Full Mobilization

Defense Secretary Marshall is reported opposed to full mobilization now because there is still "a hope" that World War III may be averted.

Marshall's careful appraisal of the powder-keg world situation was given to a house appropriations subcommittee at a secret hearing.

However, Marshall said he also believes that the United States must build up its armed forces to just-short-of-war footing as swiftly as possible because "a single word" from the Kremlin could start the holocaust at any time.

The defense secretary did not say exactly how far he believed U. S. mobilization should go. But he said the present goal of 2,771,000 men under arms by next July 1 must be increased substantially.

UNITED NATIONS:

Political Stalemate

Although there was much less tension in the capitals of the world, diplomats at the United Nations continued to work feverishly in an attempt to head off a world-wide conflict. No workable solution for stopping the Korean war had been found, however, and the organization seemed locked in a political stalemate.

Russia declared that all foreign troops, including Chinese Communists "volunteers," should be withdrawn from Korea, but voted against a cease-fire proposal which the United Nations political committee approved by a vote of 51 to 5.

Russia's delegates harked again and again to the argument that the cease-fire formula was aimed at "saving the skins" of western troops—at providing a "breathing spell" during which Gen. Douglas MacArthur's forces could "reform their ranks" in preparation for a new attack.

The general assembly went ahead with its cease-fire plan by naming a three-man committee to seek the truce. Most observers believed they would not succeed.

ACHESON:

Ouster Demanded

Secretary of State Dean Acheson flew to Brussels for a meeting with representatives of the Atlantic pact nations amid renewed pressure on the home front that he be fired from the state department.

The latest move for his ouster was made by senate and house Republicans. There was no White House comment on the Republican resolution.

Administration officials, however, reported President Truman was "absolutely determined" to stand by Acheson for the reason that he has served him exceptionally well. Some quarters reported the President considered the attack on Acheson to be an attack on the administration's foreign policy.

Acheson was reported to have said he would not resign and that he was making the Brussels trip because he felt the European peoples needed to be reassured that the United States is determined to help build up their defenses.

Some political observers expressed the opinion that the Republican demand for Acheson's ouster was timed badly. It was pointed out that lack of unified political support for Acheson in congress might embarrass him in relations with Atlantic pact foreign ministers.

RAIL TIE-UP:

Walkout Called Off

Under pressure from President Truman, the federal courts and their own union officials, more than 10,000 striking rail yard workers ended their crippling three-day strike that caused one of the greatest freight stackups in the nation's history.

The strike ended without any wage settlement, although representatives of the railroads and four rail unions got together for joint bargaining talks at the White House.

The strike had caused mountainous stacks of Christmas packages to be bottled up in post offices and stranded in freight cars. War shipments had been halted in transit. Some railroads had curtailed passenger train schedules.

The union had demanded a 40-hour week at pay they received for 48 hours—the same benefits which were awarded previously to one million nonoperating workers.

A presidential fact-finding board recommended a 40-hour week, but at pay boost of only 18 cents. The union's demands amounted to 31 cents.

Contest

The Pillsbury baking contest was held at the Waldorf Astoria with housewives from throughout the nation competing for thousands of dollars in prizes. Mrs. William E. Brebner of Des Moines, Iowa, (left) is showing the Duke and Duchess of Windsor a little thing she whipped up and called "The Thing," after the current whacky song.

CHURCHILL:

No Foolish Promises

Former Prime Minister Winston Churchill warned the western powers against the argument "that we must never use the atomic bomb until and unless it is used against us first."

"The argument is now put forward that we must never use the atomic bomb until and unless it is used against us first," Churchill said. "In other words, you must never fire until you are shot dead."

WAR FUNDS

House Approves Huge Defense Measure

The house approved and sent to the senate a "first installment" defense appropriation amounting to $17,809,304,424. The Senate was expected to act on the bill within a matter of days.

The huge appropriation included $16,845,181,000 for the army, navy and air force—exactly what President Truman asked. The atomic energy commission got $840 million to augment its fast expanding A-bomb and H-bomb program.

Meanwhile, the "second installment" on the gigantic preparedness program was rapidly taking shape. President Truman sent to congress a new request for $1,834,911,000 to add war-needed materials to the nation's stockpile. The house began study of the bill immediately.

Serve Pancakes for Any Meal

(See Recipes Below)

Versatile Pancakes

THERE'S NOTHING QUITE so appealing on blustery days as warm, tender pancakes. You'll appreciate their versatility, too, for pancakes can welcome you to breakfast, entice you to a tempting luncheon, or delight you for dessert at dinner.

Stack them high and hearty for breakfast and serve with a variety of syrup for breakfast. For luncheon, try pancakes made with corn kernels and serve with crisply fried ham, Vienna sausages or Canadian bacon.

For dinner dessert pancakes, make diminutive pancakes and team them with fruit like pineapple syrup or Damson plum preserves, and wait for cheers that are bound to come!

Sour Milk Griddlecakes
(Makes 18 cakes)

- 1½ cups sifted flour
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 2 eggs
- 1 cup sour milk or buttermilk
- 1 tablespoon melted butter

Sift dry ingredients together. Beat eggs, add buttermilk and butter, then add to dry ingredients gradually, beating to obtain a smooth batter. Drop from a spoon onto a hot greased griddle and brown on both sides.

Variation: Buckwheat or Whole-Wheat Griddlecakes — Use buckwheat or whole wheat instead of half the flour. Increase sugar and butter to 2½ tablespoons each. Decrease milk if desired.

Raised Griddlecakes
(Makes 3 dozen cakes)

- 2½ cups scalded milk
- ½ cake or package yeast, softened in ½ cup lukewarm water
- 2½ cups sifted flour
- 1½ cups corn meal
- 4 teaspoons sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 eggs, well beaten

Cool milk to lukewarm and add softened yeast. Mix dry ingredients together and stir in yeast mixture; cover and let stand overnight in a warm place. Add eggs and let stand 10 to 15 minutes before baking. Drop mixture from tip of spoon on hot, lightly greased griddle. Cook on one side until puffed, full of bubbles and baked on the edges, turn and brown on other side. Serve with sirup.

Corn Pancakes
(Makes 12 5-inch pancakes)

- 1 cup sifted enriched flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 egg
- 1¼ cups milk
- 1 cup whole-kernel corn
- 2 tablespoons melted shortening

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Beat egg. Add milk, corn and shortening. Add to flour mixture and mix well. Cook on lightly greased hot griddle.

Pancake Roll-Ups
(Serves 6)

- 1 cup sifted flour
- 2½ teaspoons double-acting baking powder
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1 egg, well beaten
- 1¼ cups milk
- 3 tablespoons melted shortening
- 1 cup wheat flakes, slightly crushed

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, salt, and sugar, and sift again. Combine egg and milk; add gradually to flour, mixing only until smooth. Add shortening and flakes. Bake on hot griddle. While hot, spread each griddle cake to edge with Damson Plum Preserves. Roll up lightly and serve with maple-blended syrup.

Pineapple Pancakes
(Serves 4)

- ⅔ cup plain pancake mix
- 1 cup water
- 2 egg yolks
- 4 teaspoons butter

Combine pancake mix, water, egg yolks and melted butter, beating until smooth. Bake in small amount of hot fat in 5-inch skillet, using 2 tablespoons of batter for each pancake. Turn once to brown on both sides. Roll cakes while hot. When ready to serve, heat rolled cakes in hot sauce about 5 minutes. Serve with following sauce:

- 1 cup pineapple syrup
- 6 tablespoons sugar or corn syrup, light or dark
- 3 teaspoons cornstarch
- 4 tablespoons cold water
- 4 tablespoons butter
- 4 slices pineapple, canned

Heat pineapple syrup to boiling. Mix sugar or corn syrup, cornstarch and water; add to heated syrup; bring to boil over low heat stirring constantly; simmer 3 minutes. Remove from heat, add butter and pineapple, cut in small pieces.

APPLES ARE PLENTIFUL now and can be used for lovely dessert pancakes as follows:

Apple Griddle Cakes
(Makes 12-15 cakes)

- 2 beaten eggs
- 2 cups milk
- 2 tablespoons melted shortening
- 3 cups flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 4 teaspoons baking powder
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- ¾ cup finely chopped apple

Combine eggs, milk, and shortening. Add flour sifted with salt, baking powder, sugar, and apple; beat smooth. Bake on ungreased griddle. When baked, spread with butter and brown sugar; roll up and serve.

Pancakes go to dessert in color when they're made paper thin and rolled with cranberry sauce, strawberry jam or orange marmalade.

Good with breakfast pancakes is a spread made by creaming together butter with brown sugar or maple sugar.

Here's a light serving tip for breakfast cakes: sprinkle with granulated sugar and dash with a bit of lemon juice.

LYNN SAYS:
Serve Those Pancakes As You Like Them

Heat syrup for pancakes before serving and add butter to the syrup if you wish. This helps keep pancakes hot when served.

Seasoned cottage cheese wrapped in thin pancakes and kept hot in the oven is a good extender idea for a main course when you're serving a pot roast.

Marmalade, jam, jelly or cinnamon sugar are favored by some with their hot cakes.

Season your cream sauce with a fine sprinkling of herbs for creamed chicken or turkey and serve over hot crisp waffles. Compliments will smother you!

Vienna sausage served with corn pancakes make a delicious combination for quick supper or luncheon. Hot, buttered syrup may be served with them.

If you're serving pancakes to a crowd, heat the oven and stack the cakes on a cookie sheet to keep warm until ready to serve enough at one time.

SCHOOL NEWS

First Grade News

We all had a nice Christmas. Wednesday was toy day in our room, although we have had a room full of toys all week.

We have taken down our Christmas decorations and put up snowmen and birds that we made in art.

Absences this week due to illness were Sandra Finnegan, Inez Nuehring and Billy Clabaugh.

We now have 34 in our room instead of 35 since Rachel Porter moved during Christmas vacation.

—Mrs. Brinkman

Second Grade News

Those of us who are back after the holidays had many interesting things to show and tell. Unfortunately several have not returned yet. Daryl Kothenbeutel, Melva Johnson, Maralе Bachman, Delores and Cathy Finnegan and Daryl Schlei have been absent all this week.

Friday we drew three names from our class who had to tell a favorite story from our "Old Story Book Friends" unit. We have also been dramatizing a few of these stories.

—Miss Brones

Third Grade News

We are happy to start the New Year out with a new pupil added to our grade. He is Craig Welsan He is 10 years old and comes to us from Liscomb, Iowa. We hope Craig will enjoy being a part of our grade.

We decided to have toy day right after Christmas, as all the children received so many nice things they wanted to bring them to school to show the rest of the boys and girls.

Sharon Blau gave treats to the class Friday as it was her birthday. She is nine years old.

We still have a few absences, with Daryl Brager, Paige Patterson and Joe Finnegan out with mumps. Hope they will be able to be back to school soon.

—Miss Sebben

Fourth Grade News

The first day of school after vacation we elected class officers to replace Harlan Baack as President, Myrna Barz as Vice President, Cozette Lau as Secretary and Virginia Kudje as Treasurer.

The new officers are:
Dorothy Roul ------- President
Jerry Lee LaFavre - Vice-Pres.
Mardell Stadtlander ----- Sec.
Carroll Priebe ------ Treasurer

We also elected three council members to take care of duties such as selecting a good citizen for the room and see that appointed duties are carried out. The members are Harlan Baack, Myrna Barz and Cozette Lau.

The first business of the club was to change the name from the "Sunshine Club" to the "Lone Star Club." Twenty rules were also made for the members to follow to be good citizens.

FORMER GOODELL RESIDENT DIES; RITES THURS.

Goodell—Funeral services for Mrs. Ralph Jenison, 60, will be held Thursday at 2 p. m. in the Methodist Church at Belmond with the Rev. J. Heber Miller officiating, the Fulton funeral home in charge.

Mabel De Ell Hubbard, daughter of Ernest and Vinnie Burgess Hubbard was born Dec. 23, 1890, at Evansville, Wis. At the age of 8 years she came with her parents to Goodell, where she grew to womanhood. On Dec. 31, 1910, she was married to Ralph Jenison and they started housekeeping on their farm southeast of Goodell. Six children were born to this union. A few years ago they retired and moved to Belmond.

Last fall Mrs. Jenison suffered a stroke in Idaho while enroute to California to visit their children. She had been in failing health and Friday, January 5 suffered a severe stroke never regaining consciousness. She died Sunday at 7:00 p. m.

Survivors include her husband and the following children: Mrs. Melvin Richardson of Clarion, Paul of Belmond, Delbert of Dayville, Ore,, Mrs. Will Phalsgraff and Cleo of Pacoina, Cal. Their youngest child, Lorainne, died at the age of 4 years, 19 years ago.

She is also survived by her mother, Mrs. Vinnie Hubbard, and sister, Mrs. Bill Hegingner of Belmond and a brother Harvey Hubbard of Klemme, also 2 grandchildren.

MARJORIE OLSON AND LLOYL HALFPOP WERE MARRIED JANUARY 5

A double ring ceremony was held at the Little Brown church in Nashua, Iowa, at 11:15 A, M. on January 5th, 1951 when the Rev. F. L. Hanscom united in marriage Marjorie Olson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar A. Olson of Britt to Lloyd Halpop, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Halfpop of Kanawha.

The bride wore a street length dress of satin rose with black embroidery and a white carnation corsage. The bride's sister, Arlene Olson, was bridesmaid. She wore a street length taffeta dress of black with white trimming and a pink carnation corasage. The bridegroom's nephew, Roger Halfpop, was the attending bestman. Each wore a white carnation boutonniere. Both mothers of the bride and groom attended the wedding.

The bride received her education in the Britt Public Schools. The bridegroom graduated from the Goodell School in 1943. He is engaged in farming and they will go to housekeeping on his father's farm near Kanawha after a honeymoon trip in the southern states.

A reception and dance honoring the couple will be held at the Duncan Community Hall on Wednesday evening, January 17th. Music will be by the Northern Bohemians Orchestra.

Budget Approved

The annual budget submitted by the Hancock County board of social welfare for aid to the blind and to dependent children for the year 1951 was approved Tuesday by the Hancock county board of supervisors. The annual budget calls for an appropriation from county funds in the sum of $428.50 for aid to the blind and $5,803.50 for aid to dependent children.

BERT JONES FINDS POEM LEFT BY HIS MOTHER

After the death of his father Bert Jones was going through some of the personal papers and belongings left by his parents, when he came across the following poem, which he prizes very highly:

To My Son

Do you know that your soul is of my soul such part,
That you seem to be fibre and core of my heart?
None other can pain me as you dear can do.
None other can please me or praise me as you.
Remember, the world will be quick with its blame.
If shadow or strain ever darken your name,
Like mother, like son is a saying so true.
The world will judge largely of mother by you.
Be this then your task if task it shall be,
To force this proud world to do homage to me.
Be sure it will say when its verdict you've won,
She reaps as she sowed, Lo! this man is her son.

YOUR MOTHER.

Bert is now the only survivor and direct descendant of the Jones family.

Former Klemme Woman Died At Holly, Minnesota

Mrs. Henry Ihde of Holly, Minnesota, died Christmas day. She was a sister of the late Mr. Fred Radloff of near Garner.

Mr. and Mrs. Ihde will be remembered by some of the old timers here. They once farmed the Dave Ross place, where Roy Jacobs now lives southeast of Klemme. The Ihdes moved to Minnesota in 1915. Mrs. Ihde was 86 years old at the time of her death.

Attended Ministers Meeting

Rev. and Mrs. E. Morris Egeland attended a Garner Subdistrict Methodist Ministers, who met on Monday afernoon at the parsonage home of the Rev. and Mrs. J. Heber Miller at Belmond. Others present were Rev. and Mrs. S. W. Cunningham of Garner, Rev. and Mrs. Harvey Walker of Thornton, and Rev. and Mrs. Warner Hubbard of Clear Lake. The group enjoyed dinner together at a Belmond Cafe and returned to the parsonage for a business and social hour.

DIANA MASTERSON WAS HONORED AT BIRTHDAY PARTY WEDNESDAY

On Wednesday, January 3rd, Diana Masterson was 11 years old so in honor of the occasion Mrs. Henry Jost invited her teacher and her grade pupils in school to a party at the Jost home.

The children enjoyed playing games after which Diana opened the many gifts which her classmates had brought. A nice lunch was then enjoyed by the 22 schoolmates present.

Mrs. Jost was assisted with the party and lunch by Mrs. Seabo Lamfers and Mrs. Leslie Smock of Kanawha; Mrs. Vern Schluter of Meservey and Mrs. Morris Hanson of Klemme. Mrs. Marie Nagel was also a guest.

Schoun Re-Elected

F. J. Schoun of Britt was reelected chairman of the board of supervisors for the year 1951 at the organization meeting of the board. Schoun was appointed last summer to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late George Th. Gerdes.

Free Hunting

To hunt or fish, every Iowan needs a license . . . everyone, that is, except an Indian.

A Sac or Fox, it costs him nothing.

Years ago, we took away the Indian's rightful way of life. Now the government is trying to make these small amends. Of course, we shouldn't take away from any man a thing that's rightly his. That's the basis of our democracy.

Let people take away our rights in little things, and soon they'll do the same with bigger things.

Sure, we don't all think alike or have the same tastes. But that's no reason why I need to impose MY ideas on my neighbor.

Neighbor Ed can enjoy his television set, and neighbor Joe may prefer the movies. Ed can drop in for a cup of coffee and Joe for a temperate bottle of beer. Each man exercises his own preferences. That's America.

Our Indian friends will tell us that once any rights are lost, it's hard to get them back.

REDUCE SAFELY

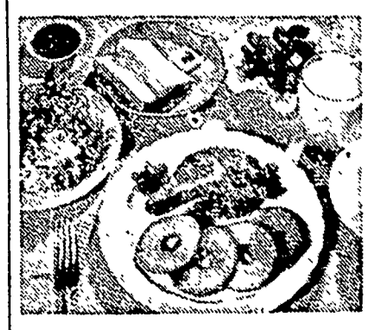
Nutrition Expert Reports Dieting Can Be Done Safely, Cheaply

You can reduce safely and economically on a diet that includes enriched white bread at every meal, Dr. Ruth M. Leverton, professor of nutrition research at the University of Nebraska, proved in a research project recently.

"Omitting bread in a reducing diet is unnnecessary and leads to increased cost of the diet," Dr. Leverton said. "No aspect of food and nutrition is subject to more abuse, fad, and misinformation than the low calorie diet necessary for weight loss."

Dr. Leverton explained that no single food is fattening, but that it is the total number of calories eaten that determines whether a person gains or loses weight.

The baking industry, led by the American Bakers Association, is planning a nationwide observance, in 1951, of the tenth anniversary of bread enrichment, focusing attention on the resulting improvement in the nation's health. Bread "enrichment" means the addition to the bread of certain essential vitamins and minerals.



This appetizing, low-calorie dinner featuring a pork chop, browned apple rings, enriched white bread and butter, and fresh strawberries, was one of the meals served to dieters in a scientific study. Twelve girls lost a total of 227 pounds in 8 weeks of the diet.

In the scientific study at the University of Nebraska, 12 overweight young women followed a daily 1200-calorie diet, which included enriched white bread and butter at each meal. The 12 girls who took part in the study were between 18 and 25 years of age, and were from 20 to 83 pounds overweight. At the end of the eight weeks, the girls lost a total of 227 pounds, or the equivalent of two whole girls. Average loss was 2½ pounds per girl per week. The girls remained in excellent health.

Enriched white bread was selected for each meal because it is nutritious, appetizing, low in cost, and readily available, according to the report. Cost of the diet averaged 68 cents a day. It regularly included meat, milk, fruits and vegetables, as well as bread. An important share of the B-vitamins, iron, and protein was provided daily by enriched white bread.

IN SELECTING the diet, meals for three days were planned, and this three-day pattern was repeated throughout the study. Foods were chosen that were liked by the girls and would be popular over an 8-week period. In general, thick gravies and sauces, concentrated sweets and calorie-packed desserts were omitted.

The girls lived in one of the University's residence halls during the study so that their meals could be prepared, weighed, and served by trained nutritionists.

Because the only way to take off weight is to reduce food intake, foods included in a reducing diet must supply all of the essential nutrients needed by the body. The diet planned in the study supplied the food values recommended by the national research council, with the exception of calories.

Here are the menus for one of the days of the planned low-cost diet:

BREAKFAST: ½ cup of grapefruit or orange juice, 1 slice of enriched white bread, ½ teaspoon of butter or margarine, 1 medium egg cooked in the shell or poached, and 1 cup of skim milk.

LUNCH: 2 slices of enriched bread, ½ teaspoon of butter or margarine, 1 medium carrot, 1 medium orange, and 1 cup of skim milk.

DINNER: 1 pork chop (¼ lb. with fat removed), 1 small apple, 1 cup of raw vegetable salad, 1 slice of enriched white bread, ½ teaspoon of butter or margarine, 1 cup of skim milk, and ¾ cup of fresh strawberries. In place of strawberries, the following may be served: 1 medium fresh pear or peach, ½ medium cantaloupe, 2 ounces of angel food cake, 1 piece of canned fruit such as pear, peach, or pineapple slice, but no sweetened juice.

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

JUDY HOLLIDAY was a terrific success on the New York stage in "Born Yesterday," but Columbia tested some of Hollywood's top actresses before giving her that same role in the screen version of the comedy. No one else could have played it as well. Judy's show business career began as switchboard operator for Orson Welles' Mercury Theatre, then came a stint with a group that sang satirical songs. A small role in "Kiss Them for Me" won her the Clarence Derwent award. Then came "Born Yesterday," her third picture and biggest success.

Spencer Tracy is delighted with his role in "Plymouth Adventure," that of captain of the Mayflower. The picture will explode the popular belief that all its passengers were a dull lot; some were Pilgrims, some Puritans.

Helen Deutsch, author of so many successful pictures (her latest is "King Solomon's Mines"), has proved to MGM executives that she knows what will succeed on the screen; of 30 scripts she turned down, only one was made, and it shouldn't have been. She is thrilled over her next, "Plymouth Adventure," with Spencer Tracy starring. Blonde and brown-eyed, pretty enough to be a movie star herself, Miss Deutsch likes to do historical pictures, insisting that every detail be absolutely correct.

THE FICTION CORNER

WAIT YOUR TURN

By Ona Freeman Lathrop

BESS WILKINS wondered if she was going to be able to stand another twenty or thirty years of Henry's stubbornness and impatience!

3-Minute Fiction

"I declare, your father is getting so cranky in his old age, I wonder if I'm going to be able to live out my life with him," she told her married daughter, Alice.

"Why, Mother, how you talk!" Alice looked shocked.

"Well, he actually embarrasses me in restaurants and public places if we aren't the first to be waited on. And today he wouldn't even bank his money from that last real estate deal just because there was a line ahead of him."

"Just don't pay any attention to him," Alice advised. "You probably aggravate him more when you argue with him. Maybe he isn't well?"

"There's nothing the matter with him that a good hard jolt wouldn't cure, and I'm going to think up a way to jolt him out of his cussedness," Bess announced.

But she hadn't yet thought up the jolt when she and Henry were driving out for groceries that evening.

"Got to have some gas in the car before we can go to town," Henry announced, a scowl cluttering up his once-so-placid face.

"Henry, I'll need some money," she informed him as they drove along.

"Well, here, take my wallet and get out a ten-spot."

Silently she counted the bills. No sense in Henry carrying that much money on him. She helped herself and replaced the wallet.

Henry pulled into the neighborhood gas-station. No one came out. He honked the horn.

Alice advised her mother not to pay any attention to him. "Maybe he isn't well," she suggested.

Then he honked again, not once but twice, and then again—a long blast. Bess couldn't contain herself any longer, much as she had determined not to argue with him.

"Now Henry, don't be so impatient," she said meekly.

"Well, for the love of Mike! When a man wants service, he wants it quick." He gave the horn another fierce blast.

"But Henry, you know that horn sticks sometimes. You'll have it sticking if you blow it like that."

"Then they can fix it." And he tooted it again. No one came out.

"By the Lord Harry, I'm going in there and tell them what I think of them," he shouted, getting out. "I can see some one in there moving around."

BESS WATCHED. Yes, she could see a form moving in the dim interior. Funny the lights hadn't been turned on yet. She saw Henry step inside and close the door behind him. Then she saw something that made her heart skip a beat. His hand went up high above his head. A stick-up!

There ought to be some way! After all, she couldn't have anything happen to Henry. She leaned over and pushed the horn—clear down. It stuck as she had hoped it would.

The station door flew open. The masked bandit stuck his head out. "Shut that off, sister!" he snarled.

"I can't. It's stuck," she told him, trying to keep her voice from squeaking in high soprano.

"Get that crate out of here then," he snarled.

"I don't know how to drive, and besides, my husband has the keys in his pocket." She could see heads sticking out of doors and people stopping to turn and grin at the corner.

"Come on, Eddie, we've got to scram out of here," the first one croaked, and they came out on the run to a parked car. By that time a police car was rounding the corner.

Henry and the gas-station attendant came out sheepishly to disconnect the horn and fix it.

"You sure saved our skins, Bess," Henry murmured in a subdued voice. "But my bank-roll is gone. After this—"

Bess smiled. "Oh, I had taken all the money out of your wallet except nine dollars, but I think that will teach you not to be so impatient anyway, Henry. Next time, wait your turn."

It's Curtain Time

Just as the shoemaker's children never are shod, so shower curtains seldom get bathed.

BROADWAY AND MAIN STREET

Widow Curses Legacy That Kills Faith of a Lifetime

By BILLY ROSE

Whenever an out-of-towner says, "What have you got in New York that we haven't got in Punxsutawney?" I throw a copy of the Manhattan Classified Phone Directory at him. On page 1067, listed under "Missing Heirs," is a man named Theodore W. Roth whose business it is to find money.

I first heard of this gent on a radio program and this morning, in a mood to muse and meander, I stopped in to see him at his office on West 42nd Street.

"Glad to see you," said Mr. Roth. "You don't happen to be related to a Sam Bramson of Paterson, do you?"

"Not that I know of," I said.

"Too bad," said Mr. Roth. "Bramson left a hundred thousand dollars and I'm trying to find a relative I can give it to."

Billy Rose

"Is there much unclaimed money lying around?"

"About eight billion dollars," said Mr. Roth, "mostly in forgotten bank accounts, stock held in escrow, uncollected insurance policies and inheritances nobody has claimed."

"WHAT'S THE biggest case you ever worked on?" I asked.

"The Garrett case in Philadelphia," said Mr. Roth. "Back in 1930 a lady named Henrietta Edwina Garrett died and left property worth forty million dollars. So far over six thousand people have claimed it, six of them have been thrown into jail, a couple have committed suicide, and several lawyers have been disbarred for phonying up evidence. One of the applicants was Adolph Hitler who argued that the next of kin was a German citizen and that the money should be sent to the Fatherland. I'm happy to report he didn't get a dime."

"You must meet a lot of screwballs in your profession," I said.

Mr. Roth dug into his desk and brought out a letter. It was from a woman in Massachusetts who claimed that one of her ancestors had deeded a cranberry bog to an Indian squaw, but that the deed was faulty and she wanted the property back. The bog, she explained, is now known as Manhattan Island.

"Last year," Mr. Roth went on, "I got one that was even wackier. A girl in Texas wrote in to say that only a second cousin stood between her and a chunk of oil land worth a million dollars. She was planning to murder her kinsman, but before going to all that trouble she wanted me to check and make sure her claim to the estate would be clear and undisputed. I, of course, turned the letter over to the police."

DO YOU HAVE any trouble collecting your fees?" I asked.

"As a rule," said the climber of family trees, "the heirs I turn up are pretty grateful. There have been cases, of course, where the only thanks I got was a dirty look."

"As for instance?"

"Well," said Mr. Roth, "there was the time a widow refused to believe me when I told her I had located a twelve-thousand-dollar bank account left by her husband. I finally convinced her to sign the necessary papers, but when I handed her the twelve thousand, she said, 'I curse the day I ever met you and I curse this money too.'

"It turned out she had always loved her husband and was devoted to his memory, despite the fact that their life together had been a hard one. He had always pleaded poverty when she needed a dress or a new pair of stockings, and she had believed him. Now that she saw him for what he was, she was understandably bitter.

"Sure, twelve thousand dollars was a lot of money, but it had destroyed the faith of a lifetime."

Veto Is Not Legal

THERE IS A tremendous hue and cry in congress and from other sources based on a fallacious premise that our nation, through our delegation to the United Nations, should veto seating of the delegation from Communist China in the security council or even in the general assembly of that body.

There is little doubt but that if this were possible that is just what the United States would do. But as a matter of fact, under the rules of the United Nations, the veto of a delegation from a nation already a member of the United Nations is not permissible. We can use our veto against them, and will, no doubt do so But the seating of a delegation from a nation already a member is merely a procedural process and not vetoable under U.N. rules.

For instance, in the case of Spain, or any other nation, not yet a member of the UN, this country, or any other country could use the veto to prevent membership. But China is not only a member of the U.N., but also is a member of the security council, hence under U.N. rules the seating of the delegation representing China is a matter of votes for and against. So no matter how we detest Communist China or any other Communist nation, although we refuse to recognize the government of Communist China, we have only one vote, and not a veto in the matter of seating the Chinese delegation. This rule of procedure was set up in the UN in 1946, the member nations recognizing the fact that if the veto applied to delegations of nations which already were members, any change of administration, for instance in this country, could bring about an ouster of the American delegation, or any other delegation; or following the rule to absurdity, a delegate from any nation by use of the veto could keep himself perpetually in office.

Secretary of State Dean Acheson explained this rule of the UN to a congressional committee recently, but still it did not stop the charge against him of softness toward Communists by some who insist on making Acheson a whipping boy. And further, his explanations got little publicity so that the people of this country could understand the situation.

Food and Drug Laws

The Cooperative League is conducting a very worthwhile campaign to amend the food and drug laws to require the labeling of chemical and other contents in food, insecticides and fertilizer. It is making its campaign mainly on bread and fertilizer, which cooperatives produce and label. But under present law the triple rich white bread manufactured by coops may be banned because it contains more food value than required by the food and drug act. For instance, this coop bread contains, and is so labeled, 2 per cent wheat germ, 8 per cent milk solids and 6 per cent high-protein soy flour The bureau of agricultural research reports that the average white bread on the market contains only 1½ per cent milk solids, whereas the National Research Council urges at least 6 per cent and the coop bread contains 3 per cent. The league wants all bread labeled as to its contents. But if projected standards go into effect the triple rich bread is too good to be sold in interstate commerce when the food and drug administration says the top limit is 3 per cent soy and 1½ per cent wheat germ.

Washington Silhouettes

Washington Silhouettes — The White House looks barren and deserted . . windows boarded up . . scaffolds and workmen's shanties adjacent . . trees protected by barricades . . . it is in process of a $5,000,000 modernization program. The Washington National Guard armory is probably the largest such building in the world . . . a regulation football field could be laid out in its auditorium without touching a post or pillar . . . the Cafritz building on Eye street, just completed, office building and garage. A business man can drive to his floor and park within ten feet of his office door. The Pentagon building has parking space for 30,000 cars . . .

If you, by any chance, think prices have not risen, the department of commerce says that business inventories at the end of October amounted to 58.8 billion dollars, an increase of 3.8 billion dollars since September 1.

At the same time the census bureau says that government debt, federal state and local, has risen from 273.6 billion dollars a year ago to 281 billion today. Federal debt is up 4.6 billion dollars and state and local 2.8 billion. State and local debt amounts to 23.6 billion. So you owe $1,865 in government debt—$1,708 per capita in federal; $122 of local government and $35 for state obligations. While we are on this subject prepare for stiffer individual income taxes on all income levels. The 82nd congress will do it.

Life of Action

Lesson for January 14, 1951

SCRIPTURE: Mark 1:21-39.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalms 145:10-21.

THEY say that in four regions of the United States there are four different questions which are asked of newcomers. In the New England states they ask a stranger "How much do you know?" In the wealthy northern states they ask, "How much have you got?" In the South where pedigrees are so much treasured, they ask: "Who was your granfather?" But out in the wide-open west they have only one question: "What can you do?"

Dr. Foreman

Action in Religion

IT is a fair question. If the answer is "Nothing," then it does not make any difference at all what a man can answer to the other three questions.

To be sure, they look at this differently in the Orient. According to the ancient philosophy of the East, it is only the inferior man who rushes around doing things. The superior man sits and thinks. The West's admiration for action, and the Orient's admiration for contemplation, enter into religion itself. The typical Oriental "saint" may be a man who never turned his hand to a piece of work in all his life. The typical western "saint" is likely to be a very busy and active sort of person.

It is all the more interesting that Jesus combined both the western and the eastern ideas of religion. He was a man of prayer and meditation, yet a man of strenuous life too.

Life of Action

THE Gospel by Mark, reliable tradition claims, actually comes from Simon Peter. During Peter's missionary travels he used to speak often about the life and work of Jesus, and young John Mark would take down notes of what he said. Then later Mark worked up into a connected "gospel" many of those story-sermons. It is easy to believe the tradition, because this gospel sounds so much like what would appeal to Peter, a man of action.

At any rate, in Mark we have very little said about Jesus' teaching, a great deal said about what he did. Jesus does not have a spare minute, not a day off.

What about the rest of us? Suppose some biographer were to write up you who read these lines. Suppose he could use in his story only your actions, not your words or ideas. Would there be enough material for him to write a book?

WHILE Mark almost never tells us what Jesus taught, he does tell us that Jesus was a teacher In describing the synagogue-service in Capernaum Mark tells us the people were astonished, and even two demon-ridden men were struck down with terror.

What Jesus said that astonished the people and alarmed the demoniacs we do not know. Possibly Peter, who was there, may have been too busy watching people's faces to hear what Jesus was saying. However that may be, Jesus is here introduced to us not only as a doer but as a thinker and teacher.

Life is not all action; it is also thought. Jesus' acts were full of power; so and not less so were his ideas, words, teachings. Look at the rest of us again: We may be full of talk, but how much power is there in our ideas?

Straightway

ONE word is found many times in Mark's stories of Jesus: "Straightway" as the older versions have it,—that is, immediately. It is not just Mark's style. It is his way of bringing out something important about Jesus' life and habits.

There were no blank spaces, no pages unwritten, no empty gaps, no waiting-around, in Jesus' life. In his life one activity followed on the heels of another. He had no time to waste, and he wasted none.

Let the honest reader try to make a realistic budget of his time. At the beginning of a week let him draw up a kind of chart showing how he expects to spend his 16 waking hours each day,—so much for work, recreation, study and so forth. Then at the end of the week let him ask himself: Where did my time go? He will often have to admit that he did not really live the whole day, any day,—only parts of it. Living as a Christian means living one's full time, living one of those 16 hours a day.

TRAP SHOOTING

Cincinnati Trapshooter Invented First 'Clay' Pigeon 70 Years Ago

"Clay pigeons" are not made of clay and do not resemble pigeons.

It will probably come as a surprise to the average shooter today that the first demonstration of the original "flying saucer" which sparked the modern clay target (and that's still not made of clay), was held at Coney Island, New York, in 1880 by its inventor. He was a Cincinnati trapshooter named George Ligowsky.

Ligowsky invented his clay pigeon as a substitute for a substitute. Ligowsky's clay bird was intended to replace the glass ball which in turn had been invented to replace live pigeons in trap shooting. If you've forgotten, trap shooting gets its name from the once popular sport of shooting live pigeons as the were released from traps. The public outcry against shooting pigeons helped produce the glass balls. But glass balls weren't the only things the outcry produced.

Old timers with good memories may remember some of the Rube Goldberg-like attempts that were made to imitate pigeons in flight. But few modern shooters have any conception of the weird procession of gadgets that began shortly after the Civil War and didn't end even after George Ligowsky invented the clay pigeon.

Depending upon how far back you want to go, the inspiration for trap shooting can be stretched back almost to earliest recorded history. Homer mentions "popinjay shooting" in the ILIAD. In this sport the Greeks shot at a dove. During the Middle Ages this sport was also popular. Usually a popinjay was a stuffed parrot mounted atop a pole. When live birds were used, a cord kept the bird from flying away The last public popinjay shoot with bow and arrow in England occurred in 1792.

Trap shooting was first practiced in England even prior to about 1856 by "frequenters" of "low public houses". Then the Earl of Stamford took up the sport and made it respectable. The first fashionable pigeon club near London was given the name "Old Hats". Its name derives from the fact that old top hats were used to cover the holes in which the pigeons were kept prior to release when the hats were pulled off the holes. The use of old hats for trap covers was discarded rather soon and innumerable devices were invented with sliding covers instead of hats which could be opened with cords by an attendant behind the shooter.

Glass Balls Used First

The English used native pigeons and later imported Belgian pigeons and also used their own larks and sparrows. Low characters even hooded the birds to make them fly slower.

While there was a public clamor against shooting live pigeons over traps, substitutes for live birds seem to have been thought of before criticism of bird shooting became vociferous. But once a successful substitute was perfected, live pigeon shooting was practically doomed.

Glass balls were the first substitutes for live birds and Charles Portlock of Boston, Massachusetts, is credited with their invention in 1866, but it was not until many years later when such famed shots as Captain A. H. Bogardus, Dr. W. F. Carter, and others made long-run records with balls that glass balls received their biggest use. By that time clay pigeons which the English called "mud saucers" were beginning to fly.

Balls made of resin were tried These had to be brittle to break, and frequently they weren't brittle enough Light pottery balls which it was claimed would dissolve after rains also came along. And a hopeful fellow brought out a ball made of what was advertised as a fertilizer.

It took the combined efforts of an Englishman and an American to figure out a scheme to attach one end of an elastic cord to a post and the other to a ball. You pulled the ball just about to the point where the cord would break. Then you let it go and shot at it. No fooling, this was patented in 1888.

Then along came a "gyro trap" that shot a propeller-like target into the air. This device was popular for a time in this country, England, France, Belgium, and India. A variation was a "flying top" that had a propeller mounted in a hunk of clay.

Another idea introduced after the clay pigeon was a kind of brass saucer filled with powdered charcoal that was supposed to explode into a cloud of black dust when a pasteboard that held it in place was shot out. Later similar birds were filled with bran.

Many Gadgets Invented

The "Tin pigeon" didn't live long either. It was shaped somewhat like a conventional clay target with a metal disc attached to it by a small chain. The disc was supposed to disengage from its position in the target and dangle on the chain when it was struck by a pellet. Trouble was the disc didn't always disengage when struck or it disengaged as soon as it was thrown into the air.

George Ligowsky, inventor of the clay target, must have tried most of the peculiar gadgets that his contemporaries had dreamed up and figured that if someone didn't call a stop, trapshooters would all go haywire wondering whether their next target was going to erupt into smoke, feathers, or fertilizer.

According to the story, Ligowsky was at the seashore one day idly watching youngsters skipping shells over the water. Presumably his eyes followed the shells as they arched through the air and perhaps he even began to "lead" the shells with an imaginary shotgun. The records are not elaborate, but it can be assumed that he picked up some shells and conjectured that the inverted saucer shape of a shell was what gave it its stability in flight. A perfectly circular saucer would have even greater stability.

In the year 1880 Ligowsky gave his first exhibition of his clay pigeon, but like many inventors, he didn't have easy sailing. He made the mistake of making his clay pigeon of clay Being new at it, he didn't realize that you don't make clay targets of clay. He made an even worse mistake . he fired his clay targets in a kiln until they were almost as hard as bricks. They were so hard that frequently they wouldn't break at all. Whon you'd hit them, they'd ring like a bell That could have been the death knell of the clay pigeon if Ligowsky had not abandoned clay.

Orange Targets Popular

Manufacturing modern trap targets (let's just stop calling them clay targets) isn't a hard job as it's performed by one of the country's biggest producers, Western Cartridge Company. The molten mixture of pitch and limestone is poured into water-cooled moulds in a continuous process and they stream out of the machines on endless belts Just before they're painted, they're trimmed off. Then they're stacked 15 high into corrugated fibre boxes and away they go ready to be broken by shooters.

When targets pour out of the moulding machines, they are black, but they receive a swatch of color. These colors include white, orange, red, yellow, and pink. Different kinds of background against which targets are thrown require targets with contrasting colors. In the Pacific northwest orange and red are favored. At the Iowa state shoot only orange targets have been used for years, and in Cuba you'll generally find pink targets.

After its long and bizarre background, the modern white flyer trap target looks like a very simple thing It is, yet you'd be surprised to know how many different words it takes to describe it. The flat top is called the poker chip, the circular rim about the chip is called the ledge, and the rounded part that leads down to the side is the dome. The flat side is the flange. One of the most popular targets has sixteen socrings on the underside which help break it into pieces even if lightly hit by only a few shot pellets.

While white flyers must be brittle enough to break when struck by only one or two pellets, they must also be strong enough to be shipped piled 15 high. On top of that they must hold together when being thrown from a trap with enough force to send them spinning out at 60 miles an hour revolving at the rate of about 5,000 revolutions per minute

Of course what makes the modern white flyer of interest and of practical use is the gadget that sends it spinning through the air. It's the throwing device called the trap. There are various types, one for trap shooting, another for skeet and one for practice. Some are released mechanically and some electrically.

Although some people can throw their own targets, usually two people are required, one to pitch and one to shoot. The thrower stands behind and at one side of the gunner and if he wants to put his friends shooting skill to a real test, he can throw just about any kind of target that's in the book. If you want some fun, pack a handtrap and a ease of targets in your car the next time you head for open country.

Trap Shooting Originated in America

There is some doubt as to whether shooting at live pigeons with a gun originated in this country or England. The earliest date encountered seems to place the origin of the sport in America. Apparently Cincinnati was one of the first places where trap shooting was organized. In 1931, about 20 years before the great slaughter of passenger pigeons really got under way, Cincinnati shooters not only used passenger pigeons in their traps but also quail. Around 1900 English sparrows were used in the middle west.

Rex Layne May Be A Dempsey

By GRANTLAND RICE

IT HAS BEEN A NUMBER of hunter's moons since a young fellow by the name of Jack Dempsey came out of Utah and Colorado to set the boxing game on fire.

Dempsey was 24 years old when he won the heavyweight championship from Jess Willard at Toledo in 1919. That was a trifle over 31 years ago.

Grantland Rice

Dempsey lifted the ring game out of the morass at that time. He served notice on his arrival by knocking out Fred Fulton, a leading contender, in some 17 seconds. And Fulton was rated one of the best fighters of that time, close to the top. He was around 6 feet 4 or 5 with a deadly left hook. He could punch and he could box. But Dempsey, weighing 180, moved in like a western tornado and one punch was enough. Fulton could whip most of the heavyweights around today.

Now another young fighter by the name of Rex Layne comes out of Utah with a good chance to give the ring game a big lift.

Big 260-pound Jess Willard was heavyweight champion when Jack Dempsey arrived. Ezzard Charles, weighing 182 pounds, is champion as young Layne arrives on the scene.

I don't believe Ezzard Charles could have beaten the Willard of 1919 and I am fairly sure that Layne couldn't have gone more than a round or two with Dempsey of that year. Which proves nothing as far as 1951 is concerned.

Layne is a fine young prospect. He is on the hungry side, as Dempsey was. He is dead game and he can take a punch. He is supposed to be a hard puncher, which he had no chance to prove against the retreating, slippery Walcott.

One point is dead certain. Layne shouldn't be rushed. He isn't ready yet. He needs more hard work—more road work, more conditioning. The one thing that can ruin young Layne is the game itself.

It Can Happen

As the football campaign of 1950 progressed the usual number of odd happenings and offside incidents took place. Unexplainable things happen each fall in football, and 1950 has been no exception.

For example—there is Maryland. Jim Tatum's big, experienced team goes to Georgia and gets wrecked 27 to 7. Two weeks later Maryland rambles to Michigan State and smashes that powerful outfit 34 to 7 It was Michigan State's only defeat. Then N.C. State beats Maryland 14 to 13. That's a dizzy ferris wheel to follow.

Then there's the western tangle, headed by U.C.L.A. U.C.L.A. beats Stanford 21 to 7. California wrecks U.C.L.A. 35 to 0. Then Stanford and California tie. U.S.C. gives California an even game and is unlucky to lose. California beats U.C.L.A. 35 to 0. Then U.C.L.A. beats U.S.C. 39 to 0.

In the South, Vanderbilt beats Alabama 27 to 22. Alabama beats Tulane 26 to 14. So Tulane turns around and murders Vanderbilt 34 to 7.

Columbia whips Cornell. Pennsylvania runs over Columbia 34 to 0. So Cornell beats Pennsylvania 13 to 6. This is quite enough to prove that you can't take comparative scores in trying to pick winners, or losers. It doesn't work a lick.

The oddest turn of the season came on the final day of the Big Nine race.

Michigan at that time was well behind Ohio State and Illinois for the Big Nine title. Michigan and Wisconsin were tied for third and fourth places. Yet Michigan not only won the crown, but won without completing a single first down. You can say this is the first time any such thing ever happened in the histohy of football.

Tunney and Louis

Gene Tunney was a heavyweight champion who quit well before his time.

The two cases, meaning Tunney and Louis, are quite different. Gene had picked up over $900,000 in the second Dempsey fight and over $500,000 against Tom Heeney. Taxes were thin in those days and Tunney carried home most of what he'd made. Taxes have hurt Louis.

In addition to this, Tunney was sick of at least a good many angles of the fight game that were the same then as they are now, and will be a hundred years from now.

It would have been interesting to see how far Gene Tunney could have gone. Those who followed him were Max Schmeling, Jack Sharkey, Primo Carnera, Max Baer and Jim Braddock. He could have walked through this collection without picking up a half-dozen beads of perspiration.

Gene would have been in much better physical shape and would also have boxed their collective ears off. And it so happens that Tunney was a pretty fair puncher.

Jimmy Braddock, who whipped Baer and is one of the gamest, would have been outclassed by Tunney the night he beat the tired and tottering Baer.

Tunney could have moved through this list—and retired unbeaten.

What makes 'em so lickin' good?

BUTTER!

How those vegetables disappear when you add lots of butter! Children love the flavor of golden butter — so rich in the vitamins they need. Its natural golden color comes from rich golden cream —since four pints of cream go into the making of each pound of butter.

For nutrition, for health, for downright goodness . . there's nothing finer than the high-score Iowa butter for which our creamery has built such a reputation. Use butter generously in cooking, and at every meal.

GOV. BEARDSLEY HAS RECOMMENDED "NO NEW TAXES" IN IOWA

There was welcome news for Iowa taxpayers in Governor William S. Beardsley's second inaugural address, the theme of which was: spend wisely, tax wisely.

The Governor recommended a sound budget, no new taxes and no increases in taxes, and the applause which followed this recommendation is a good indication that members of the legislature are in full agreement that there should be no new or increased taxes voted during this session.

In view of the fact that Iowans now are paying the heaviest federal tax bill in history and that additional federal taxes are certain to be levied within the next few months, taxpayers welcome the words of the Governor when he said:

"It is of paramount importance that we maintain the present sound condition of the financial affairs of the state. We must continue to operate the state government within he curren income, and avoid the necessity of levying new taxes or increasing the tax burden. This can be done and should be the number one goal of this General Assembly."

During the past biennium the state administration has lived within its current income, not resorting to deficit spending as has been the policy in Washington. The sound financial condition of the state was made possible without increases in taxes and with no state property tax for state government.

Governor Beardsley made several recommendations for holding the line on new or increased taxes. For example, he recommended paying all unpaid World War II bonus claims amounting to approximately 8 million dollars from unappropriated funds in the state treasury. He recommended increasing the highway patrol strength from 160 to 225 patrolmen and that the annual charge for driver's license be increased from 25 cents to 50 cents as a means of meeting the additi nal cost of this increase. And he suggested that the services of the state government and its political subdivisions to the citiz- performs those services which examined "to see that the state performs hose services which it is equipped to do well, leaving to the individual citizens and other branches of government the responsibilities which they can best perform."

"Your present state administration is committed in principle to the proposition that tax monies should be wisely and efficently spent," Governor Beardsley said.

This sound, business-like approach to the problem of taxation and spending brought favorable comment from legislative leaders and is good news to the over-taxed taxpayer who is being salled upon to dig deeper into his pocketbook for federal taxes.

SAVE YOUR BREATH, BOYS!
IT'S THE COUNTY WHERE YOU LIVE THAT COUNTS IN IOWA'S NEW "RESIDENCE-OF-DRIVER CONTEST--NOT WHERE THE ACCIDENT HAPPENS.
GRUNDY COUNTY
TAMA COUNTY
Official Scorekeeper... State Department of Public Safety

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

It's up to you to make your county count in Iowa's new "Residence-of-Driver" contest!

It's a new yardstick to measure just which county has the best drivers. Naturally, you want your county to win. In a contest like this, of course, everybody wins when everybody works. The prizes for safe driving any time are lives, health and property saved.

Here's how the "Residence-of-Driver" contest works: The State Department of Public Safety, as official scorekeeper, keeps track of the county of residence of each driver involved in a reportable 1951 Iowa traffic accident. At the end of the year, they'll figure out each county's ratio of accidents in proportion to the number of autos registered in the county. Those ratios, plus figures indicating each county's improvement over last year, will help determine the winners.

How do you improve your county's drivers and help your county win?

Civic groups, clubs and all organizations can get safe-driving information and speakers from your county branch of the Iowa Safety Congress. You can make it a matter of honor and civic pride, as well as common sense, to drive safely. You can encourage and cooperate with law enforcement agencies.

And you can watch for "Safety Sake's" weekly messages in this newspaper space and in the familiar yellow "stop" posters.

Remember: It's up to you to make your county count in Iowa's new "Residence-of-Driver" contest!

Junior High Whips Corwith January 13th

The Junior High "Rockets" won their 3rd game in a 'row and 6th of the season against Corwith January 13 at Corwith, 31-19.

The game was close all the way with Klemme leading 5-2, 9-7 and 19-17 by quarters. Don Thieman was high with 12, Barz 9, Dulmes 6, Neuberger and Jacobs 2.

The "Rockettes" scored only 8 points and went down to defeat 31-8 for their fourth defeat this season as against 3 wins. Bridges and Barz led with 3 points each and Christians had 2.

BY RAY EASTMAN

Mary had only been gone for two weeks, bu it seemed like two years to Joe. Home just wasn't the same without a wife and mother around.

He glanced down at the clock on the dashboard as he neared the grade crossing. Train due in town in 10 minutes if his watch wasn't slow. Better hurry up, just in case. He nudged the accelerator.

Joe looked up from the dashboard just as he hit the grade crossing—just in time to catch a glimpse of a huge yellow headlight bearing down on him. It was the last thing he ever saw.

Mary's magazine flew out of her hand at the shock of the crash. It lay forgotten as the train ground to a halt, and she and the other passengers peered out into the dark night.

The excited buzz in the car stilled as the conductor came through.

"Stay in your seats, please, folks," he urged. "Some durn fool tried to beat the train to the crossing, and . . well, I don't think you'd dare to see it. We oughta get going again in about half an hour."

Mary sighed and picked up her magazine. Might as well finish her story. She hoped Joe would hear about the accident so he wouldn't wonder why the train was so late.

Twin Lake Go-Getters Meet

The Twin Lake Go-Getters met January 13th at the home of Linda Swalve. Eleven members and one leader answered roll call, a well balanced meal. We all decided that the secretary send a get well card to our leader, Mrs. Neuhring, who is in the hospital. A group discussion by all on "Fabric and Color" was given. We all cut layettes which will be sewed by our next meeting. They will then be given to a needy family. A lunch was then served by the hostess.

High Scoring

FERTILE AND KLEMME GIRLS SCORE 138 POINTS FRIDAY EVE

A total of 138 points was scored here Friday night before the Klemme girls edged Fertile 71-67. Fertile held a 40-34 halftime lead but Klemme outscored its opponents 25-11 in the 3rd quarter. Nellie Greiman with 33 and Iris Schaefer with 24 points each contributed to the Klemme victory while Fertile's Doris Ouverson with 29 points and Bjelland with 26 added to the loser's total. Fertile scored a 53-40 win over Klemme in the boys game. Purcell had 26 points for Fertile and Harley Barz scored 12 for Klemme.

ERNEST GERARDI NAMED V. P., LLOYD SHERWOOD, SECRETARY

Meeting Will Be Called To Discuss Re-Organizing Civic Club

Between 25 and 30 business nen met at the grade school dining room last Wednesday evening for an oyster supper and to elect officers for the Klemme Civic Club for the coming year.

Bill Ayres, State Conservation Officer from Goodell was resent and showed two fine eels of colored motion pictures n the blue and snow geese conentration on the Mississippi iver. This is the world's largest concentration of geese, and in fact all of the blue and snow geese in the world are on this migratory flight.

Mr. Ayres showed another reel of all of the various kinds of fish native to Iowa and showed various scenes of the fish being caught. He then gave a short talk on the aims of the Conservation Commission and answered a lot of questions.

Election Held

After disposing of old business, Dr. Dulmes, president then called for the annual election of officers.

W. F. Pavey, who served as vice-president the past year was elected president for the coming year. Ernest Gerardi was elected vice-president and Lloyd Sherwood was elected secretary-treasurer to succeed Martin Barz.

Talk ReOrganization

A number of members present at the meeting expressed their opinions on reorganizing the club. A meeting of all business owners and managers of business organizations will be called at a later date to discuss plans for a new club.

One plan presented that created a lot of favorable comment was to organize two clubs: One a strictly business owners and managers club or Chamber of Commerce. The other was an organization for the younger men in the town, young business owners under 35, and all young men up to that age connected with a business, such as clerks, helpers, etc. This latter club would more or less replace the old Civic Club.

Nothing definite will be decided until the business men meet. All business men should be at the meeting at which reorganization will be discussed. If you have any ideas, bring your suggestions to the meeting.

Junior High Defeats Kanawha 25-19

The Junior High Rockets avenged a previous defeat by Kanawha here January 10th by beating them 25-19 in their best game of the year.

The score at the half-time was 9 to 9 and 16-15 at the 3rd quarter. The scoring was very even by the Rockets. Thieman was high with 8, Dulmes 7, Barz 5, Neuberger 3, and Cecil Jacobs 2.

An oddity of the game was the two points that Mewes from Kanawha made for us when the score was 17 15 in our favor. He had dribbled the full length of the court to score, (for us). Our record is now 5-3.

The Junior High girls lost a close one to the Kanawha team 24-23 in a poorly played game. We had beaten them previously 31-24. Score at the half was 10-10. Montgomery led Klemme with 10 and Bridges had 8. A very good crowd attended the game. The Rockettes record is now 3-3.

Choosing Father

"WILL YOU HELP my brother and me solve a terrible problem?" writes Vivian Bates, from a Philidelphia suburb. "We are 16 and 14. Five years ago my mother divorced my father, taking us with her to Reno, and marrying there, on the day of her divorce, a man to whom she had long been devoted. My father had just been appointed to the managership of a California branch of his company, and he moved there. The arrangement was that we were to spend summers with him, which we have done, and that when Bob was 14 we should have the right to choose which parent we wanted to live with.

"My mother has a little boy by this second marriage, and also the care of a 10-year-old daughter of my stepfather's first marriage; our house is very small, and money scarce, although my father pays generously for my support and Bob's. Both my brother and I have decided that we want to go to my father, who now has a comfortable home, with a beloved aunt of ours, who is widowed, keeping house for him.

"Bob and I love our father, and although we love our mother, too, we feel that we can do little to make her happy in the difficult circumstances here. But she cries bitterly at the idea of our going away and tells us very frankly that she cannot make ends meet without the allowance our father makes her for our expenses. She says we owe her more than we ever can repay, and of course we do. But I feel that if I am to go to college I want it to be a California college, and Bob and I never want to be separated. So we are writing to you to see if you can suggest any argument to my mother that will make her feel that this is the right thing to do."

False Position

Here is one more case of a divorce that puts innocent children into an absolutely false position, and of a mother so blind that she cannot see how serious an injustice she is doing to her son and daughter. While married to their father, in their small childhood, she transferred her affections to another man dragged the children through the bewilderment of a Reno experience, and a second hasty marriage, and then established them in one of those mixed households infinitely confusing to immature minds.

"... she cries bitterly ..."

Vivian and Bob, between ruptured relationships, step-relationships, half-relationships, between the curious fact of their banished father helping to support his successor, and their mother claiming from them the loyalty in which she has been so conspicuously lacking herself, have been victims of an adult selfishness rare even in this world of broken homes and broken vows.

A Hard Life

She is attempting to hold them now against their own will in a home infinitely less comfortable and dignified than that their father offers them. Any woman reading their story knows just how much work there is in a small household containing a baby boy, three older children, and a man and his wife; just how much picking-up, table-setting, bedmaking, dishwashing falls to Vivian's share. Even if her mother were the least selfish woman in the world, even if the circumstances were natural ones, this would be a hard life for dreaming, eager seventeen. And if Vivian were offered an escape from it, such a mother would encourage her to take it.

As it is, I can only advise Vivian and Bob to write their father that they are coming to him, and keep such arrangements as he makes secret from their mother until almost the day of their departure. Then they must briskly and quietly pack and get away, giving her as little time as possible for lamentations and reproach.

Afterward, Vivian and Bob, don't forget to send affectionate letters to your mother, small reminders to other members of the family that you have not forgotten them.

No matter what your mother says, or even writes after you leave, forget everything and maintain a friendly footing. In time she will forgive you, although since she is capable of so peculiar a conception of her duties and dignities as a mother, she may never concede that you did anything but treat her unfairly.

As a matter of fact she has had her own way throughout; leaving a good husband, taking two affectionate children away from their father, putting a stepfather over them and sharing maternal care.

"This New Dry Yeast is the best I've used"

Grand Champion Cook Wins 179 Prizes

Iowa's 1950 Grand Champion cook—that's Mrs. Oscar Vik of Onawa, Iowa! State Fair officials awarded Mrs. Vik more than 80 prizes for her entries, an event that came as no surprise to anyone who had seen Mrs. Vik walk off with 99 first prizes at the 1950 Clay County Fair held earlier. Grand champion Mrs. Vik has used Fleischmann's Yeast for many years. She says, "Fleischmann's New Improved Active Dry Yeast is the best ever. It's so easy to use and so fast too. I'm very pleased with it."

Yes, everybody agrees with America's prize-winning cooks that it's the easiest, fastest yeast yet. You just add it to warm water, stir it well and it's completely dissolved! You can depend on it for fast-rising action, prize-winning results when you bake at home. Get Fleischmann's New Improved Active Dry Yeast today.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Truman Rejects Hoover Demand For a New U. S. Foreign Policy; Allies Approve Army of 750,000

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Here is another view of a section of the city corridor through which the first marines fought their way to the Hamhung beachhead. Weary leathernecks used every pause to catch a nap, even on the frozen ground. Over 11,000 of them were killed or wounded.

HOOVER:

A New Foreign Policy

Herbert Hoover demanded a new foreign policy for the United States in a major radio-television speech. He urged the U.S. to concentrate on holding the Atlantic and Pacific oceans with the island outposts of Britain, Japan, Formosa and the Philippines. He then warned against sending more men and money to Europe.

The former president's speech created a buzz of controversy in Washington. Democratic officials called it "rank isolationism" and even some top G.O.P. policy makers, including Sen. Robert Taft of Ohio, did not agree in all respects with Mr. Hoover.

This is how Mr. Hoover saw the situation:

"It is clear continental Europe has not in three years of our aid developed a unity of purpose and that will power necessary for its own defense.

"It is clear that our British friends are flirting with appeasement of Communist China.

"It is clear that the U.N. is in a fog of debate and indecision on whether to appease or not to appease."

He then went on to outline his seven "principles and action" for American policy:

1. Preserve "this western hemisphere Gibraltar."

2. Hold the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, seeking the cooperation of Great Britain.

3. Arm our air and naval forces "to the teeth," free Japan and help her rearm, and stiffen the defenses of Formosa and the Philippines.

4. Reduce other expenses, balance the budget, and roll back inflation.

5. Aid other nations that show "spirit and strength" in defending themselves against the Communists.

6. No appeasement anywhere, "no more Tehrans and Yaltas."

7. Watchful waiting in Europe pending its own development of "unity and will" to resist aggression.

Much of the criticism against Mr. Hoover's proposals centered around the belief that the Pacific and Atlantic oceans can be made a defense line. Some critics pointed out that failure to continue aid to our friends and allies would isolate us and eventually we would find ourselves without any friends in the world.

President Truman issued a statement shortly after Hoover's speech which amounted to a firm rejection of the former president's demand that troops and money be withheld from Europe.

The President said the Atlantic pact nations had shown they "mean business" about setting up a common defense and asserted the protection of western Europe was vital to United States security.

"Let there be no mistake," Truman said. "The unity of the nations of western Europe and the North Atlantic area is vital to their security and ours."

He then announced that soldiers of pact nations—presumably including U. S. troops—will be training together "within the next few weeks."

EUROPE:

Army of 750,000

The 12 Atlantic pact nations pledged themselves to try to match America's partial war mobilization. They pledged themselves to build an unprecedented international peacetime army of 750,000 men to stop Communist aggression. This is the army that General Eisenhower will command.

The council concluded its two-day conference in Brussels with the issuance of a formal communique which included:

1. Establishment of an integrated force under centralized control and command. This force to be composed of contingents contributed by the participating governments.

2. An order to United States, Great Britain and France to start negotiations with the Germans to persuade them to agree to cooperate with the west in limited rearmament.

3. Creation of a new defense production board "charged with expanding and accelerating" rearmament; it will supersede the Atlantic powers old military production and supply board.

It will be many months however before General Eisenhower will have anything more than a token force. But observers agreed that at last the western powers have gotten down to the serious business of building a defense against communism.

CHRISTMAS:

A False Gaiety

The world—that part which still celebrates the Birth of Christ—went all-out for Christmas 1950, but it was a false gaiety. Those parts of the world where there was no strife could not forget that men still died believing in the dignity of man and the principle of freedom.

But people tried to make it a merry Christmas in many lands. In the United States department stores recorded near record sales.

Frenchmen, even while many of them feared it might be the last Christmas before World War III, sent sales records to new heights in the stores, buying for feasting and giving which would hide from their children the frayed nerves of their elders.

Britain, too, was determined to put the best face on matters and enjoy the holiday.

Brussels set the tone for Belgium. The city was gaily festooned for the holiday, the mood of worry successfully hidden and the celebration testifying to Belgium's renewed economic strength.

West Germany tried to forget that she was the object of a tug of war between Communism and non-Communism. Christmas sales hit a post-war peak.

In East Germany there was no observance. There were no displays in the stores and no decorations anywhere except for a few forlorn wreaths here and there, hung up by the less timid householders.

That was the world on Christmas day—divided into two parts, one trying to be happy with a false gaiety, the other grim and foreboding.

CHINA:

Refuses to Negotiate

If the world held any hopes that the Chinese would talk peace in Korea, they were killed when China's Foreign Minister Chou En-lai said they would not negotiate with the United Nations Korean-truce team.

Chou then went on to name his price for peace in Korea.

1. Removal of the United States seventh fleet from Formosan waters.

2. Withdrawal of "foreign troops" from Korea.

3. A seat in the United Nations for Communist China

Thus ended any hopes that the Chinese Communists would dicker with the three-man truce committee set up by the General Assembly to try to bring about a cease-fire in Korea. Peiping did not even bother to transmit a copy of its blast to Lake Success, seemingly content to let its radio demands remain the last word.

The Chinese statement contained the usual propaganda lines.

Meanwhile, a warning to China by Malcolm MacDonald, Britain's commissioner-general for southeast Asia, that they are heading for disaster caused a stir of comment throughout the east.

MacDonald said in part: ". . . . Should the Chinese government stay hostile to the western nations, oppose the Asian powers who strive for eastern and western co-operation, and defy the United Nations, then we could only adapt our attitude accordingly."

Observers were quick to point out that such a statement would not have been made unless previously approved by London. It would seem a blunt warning to Peiping that Britain is getting fed up. For this reason many observers believed it was the first indication of a get-tough policy by the British.

EISENHOWER:

Concerted Effort Needed

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, supreme commander of the Atlantic pact armies, urged Americans to settle down to a concerted effort to meet the emergency confronting this country and stop partisan squabbling over the nation's leadership.

In his first formal press conference as supreme commander, he asked for "no more business as usual, no more profits as usual, no more working hours as usual."

Observers were interested in the general's view on including German troops in the new western European army. He said he wanted his former foes included but emphasized his belief that the Germans should make their military contributions only on a "voluntary basis" to be a really effective combat organization.

"In accepting anything like that," he said, "we must be sure we are getting strength and no weakness."

Of one thing Eisenhower was positive. The nation's strength is so great that its people can do "anything in the world they set out to do."

CASUALTIES:

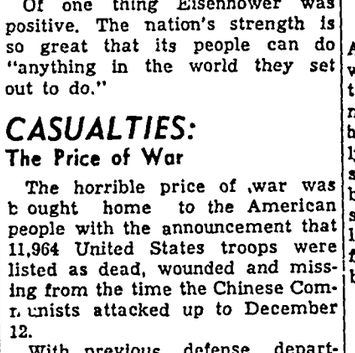
The Price of War

The horrible price of war was brought home to the American people with the announcement that 11,964 United States troops were listed as dead, wounded and missing from the time the Chinese Communists attacked up to December 12.

With previous defense department figures, total American casualties for the war exceeded 42,000. The report said the Chinese Reds had suffered approximately 120,000 casualties during the same period.

The defense department's last previous total of casualties, whose next of kin had been notified, numbered 36,421. These included 5,518 killed, 25,587 wounded and 5,316 missing. Of the wounded 662 died later.

Heads Agency



Charles E. Wilson, former president of General Electric company, poses for cameramen as he took over his duties as head of the Defense Production Authority which has authority similar to the powers vested in the war production board in World War II.

RUSSIA:

Race of Sea Power

The Soviet Union has entered the race of sea power. Jane's Fighting Ships, the authoritative yearbook on the navies of the world, reported the Russians put into service last June a 35,000 to 37,000 ton battleship with towers for firing guided missiles.

Jane's also reported that 350 to 370 Russian submarines were believed already in service, with 120 more building.

CIVIL DEFENSE

House Votes Plan to Build Shelters

The house voted 247 to 1 a civil-defense plan that would cost an estimated $3,100,000. More than two thirds of the total amount would go for bomb shelters, with the federal government paying half of their cost and local and state governments putting up the rest.

The plan was sent to the senate and quick approval was expected. A somewhat similar program had been approved unanimously by the senate's armed-services committee.

One member of the congressional atomic committee, said it was estimated that first-rate civil defense measures, plus 12 minutes' advance warning of possible attack, might reduce casualties in an atomic attack by as much as 50 per cent. For this reason an adequate defense was imperative.

Economical Main Dishes

WHEN THE BUDGET'S sorely pressed, food, like every other item, will come in for its share of economy.

Inexpensive meat cuts, extended wisely with nourishing and filling foods like potatoes, lentils and vegetables offer tasty substitutes for roasts, chops and steak.

You can add interest to meats by varying the carbohydrate (starchy) food with them, like parsleyed spaghetti and savory noodles.

Parsley Spaghetti with Barbecued Lamb
(Serves 4-6)

- 1 chopped medium onion
- 2 tablespoons butter
- ¼ cup cider vinegar
- 2 teaspoons brown sugar
- 1 can tomato paste
- 1½ cups water
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- Few drops tabasco sauce
- 2 cups cooked lamb, cubed
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 3 quarts boiling water
- 8 ounces thin spaghetti
- 2 tablespoons butter, melted
- ¼ cup finely chopped parsley

Saute onion in butter until tender. Add vinegar, sugar, tomato paste, water, worcestershire sauce and tabasco sauce. Cover and simmer 15 minutes. Add lamb; simmer until heated. Meanwhile, add salt to rapidly boiling water. Gradually add spaghetti so that water continues to boil. Cook uncovered, stirring occasionally, until tender. Drain in colander. Toss with melted butter and finely chopped parsley. Serve with barbecued lamb.

Skillet Noodles and Beef
(Serves 4-6)

- 3 tablespoons butter
- 1 cup thinly sliced onions
- 1 cup chopped celery
- 1 pound ground beef
- 2 cups diced raw carrots
- 1 No. 2½ can tomatoes
- 1 cup water
- 1 tablespoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon chili powder
- 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
- 8 ounces egg noodles

Melt butter in large heavy skillet over low heat. Add onions and celery; saute 5 minutes. Add ground beef, stirring occasionally, until meat is brown. Add remaining ingredients, including the uncooked noodles; mix thoroughly. Cover skillet; simmer 40 minutes, stirring occasionally.

Baked Sauerkraut and Frankfurters
(Serves 4-6)

- 1 No. 2½ can sauerkraut
- 2 teaspoons sugar
- ½ teaspoon caraway seeds
- 2 medium cooking apples
- ½ cup thin onion slices
- ¼ cup melted butter
- 6 frankfurters

In a mixing bowl, combine sauerkraut, sugar and caraway seeds. Place half of sauerkraut mixture in bottom of a 2-quart baking dish. Core apples and cut into ¼-inch slices. Place half of onion and apple slices on sauerkraut mixture; dot with butter. Cover with remaining sauerkraut mixture. Add remaining onion and apple slices. Arrange frankfurters on top. Cover and bake in moderate oven (350°) 45 minutes. Serve immediately.

Lamb Paprika
(Serves 4)

- 4 slices bacon
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 1 medium onion, sliced
- 1 pound shoulder lamb or mutton, cut in small pieces
- Flour
- Pinch of rosemary
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 to 1½ teaspoons paprika, to taste
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- ⅔ cup canned tomato
- ¾ cup beef bouillon
- ½ teaspoon caraway seeds
- 3 medium potatoes, sliced

Fry bacon and remove from pan. Add butter. Fry onion and meat, dredged lightly with flour, until golden brown. Blend seasonings except caraway seeds, with tomatoes and bouillon. Pour over meat. Place bacon slices on top of meat. Cover and bake in moderate oven (350°) for 30 minutes. Arrange potatoes on top of meat and baste with sauce in pan. Cover and bake another 30 minutes. Tie caraway seeds in muslin bag and drop in center of pan before baking. Remove when serving.

Tamale Pie

- 1 cup corn meal
- 3½ cups water
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 tablespoon chili powder
- 1 green pepper
- 2 tablespoons onion flakes
- ½ cup hot water
- ¾ pound ground beef
- ½ teaspoon pepper
- 2 teaspoons chili powder
- 1 No. 2 can tomatoes
- ¾ cup chopped ripe olives
- ½ cup shredded cheese

Make mush of corn meal and boiling salted water. Add olive oil and chili powder. Line casserole with ⅔ of the mush. Fry green pepper and onions (soaked in ¼ cup water) in oil until clear. Add meat, salt, pepper, chili powder. Stir until meat changes color. Add tomatoes. Simmer till thickened. Add olives. Turn into casserole. Sprinkle with cheese. Top with remaining mush. Bake in moderate oven (350°) 30 to 40 minutes.

Apple butter spoils readily because it does not have a high sugar content. Place in refrigerator after opening.

Buy spices once a year in small quantity, as they lose flavor on standing, even though not opened.

Highly seasoned sauces with many spices and high vinegar content keep well for months. Store in cool place without light.

LYNN SAYS:
Check on Food Storage To Save Money

Do not plan to keep sweet syrup on hand for long periods, as flavor deteriorates rapidly. For the time you must keep them, store in a cool dark place.

Use chicken within a day or two after purchasing, if it's fresh. Wrap loosely in waxed paper for refrigerating.

Both tea and coffee will lose flavor if they are not kept tightly covered. A cool, dry place is best for them.

Honey should not be discarded when it crystallizes. Liquefy by placing in water that is not over 140°. Higher temperature may injure flavor as well as color.

Always purchase your fish last, but store it first when you get home. The coldest place in the refrigerator, right under the freezing unit, is best for it.

All fats require a cool, dry, dark place for storage. They should be tightly covered at all times to avoid contact with strong odors which fats readily absorb.

Hattie's Garden Crescents

These tangy dinner rolls have a straight-from-the-garden appeal. Here's something different to perk up that luncheon or dinner.

Bake at 400° F. for 12 to 15 minutes • Makes about 16 crescents

Dissolve 1 cake compressed yeast (or 1 package dry granular yeast) in ¼ cup lukewarm water. Combine ¼ cup shortening, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1½ teaspoons salt,* ½ cup boiling water. Stir until dissolved. Cool to lukewarm by adding ½ cup tomato juice. Blend in 1 tablespoon each: grated onion, celery, carrot; ½ teaspoon each: garlic salt, sage. Add dissolved yeast. Measure 3½ cups sifted Pillsbury's Best Enriched Flour*. Add 2 cups of the flour and beat thoroughly. Then add remainder of flour and mix well. Knead dough 5 to 7 minutes on floured board. Let rise in warm place (85° to 90° F.) until double in bulk, 45 to 60 minutes. Divide dough into two parts. Roll each on lightly floured board to circular shape about ¼ inch thick. Sprinkle with grated Parmesan cheese. Cut each round into 8 wedges. If desired, 1 drop tabasco sauce may be added to each wedge. Roll each wedge, starting with wide end and rolling to point. Place on greased baking sheet, point-side down, and curve ends to form crescent shape. Let rise in warm place until light, about 45 to 60 minutes. Bake in moderately hot oven (400° F.) 12 to 15 minutes.

RYP HELD MEETING JAN. 8 AT BRITT

The first RYP meeting of 1951 was held at the Central States Basement in Britt, Monday, January 8 with twenty-five present. A Service Committee—John Burgardt, Edith Jensen, Ruth Upmeyer, Charles Sheets and Allen Anderson was appointed to be in charge of registration at the Officers Training School which was held the following Tuesday night at Garner. Irma Bird was nominated to represent Hancock County as candidate for Director of the State RYP. Lois Hueneman was elected to give a campaign speech for our candidate at the Officers Training School. Members were urged to attend a training school for co-operatives at Des Moines on January 26 and 27. A committee was appointed to prepare a public program to be presented in February. A report of her trip to Texas with the State Farm Bureau was given by our delegate, Irma Bird. Games were played followed by lunch served by the new 1951 officers.

Ten counties were represented by over 100 RYP members at the Officers Training School at the Garner REA Office, Tuesday, January 9. Connie Burgardt, Hancock County RYP President, presided at this meeting. Discussion on making Rural Young People's organizations more successful, were carried on by the officers while recreation leaders were taught new games and activities to be used in the county meetings. Members from ten counties were present. A program of skits, songs and a square dance exhibition was presented by the different counties. The meeting was closed by square dancing. The next Officers Training School will be held at Garner, REA building Feb. 6th.

A Current Problem—
MEETING NEW TAX DEMANDS

Iowa families making out their income tax blanks for 1950 are learning just what those recent increases mean in terms of family dollars. Careful planning and money management are more important tools than ever in helping to meet high tax demands.

This year we're facing higher taxes than usual. Most folks are taking philosophically. Their thoughts filtering through to snow-ridden U. S. troops in Korea, they're digging deep into pockets, bank accounts and savings, giving up or putting off until another year some of the things they'd planned.

There's no doubt about it. Taxes are hitting the American people hard this year. Our federal income tax was raised so recently that even those of us who had planned ahead for this tax find that it will take some tall juggling and charging of plans.

Home management specialists at Iowa State College advise folks to file returns early so as to save headaches. And if we have problems requiring professional help, the collector of internal revenue or hired experts will be much more available now than along toward March. Taxpayers who have refunds coming and who file now can expect their refund checks by the end of March. Otherwise it may be summer before refund checks are received.

Taxes Are A "Must"

Because taxes have become the fixed item they are in our family spending, experts advise us to put them right up in the same category with food and rent and clothing. With the National and international situation the way it is, we can be quite certain taxes will remain high for a number of years.

Planning ahead to next year will mean sitting down and doing some realistic figuring. First, we'll have to know our incomes. Many of us have fixed incomes. Other, such as the farm family, have a variable income influenced by many things. However, with careful figuring, we should be able to tell approximately what our income will be for the next year. Records we've kept during the past year will help us considerably.

Spending Plan

The next step is to make out a spending plan for 1950. Into this plan should go the "musts"—such as taxes, rent, food, fuel and clothing. We should overallot money a little in some of the must categories to be safe, specialists advise us. After we have figured out the musts, we can try to fit in some of the "maybe's" of spending—the extra wants that we think we can fit in.

This spending plan should be followed up by keeping a home account book so that we can see where our money is going and test the soundness of our plan. A spending plan will help us set aside money to meet taxes, and farm accounts will be grand assistance in making out next year's income tax blank.

Taxes come up year after year and it just doesn't make sense to ignore them until they are suddenly upon us. Home management specialists know what they're talking about when they say, "Careful money management can help us win out over our taxes."

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson visited at the Bob Liebendorfer home in Clear Lake Sunday evening. Bob was in bed as he had slipped and broken his left arm near the shoulder.

There was a good attendance of Masons from Klemme, Kanawha, Corwith, Britt and Garner at the County Meeting held at Garner Tuesday evening. Work was put on in the first degree and lunch was served after the meeting.

Ed. Jacobs returned home today from the Mercy hospital where he had been receiving treatment for about ten days.

IOWA DEER KILL HIGH

Iowa's deer herd, conservatively estimated at more than 5,000 animals, faced a hazardous 1950, according to Conservation Commission figures. Almost 300 deer are known to have been killed by automobiles, poachers, dogs and miscellaneous accidents. During the year 129 animals were reported killed by truck and automobile, 74 were known to have been illegally shot, and 93 met death in a wide variety of accidents. Fence collisions and dog killings were high on the miscellaneous list.

Deer, currently reported in all of Iowa's 99 counties, are most numerous along the Mississippi and Missouri river valleys, with large herds present in most of the major inland stream valleys. Heaviest deer loss, averaging 25 per county, occurred in Pottawattamie, Harrison and Shelby counties. Northeast Iowa with 23 animals killed in Allamakee and 11 in Clayton County, accounts for the second largest area loss.

MRS. MARY L .HAUPT DIED JANUARY 8TH, 1951

Mary L. Haupt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Pabbeldt, was born August 6, 1872, at Williams, Iowa, in Hamilton County, and died Monday Jan. 8, 1951, at the home of her son, Irving, living near Klemme. She attained the age of 78 years, 5 months and 2 days.

As a young girl she herded cattle on the prairie and attended a pioneer country school.

She was united in marriage with Charles Haupt in 1896 at Webster City, Iowa, and they moved to a farm in Wright County. To this union four children were born: Irving of Klemme, Mrs. Louis Loth of Belmond, Claire (who died at the age of 16 years) and a daughter who died in infancy. She also leaves to mourn her death, one sister, Mrs. Minnie Cline of Goodell, and two grandchildren, Mary Lou Loth and Karen Kay Loth.

In 1928 Mr. and Mrs. Haupt retired from the farm, moving to Belmond. There they lived for one year and then moved to Kanawha, where she has since resided.

She was preceded in death by her husband, two children, 3 sisters and one brother.

Mrs. Haupt will be greatly missed by those who were close to her, for her pleasant manner, calm spirit and strong desire for righteousness.

Funeral services were held at the Kanawha Methodist Church on Wednesday, January 10, with the Rev. R. D. Kitterman officiating. Burial was made in the Belmond cemetery.

Pall bearers were: C. C. Parks, Ed. Hall, Fred Knudsen, Oren Bamford, Avron Kreitlow and Fred Pringnitz.

Those who attended were Mr. and Mrs. Herman Priebe, Mrs. Bertha Schlei, Mr. and Mrs. Dale Schlei of Klemme; distant relatives from Klemme. J. A. Schroder of Webster City; Harold Schroder and family of Blairsburg; Leo Schroder and family of Blairsburg; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Gayer and Wm. CURB MASTITIS FOR GREATER DAIRY PROFIT

Mastitis can be prevented, and certain precautions will keep it from cutting into the profits of Iowa dairymen, says Dr. John B. Herrick, extension veterinarian at Iowa State College. The chance of cows becoming infected is greater in winter, when they are confined in the barn most of the day.

Udders are easily injured when cows are confined to the barn. This sets the stage for mastitis. Herrick says cramped stalls and high door sills are danger points and should be corrected. Poor bedding practices, cold damp stalls, or anything that sets the stage for a cold developing in the udder is bad.

The veterinarian urges using clean, sterile equipment as an aid in controling the spread of this disease. Teat cups and tubes should stand in a disinfectant solution between milkings, and teat cups should be sterilized after milking each cow. Routine use of the strip cup will help identify infected cows before they can infect the whole herd.

Another aid in preventing the disease is the use of a separate cloth or towel to wash the cows' udders before milking. These should be dipped in a warm chlorine or quarternary ammonium solution.

Cows that do get infection should be treated immediately, according to Herrick. However, care should be taken in selecting the drug to use. The disease can be caused by various organisms, and one drug isn't effective in controlling all of them.

A milk sample can be obtained by a veterinarian an sent to a laboratory for indentification of the organism. Then selection of the drug to use can be more specific.

Objects such as that disalators or milk tubes should not be placed in the teat without being surgically clean if they are used at all.

SCHOOL NEWS

Kindergarten News

The Kindergarten are studying about the railroad and the people who run the trains. The boys and girls are making a train which they will be able to use when playing. Friday the children went up town and got boxes to use in making cars. The children have been bringing pictures of trains and we have been reading stories about them.

First Grade News

In phonics we have learned the sounds of ten letters this semester. We have been working on our numbers through 20.

In art we have drawn pictures of winter sports. Some of them were of ice skating and sliding on sleds. We also wove paper in two colors this week. We have them up as a border for our room.

—Mrs. Brinkman

Second Grade News

Most of this week was spent in review and tests.

Friday, we discussed free verse; how it need not rhyme but should create word pictures. We decided to write a poem in free verse. Miss Brones gave us the first line and then wrote the remaining lines which we suggested. This is our poem: "These are the lovliest things I know:

A flag waving,
Roses blooming in summer,
Frost on the trees,
A canary singing,
The swish of feet in dry leaves,
The smell of clover,
There are so many lovely things."

We also chose a new president for our "Better Citizens Club." Rosemary Medin takes Jerry Stokesbary's place as our president for the next six weeks

—Miss Brones

Third Grade News

This is the end of our first semester. We have been busy this week finishing up our work so that we may begin some new work at the beginning of the week.

We have a new project started in our room. We are on a new unit in Geography called, "Community Live." So we decided on making the main street of Klemme on a miniture scale. We are trying to include most of the buildings downtown. The whole project is being made out of different sized cardboard boxes. We are covering some of the boxes so the appearance will be better.

We drew snow-men the first of the week. We decorated them with pipes, brooms, hats, etc. Then we hung them up and they are bordering our walls. Some of them are very peculiar looking.

—Miss Sebben

Fourth Grade News

Harlan Lee Baack and Carol Ann Pavey returned their dental cards this week.

Gary Kothenbeutel returned to class on January 9th after being absent for a week.

The class officers and council members selected Gary Kothenbeutel as a "good citizen" for a week. A citizen is selected on good behavior, getting work in on time and being a good sport. The "good citizen" has the privilege of wearing a blue badge for a week.

Nothing Better Than Good Food, Says Ohio Man

If a man isn't able to eat the foods he likes he's in mighty sorry shape—imagine going through life without being able to enjoy a fine big platter of bacon and eggs. That is the way Joseph N. Damillot, 3414 E. 5th Street, Dayton, Ohio, used to be, but since he has been taking HADACOL, he says he feels just fine and is able to enjoy lots and lots of fine foods. Mr. Damillot found that taking HADACOL helped his system overcome a deficiency of Vitamins B_1, B_6, Niacin and Iron.

Here is Mr. Damillot's statement: "My first bottle of HADACOL convinced me that HADACOL was what I needed for the gas on my stomach at nights. I could not keep food on my stomache, but after the first bottle I was going great. Now I eat bacon and eggs, and other foods that never would stay with me. I also can sleep well at nights. Thanks to HADACOL. I will never be without it, and can recommend it to all who suffer with the above ailments that I had. I know because I have suffered for quite some time."

MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS OF THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF HANCOCK COUNTY, IOWA ACTING FOR AND ON BEHALF OF DRAINAGE DISTRICT NO. 153 OF SAID COUNTY.

The Board of Supervisors acting for and on behalf of Drainage District No. 153 of Hancock County, Iowa met at the Court House at the hour of 1:30 P. M. of the 26th day of December, 1950, pursuant to notice published as provided by law, proof of which publication is on file, such meeting being held for the purpose of considering and hearing objections to the assessments for benefits made in said Drainage District in accordance with the published notice thereof at which meeting all members of the Board of Supervisors were present.

The meeting was called to order by Chairman, F. J. Schoun and the Board having determined that proof of publication of notice of hearing upon the report of commissioners to classify and assess benefits to the land in said District was on file, the Chairman announced the purpose of the meeting and stated that the Board would hear any objections to assessment of any landowner or objections to the classification for benefits.

The County Auditor read the written objections of landowners within said District as follows:

Harry Rehm
Laurence Nielson
Morton Larson
Lynn Volding
Roy Volding
Clara Volding
Leo Paulson
State Highway Commission, re Highway No. 111

and after the reading of the objections the Chairman orally announced that any land owner assessed for benefits might be orally heard before the Board, and all of the land owners above named who had filed written objections were orally heard by the Board, and the State Highway Commission of the State of Iowa being represented by its attorney, G. W. Templeton, Garner, Iowa, was heard; and the Board heard the readng of the written objections and having listened to the oral statemnt made by the respective owners of land who filed written objections and having duly considered the matter, and having carefully examined the report of the commissioners, it was moved by Supervisor Clarence Bird and second by Supervisor C. D. Daniels as follows:

WHEREAS, the Board has heard read the written objections of the various land owners to the report of classification and assessment of benefits to their respective lands in said Drainage District No. 153 and has heard oral objections of the land owners in support of their written objections; and

WHEREAS, it is deemed advisable and to the best interest of the District that the Board personally inspect the lands in said Drainage improvement with L. W. Mahons, Engineer, in charge of said improvement.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED that this meeting and hearing be adjourned to 1:30 P. M. of the 3rd day of January 1951, at the Court House at Garner, Iowa, said adjourned meeting to be held in the Court Room of said Court House at the day and hour above set forth.

WHEREUPON, F. J. Schoun, Chairman, presiding and in the chair, put the motion upon the adoption of said motion for adjournment, and upon call of the roll by the Auditor the vote was as follows:

F. J. Schoun, Yea
C. D. Daniels, Yea
Clarence Bird, Yea

WHEREUPON, the Chairman announced the meeting and hearing was adjourned to meet at the Court House in the Court Room at Garner, in Hancock County, Iowa, at 1:30 P. M. on the 3rd day of January, 1951, for further consideration of the hearing upon said report and classification of benefits and the objections thereto, which said adjourned date was publically announced by the Chairman to those present, and said meeting was adjourned accordingly.

Dated at Garner, Iowa this 26th day of December, 1950.

1,145 Farm Boys, Girls Attend 29th Annual 4-H Club Congress

Last year's 4-H Congress is history now, but it will long be remembered by 1,145 4-H boys and girls who attended the five-day affair last November in Chicago.

For the first time delegates were on hand from each of the 48 states, accompanied by 235 of their leaders. Registration lists also included boys, girls and leaders from Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and 11 foreign countries. There were 15 visitors from Austria, 29 from Canada,

Donald Sherman Brozovich, 20, of Lakewod, Colo., and Phyllis V. Bowe, 20, of Elk River, Minn., each received $300 scholarships and silver trophies from Edward Foss Wilson, right, president of Wilson Company, at the 29th National 4-H Congress in Chicago.

24 from Germany, 22 from Turkey, two from Japan, and one each from Honduras, Thailand, Denmark, France, Netherlands and Luxembourg.

All 4-H'ers were state winners in some project or activity, and during their stay over 150 were named as national winners. The youngsters were entertained at breakfast, lunch, and dinner. They were also guests of the management at an afternoon horse show at the International Live Stock Exposition.

Six of the youngsters were named national winners in leadership, achievement and citizenship. Each received a $300 college scholarship. They were Donald S. Brozovich, Lakewood, Colorado, and Phyllis Bowe, Elk River, Minn., in leadership; Jack McDowell, Jr., Backus, Minn., and Mary Janet Elder, Dana, Indiana, in citizenship; and Porter Lee, Jr., Beggs, Oklahoma, and Carolyn Smith, Andrews, N. C., in achievement.

4-H club members also played a starring role at the International Live Stock Exposition. A Big Spring, Texas, 4-H member, Loyd Robinson, showed a 1075 pound hereford steer to the open-class grand championship. A 4-H owned Texas hereford was grand champion in 1949.

RANKING HIGH as favorite features of the program planned for the youths were the assemblies, where speeches and discussions were built around the theme "Better Living for a Better World." Speakers included Judge Camille Kelley of the Memphis, Tenn., juvenile court; W. Kerr Scott, governor of North Carolina; Harold Stassen, president, University of Pennsylvania; Wheeler McMillon, publisher of Farm Journal; Basil O'Conner, president, National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis; and industrialists Charles Kettering, General Motors; Raymond C. Firestone, Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., Fowler McCormick, International Harvester; Thomas A. Ferrell, Dearborn Motors Corp.; and Thos. E. Wilson, Wilson & Company.

The National 4-H Club Congress is conducted by the Extension Services of the state agricultural colleges and the U. S. department of agriculture in cooperation with the national committee on boys and girls club work. One hundred and twenty-four college scholarships valued at $36,800 were distributed through the national committee during the congress.

The youngsters were entertained, but they also learned much that will be useful in future years. They made friends with 4-H members from other parts of the country and got to know them and their problems.

It was a busy week, an educational week—and a week none of the delegates are likely to ever forget.

JOYCE HOLDEN, Universal starlet, began her film career as a comedienne and the love interest of Jimmy Durante in "The Milkman", will be seen soon in a dramatic role in "Target Unknown". This time she plays the role of a nurse—had to spend a month mastering a German accent for the part. She traveled all around the east and mid-west in conjunction with "The Milkman", winding up the extensive tour in Chicago, where she appeared at the Harvest Moon Festival with Jose Ferrer.

Here's a chance to win a trip to Hollywood. A booth has been set up in the lobby of New York's Paramount Theatre, where Bing Crosby's "Mr. Music" is being shown, for the Christmas cards sent to him. On January 31 he will select one of the cards sent to him from all over the country, and the person who sent it will win that trip, with all expenses paid, of course.

Al Crews, production director of the Protestant Radio Commission, was formerly chief of radio for Gen. Douglas A. MacArthur in Japan. The general has agreed to let Robert Barrat impersonate him in 20th Century Fox's "An Atom of Love."

John Agar plans to make a personal appearance tour as a singer after he completes his assignment in Warners' "The Travelers". He has been taking lessons for the past year, and is hoping that some day he will sing in a picture

Virginia Mayo and her husband, Michael O'Shea, also have plans to follow when "The Traveler" is finished. They're going to tour Arizona and New Mexico, looking for a ranch to buy, so that they can raise cattle. Maybe Greer Garson's success inspired them—her prize calf won three blue ribbons at the Albuquerque Fair, and she couldn't be happier.

John Cameron Swayze, commentator on the weeknight NBC-TV News Caravan, and well known to radio listeners, is the proud possessor of a fan letter from Bernard Baruch, who watches the show and thinks the news is presented "most intelligibly".

Yugoslavia is a Communist state—but the President has asked for $38,000,000 for food for it, on top of the $33,000,000 of emergency aid already allocated. In the March of Time's "Tito—New Ally?" we are given a clear-cut picture of life inside the country, whose 16,000,000 people share in her reputation as a homeland of fighting men, who may aid us in case of war.

THE FICTION CORNER

LITTLE BOY NEXT DOOR

By Papinta J. Knowles

3 Minute Fiction

NEW PEOPLE were moving in the old house across the fence, and Molly went about her sewing near the window complacent with the certainty that the couple with the ten-year-old boy with whom she'd talked just the other day were not the folks moving in today.

Molly Turner had never liked children, and through all these twenty-five years she had been fortunate that none had moved next door. She felt in a way that telling prospective tenants with children the bad features about the old house had spared her an association she couldn't have endured. There hadn't been anything wrong in speaking the truth.

Molly put her sewing on a table, got up from her chair with difficulty and hobbled over to the coal stove to shake it down and put in a scuttle of coal. She had told the woman the truth about the house being drafty and needing repair, and about Frank Overton being so tight he'd never do anything about it.

She straightened and turned toward the window, and that was when she saw him: Ronnie, the ten-year-old boy belonging to the woman she'd talked to the other day. He was standing against the fence looking toward her house. Planning up his conquests of devilltry, she thought, and she groaned in sick disappointment.

She hobbled back to her chair. So they had taken the house after all! Well—someway she had to keep the brat out of her yard. There were her flowers in the spring and summer. He'd rummage in her sheds and break up things.

She glanced out of the window and saw Ronnie climbing the fence. She pulled herself out of the chair and waddled hastily to the door.

Molly thought she had Ronnie settled, but the next afternoon there he was at her door.

"Here, here," she called to the child. "Get back in your own yard." Ronnie looked at her a second then climbed back over the fence.

MOLLY THOUGHT she had Ronnie settled, but the next afternoon when she went out to the shed for a bucket of coal, he came to the door.

"I'll get your coal in," he said.

Molly wouldn't look at him. "I don't need you to get my coal in," she said. "Get back in your own yard. Go on, now!"

It was the way Molly looked that caused the kid to scamper down the walk and climb over the fence as if she had actually shot at his feet.

The unpleasant incident didn't keep Ronnie away. Every day Molly had to chase him out of her yard. Every day she vowed she'd skin him alive. What kind of mother did Ronnie have that she allowed him to pester a crippled old woman like her!

But one night a blizzard came, and the town of Hanover was covered with ice. Molly just had one bucket of coal by her stove, and she dared not venture out on the ice to get more. She used the coal sparingly, and when she got down to the last shovelful, a lost, desperate kind of feeling went over her. What would she do?

Late that afternoon a knock sounded on her door, and when she opened it, Ronnie smiled up at her uncertainly.

"I'll get your coal in, Miss Turner," he said. "It's slick, 'n you might fall . . ."

Molly couldn't speak for a moment. She felt almost humble with shame and gratitude that he had come. "Well, I—well, that would be sweet of you," she said finally, and for the first time in all these twenty-five years of not wanting children next door, she saw the injustice of her prejudice toward them. What queer quirk in her mind had blinded her to the happiness a child could bring her?

Maybe it was because she had never looked at one—not as she was looking now at Ronnie and seeing the clear innocence of his eyes.

A smile broke across her old face. "Thank you, Ronnie," she said.

Strange, how good she felt saying it. The feeling was beautiful—one that she had waited much too long to experience.

MARCH OF DIMES

30,000 Men, Women, Children Stricken With Polio During 1950

Polio struck again in 1950. For the third consecutive year, infantile paralysis went on a rampage across the nation, striking more than 30,000 men, women and children.

Only once before—in 1949—had polio attacked with greater violence. The toll of that tragic year was still being counted as the fresh onslaught began. Hospitals and clinics were still crowded with polio patients from previous epidemics who were depending upon March of Dimes aid for continuing treatment. Then, on top of this staggering load, came the new cases. Dozens, at first. Then hundreds. Then thousands and more thousands, as the epidemic swept the country from California to New York and from Texas to Alaska.

Before 1950 was over, March of Dimes funds had assisted in some measure more than 54,000 polio victims of this and other years—at a cost of $20,000,000. And that wasn't enough. The National Foundation of Infantile Paralysis, for the second year, was forced to operate at a deficit.

Polio played no favorites in 1950 Every section of the country suffered heavy attacks. Texas, the battleground of major epidemics for six of the last eight years, was hit harder than ever before. Virginia, with a long record of light incidence, suddenly found itself the focal point of a raging epidemic Maryland and Iowa watched their case records climb to unprecedented heights. But, whether records were broken or not, it was evident that the entire nation still was being battered by a polio wave higher than any in our previous experience.

Three Black Years

The last three years have been the three blackest polio years in the nation's history. Cumulative incidence for this period reached the monstrous total of 100,000 cases—almost as many as the entire case load for the preceding ten years.

Fortunately, wherever polio hit, a chapter of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis was on the spot, ready to help the patient, his family, and the entire community, as necessary. Your local chapter was the first line of defense against the disease. Its chief weapon was money — money contributed by the American people to the annual March of Dimes.

March of Dimes Money, administered by 2,822 national foundation chapters serving the entire nation, has paid bills for patient care totalling $47,000,000 during the last two years. Under the pressure of successive epidemics 873 chapters in 45 states were broke by mid-October of 1950 and had to turn to their national office for financial assistance. Before the year was over, national foundation headquarters had sent out more than $7,500,000 in supplementary aid to these hard-hit areas.

March of Dimes money paid hospital bills for thousands of families who could not meet the high cost of polio care unaided. Four out of every five of the stricken needed—and received—financial assistance from the national foundation and its chapters.

March of Dimes money paid for nursing care, physical therapy, transportation, wheelchairs, braces and crutches wherever necessary. Help was given to all who need it, without regard to age, race, creed or color.

$94 Million Spent

March of Dimes money paid salaries, travel expenses and maintenance of more than 1,600 desperately needed nurses recruited for the national foundation by the Red Cross for emergency service in high-incidence areas in 37 states. Other personnel furnished on the same basis included more than 100 physical therapists and approximately 120 nursing consultants.

March of Dimes money shipped more than $1,000,000 worth of iron lungs, hot pack machines and other vital equipment on spot notice from seven equipment depots strategically located throughout the nation. Up to mid-October these depots had rushed into epidemic zones 521 respirators, 299 hot pack machines, more than 200 cribs and beds, and a heavy volume of miscellaneous hospital supplies and equipment.

Bills for polio patient care alone have consumed more than $94,000,000 in March of Dimes funds since the national foundation was established in 1938. Almost two-thirds of this money has been spent during the three years 1948 through 1950.

Of all the money spent in the constant battle against infantile paralysis, the largest part is spent on patient care. Four out of five cases need financial assistance, the national foundation reports.

First Iron Lung Used on Friday, Sept. 13, 1929

THEY GAVE BARRET HOYT 30 minutes to live that September in 1929.

It was precisely the 13th hour of Friday, September 13.

The 21-year-old Harvard University senior had been stricken by polio. The disease had taken a strangle-hold on his breathing muscles; he was smothering to death.

It was at this moment that a physician attending the youth, Dr. S. D. Kramer, decided to try a virtually unproved device—a mechanical breathing machine just invented by a Harvard professor, Dr. Philip Drinker. If the machine would work, Barret might hold death at bay until his stricken muscles could recover.

That was a big "if." Dr. Drinker's machine had been tried only once before. During the Spring of 1929, a polio patient had been placed in the machine and had died. But death had been due to pneumonia—not polio.

Medical History Written

The medical history written in the next few hours has meant the difference between life and death for thousands stricken by polio. This is one reason why the mechanical respirator, known generally as the "Iron Lung," was selected as the symbol for coin collectors during this year's March of Dimes.

Iron lungs in use in the United States today number some 3,650 and range from the 700-pound Drinker type manufactured by several firms at $1500 to $2000 each, to portable one-pound chest plates which are connected to pumps. Each has a specific use and all are represented in the seven strategically-located March of Dimes supply depots that handle emergency calls throughout the country.

But on that Friday the 13th in 1929, there was only one mechanical respirator in the world. Fortunately, it was in Boston. Dr. Kramer telephoned Dr. W. L. Aycock, of the Harvard Poliomyelitis Commission. Dr. Aycock rushed from his office across the street to Peter Bent Brigham Hospital to help set up the machine. Meanwhile, Dr. Drinker hurried from a warehouse with his iron lung atop a taxicab. They arrived just as an ambulance brought Barrett.

When he was placed in the respirator, the student was hardly breathing at all. Twenty-nine minutes had gone by! The machine never had been tried under such alarming conditions.

The three doctors peered at the gauge which registered whether the youth's lungs were inhaling and exhaling. The motor droned. The needle on the gauge flickered. Then it moved up a bit; then higher with each breath. Then, nearly normal.

In a few hours, Barrett dropped into a deep, natural sleep. His tired body had been relieved of the racking strain of motivating his practically powerless muscles.

Youth Recovers

Improved in design during the years since 1929, the modern-day tank respirator employs much the same basic principles as the one which saved Barrett Hoyt.

The patient is laid on a cot-like pallet and slid into the metal, air-tight container, his head projecting through a rubber collar. Electrically driven pumps create a pressure within the container slightly higher than on the outside. This gently eases the air from the patient's lungs. Then the pressure in the container is reduced so that it equals the outside pressure and the fresh air eases into the lungs through the patient's nose and mouth. This two-phase action occurs at regulated intervals so that the patient will breathe evenly.

Barrett Hoyt was out of his iron lung in four weeks and was discharged from the hospital before Christmas of 1929. He now works for an insurance firm in Boston and lives with his family in Brookline, Mass.

Friday the 13th!

The first successful iron lung patient insists: "That's my lucky day!"

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Preventing candles from bending and drooping in the summer offers a choice of two approaches. Either take the candles out of their holders, wrap them in waxed paper, and lay them away flat in a drawer or closet; or give them a couple of coats of clear varnish or shellac before the hot weather sets in.

Nearly any kind of ring is best cleaned with a toothbrush. Soap and water will do the job, unless the ring is badly tarnished, in which case try using bicarbonate of soda. Just dip the damp brush in the bicarb and scrub the ring; then rinse the ring when you're finished.

Rub a little castor oil or mineral oil lightly over the leaves of house plants to keep them looking green and to stimulate growth by cleaning the pores through which the plant breathes

To clean pearls and amber beads, rub olive oil on them with a piece of flannel or chamois. Go easy on the amount of oil and the pressure of your rubbing

If a candle is a little too small for a holder, you can make it firm by dipping the holder—provided it's metal—into piping hot water for a few minutes to get it hot before inserting the candle

Gold Tipped Cigarettes End Romance and Start Career

By BILLY ROSE

Yesterday, at one of those cocktail parties where only pedigreed olives are used in the Martinis, I met a movie actress who used to dance in one of my chorus lines back in the '30's. She was sporting a square-cut that looked like the searchlight on the old Albany night boat.

"Glad you're doing so well," I said. "You've really gone places since the days when you made a fast forty a week."

"Have I changed much?" she asked, lighting a gold-tipped cigarette.

"Well, for one thing," I said, "you never used to smoke buck-a-pack ciggies."

"You mean these Sobranies?" said the actress. "Matter of fact, I started smoking them while I was working at your club. One of your customers introduced me to them."

"Boy friend?"

"Yes, if a man in his 50's can be called a boy. Remember Big Joel?"

"The oil fella?"

"That's the one," said the s-t-a-r. "Know something? I probably would be married to him today if not for these Sobranies."

Billy Rose

"Tell me about it," I prodded.

"WELL, IT'S not much of a story," said the actress. "One night Big Joel threw a party at the Central Park Casino for a bunch of his pals—Jimmy Walker, Billy Seeman, Jules Glaenzer and that crowd. And it was quite a shindig—guinea hen under glass, buckets of champagne and gold-tipped Sobranies on every table. I was one of the girls invited—but what I didn't know until later was that Joel intended to surprise me and announce our engagement that night."

"Were you stuck on the big lug?"

"Not particularly," said the star, "but he was a nice enough fella and had he made the announcement I don't doubt but that I would have gone along with it."

"What stopped him?"

"It was one of those things," said the actress. "A little after midnight, when I came back to my table after a dance, I found my pocketbook was missing. I started to look for it, but Big Joel told me to relax and handed me a hundred bucks. I thanked him but kept right on looking, and when he asked me why I was so worried about the pocketbook I told him there was three hundred dollars in it.

"I HAD HARDLY gotten the words out of my mouth when the woman who worked in the ladies' room came up and handed me my purse—said she had found it under the make-up table.

"Big Joel looked at me and grinned kind of funny. 'It ain't that I don't trust you, honey,' he said, 'but a man wants to be awfully sure about the lady he's going to make his wife. Forgive me, but—would you mind opening that bag and showing me the three hundred?

"Naturally I did no such thing. I picked up my bag, gave him one of those 'how-dare-you' looks and walked straight out of the room."

"In other words," I small-joked, "Big Joel caught you with your purse down."

"Nothing of the sort," said the movie star. "Matter of fact, I had been paid off that afternoon for a series of modeling jobs and had closer to four hundred than three in my bag."

"Then why didn't you open it?"

"How could I?" said the actress. "He'd have seen the ten packs of Sobranie Gold-Tips I had swiped off the tables."

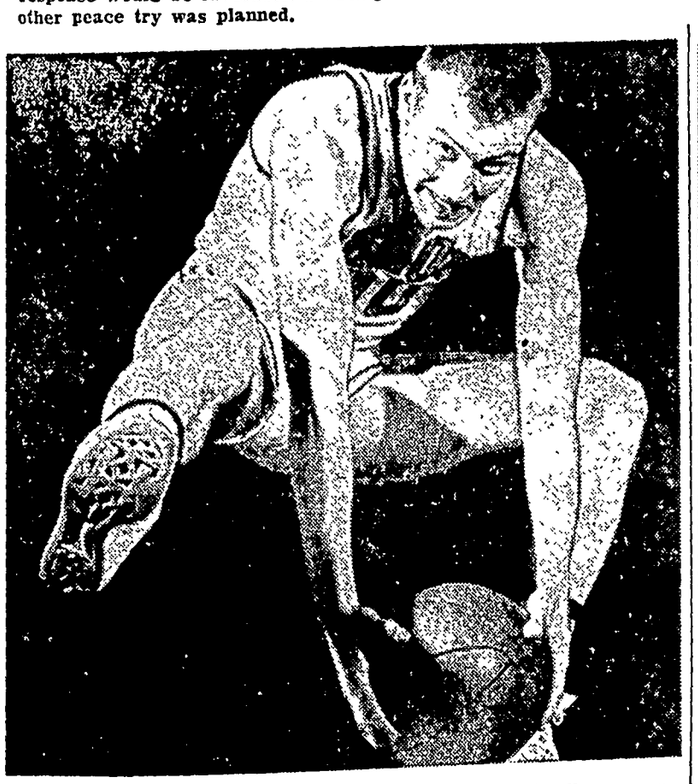
STUDENTS RIOT OVER APPEARANCE OF ONE-TIME NAZI . . . West Berlin police are shown removing a rioter to a patrol wagon as they broke up a riot at a Berlin theater recently. Groups of students participated in the demonstration which was in protest of the appearance of Werner Krauss, one-time Nazi state actor. Police were forced to turn hoses on the students, who retaliated with rocks. A number of the demonstrating students were arrested and an unknown number of persons were injured in the rioting which lasted more than an hour in a Berlin that is very sensitive to reminders of Hitler's regime.

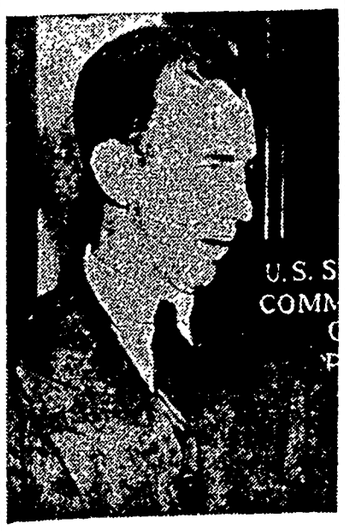
NO FORMAL REPLY FROM PEIPING . . . India's Sir Benegal Rau (seated right) tells newsmen that the Chinese Communists have replied only evasively to the appeal by 13 nations that they halt short of the 38th parallel in Korea. Rau has received no formal answer from the Peiping government, but discloses that Communist China's spokesman told him that "the United Nations would be able to judge for itself from events in the field what the response to the appeal would be." Rau said he had not lost hope that the Peiping response would be favorable. Standing next to Rau is B. L. Sharma, India's U.N. delegation advisor. Another peace try was planned.



A BOUNCING BELOITER . . . Bill Bartz, veteran Beloit college cager, seems to be taking his work seriously this winter. The six foot-two inch junior from Benton Harbor, Mich., is fitting into the plans of the highly-regarded Beloit team this hectic basketball season. One of Bartz' specialties is agility on the floor and ability to handle the ball from any position—a low crouch or a high leap. Beloit is in Beloit, Wisconsin and ranks high in net circles.

SHYEST GIRL . . . Posing appropriately is Christiane Couture, a commercial secretary, who was chosen "Miss Timidity of 1950" at the first anniversary ball of the Timidity Club in Paris. She is secretary of the club.

ENVOY COMES HOME . . . Alan C. Kirk, United States ambassador to Moscow, arrives in New York with his wife aboard the liner, S. S. Liberte. He said he is returning for consultations with the state department concerning the world war situation and possible Russian activity in the Korean dispute. There were hints of another Big Four meeting, with Stalin or a Stalin representative meeting representatives of the U. S., France, and Britain.



ARMY CHIEF . . . Army Secretary Frank Pace conferred recently with the senate appropriations committee on the 18 billion dollars extra the military has asked for defense. The army is going ahead with preparedness.

The Good Must Fight

Lesson for January 21, 1951

YOU WOULD think that if ever there arrived on this planet a really good person, he would be popular with everybody. People are tired of meanness, they are sick of being lied to and cheated. They are tired of the sins of others, even tired of their own. So if a really good person should appear, one in whom was no shadow, completely transparent to the Eternal Light, wouldn't everyone flock to him, wouldn't he have the human race in the palm of his hand, as it were, in a short time?

Dr. Foreman

Agelong War

THE ANSWER is No. It is not well to be too optimistic about human nature. As a matter of fact, some of the best persons history has known met some of the bitterest opposition. Indeed, when One came who was completely good, whose life was all light and no shadow, he was no better treated and no more warmly welcomed than less good persons have been.

Jesus Christ had his enemies, strong and well-organized. The number of those who believed in him was comparatively small; the number who did not believe or ignored him altogether, was enormous.

The history of mankind is the history of a war, the age long war between good and evil, between God and his enemies. The story of Jesus is one chapter in this history, the most important by far, but by no means the first one or the last.

Why Was Jesus Hated?

THE READER should examine the record in the Gospels and try to think for himself who opposed Jesus, and why they did so. One striking fact is that Jesus' enemies were not what we call the "lower classes," much less the "criminal classes." His enemies were rather from out of the top drawer, as we might say. They were the financial, social and religious leaders of his time. They finally got him executed as a criminal.

If there had never been any one to contradict the records of the Sanhedrin, that high court of Jerusalem, and those records had become recognized as the truth, Jesus would have gone down in history, if remembered at all, as a troublemaker, a lawless and worthless man, whose execution was a protection to society.

Why were these leading men, Jesus' "distinguished" contemporaries, so wrong about Jesus?

"As he is, so are we . . ."

THE READER should think this out for himself. One reason can be mentioned here: It is very easy for wrong to be so long accepted and so strongly entrenched that it is universally taken for right. Then when the right comes along, especially when in the form of an idea suggested by some one not of the upper crust, it actually seems to be wrong. People kept long in a dark room find light painful!

Any one who tries to follow Jesus will find himself up against the same sort of opposition.

Any one who proposes to live as Jesus lived, or to change our accustomed patterns of society in the direction which Jesus pointed out, will be called (as he was) a crackpot, a dreamer, an impractical fellow who does not know enough to go in when it rains.

Our Divine Alliance

CONSIDER one example of this. A Christian who makes up his mind to dedicate his body a "living sacrifice" to God, and therefore not to handicap himself with the drug of alcohol, is certain, in many places, to be considered a sort of crank. It is not that people will laugh at him, though they will: people will be angry with him for his stand. They will do all they can to make him break his pledge.

Instead of admiring a clean and free life, many people are not content unless they can soil that cleanness and break down that freedom. So to stand for Christ in any aspect of life is not easy. But we need to remember we fight no lonely fight; our cause is not forlorn.

Just as Jesus in Galilee was always on the side of those who were beaten and battered by sin and evil, but still fighting, so now the ever-living Christ is always on the side of those who in their hearts desire good and not evil, cleanness and not dirt, truth and not lies.

Golf Swing Takes in Whole Body

By GRANTLAND RICE

SAM SNEAD HAPPENS to have one of the greatest natural golf swings the game has ever known. This takes in Vardon, Braid, Taylor, Jones, Hagen, Sarazen, Hogan and Nelson.

But it might also be remembered that Sammy Snead is also a high-class golf instructor at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., where he is home pro.

Grantland Rice

And while Snead is on the tournament trail quite a bit, he is also at home quite often, giving lessons.

It isn't generally known that Snead was a football, basketball and baseball star in high school as well as a fellow with ability to play golf.

A short while bac I was talking with Sammy about the intricate quality of the golf swing, when it came to the teaching side.

"One trouble in teaching the golf swing," Snead said, "is the territory it covers. It starts with the head—an important factor—and it runs on to the feet—another important factor. Between head and feet, it takes in body, hips, knees, hands, wrists and just about everything the human system has.

"If your head action is poor, the swing is poor. If your foot action is bad, the swing's no good. I'd say you must start with the balance, and that begins with the feet. You know balance isn't a post stuck in the ground. The feet must move and work with the swing. When you start the backswing with your hands and arms, the shoulders and hips and knees must all work together. One part of the swing can't work against another part.

"I would say," Sam added, "that the swing starts all together. Once the hands start to move the club head, the left side also begins to turn. You can't leave the left shoulder, left hip or left knee behind—especially the left shoulder. You can't split up the swing in sections, as so many try to do.

"It's a tough job to teach anyone to put all these parts together."

The Biggest Faults

About this time I asked Ben Hogan the first move he made on the downswing.

"Get the left side out of the way and the left heel back in place," he said. "Then you have something to hit against. Most golfers start their hands too quickly on the downswing."

"That's another thing you have to watch in teaching," Snead said "Don't hurry the downswing.

"The average golfer starts his downswing before he finishes his backswing. He's only thinking of socking that ball. He can't wait to get in position to sock it. A golfer who keeps his head anchored, who doesn't rush his backswing or hurry his downswing, will shoot pretty good golf, even if he makes other mistakes.

"One trouble in teaching golf is there are so many things you can do wrong. Somebody has written there are 132 ways to slice. Sometimes I almost believe it. I can't understand why most golf instructors don't go up to the top of tall buildings and jump off. Not because their pupils are dumb, but because it is such a hard game to teach."

"What is the most common fault in golf?" I asked Snead.

"Too much tension—too much stiffness—is the main fault," he said. "They get all locked up even when you give 'em the right stance and the right grip. But outside of tension, they have a lot of trouble with body action—I mean in keeping the body in place, in helping hand action instead of hurting it. The body is likely to overpower the hands and arms."

"Which is harder," I asked. "To teach golf or play tournament golf?"

"Both are tough ways to make a living," he said.

Texas Fever

Football knew one of its biggest years in this free (now and then) land in 1950. But it reached an all-time height in Texas where every past attendance mark was broken this fall. Not only that, but every type of emotional stress was just about doubled.

It was SMU that got the jump by beating Ohio State. It was SMU that took a smart lead over Army and Oklahoma in the early polls, only to bog down in the stretch.

Any number of games in this massive state drew from 60,000 to 75,000 people. In one day the Cotton Bowl at Dallas offered a double-header, afternoon and night, to 151,000 spectators. They can handle 76,000 at Dallas. They can take care of 70,000 at Rice. They can accommodate over 60,000 at Austin.

And now they are waiting for what they feel sure will be the decapitation of Tennessee in the Cotton Bowl on Jan. 1. Fiery Texas supporters are willing to admit that Bob Neyland's Tennessee squad is extremely good.

"We know Tennessee is the best in the south," one football veteran said. "But the south isn't in the same league—or the same class—with the southwest.

"We know Tennessee has a strong line. But it has no line that can match the big one that Texas has We still think Texas is better than Oklahoma, the team that beat us by a single point. It wouldn't happen again."

Effective Cough Syrup, Home-Mixed for Extra Economy

Saves Big Dollars. No Cooking.

This splendid recipe is used by millions because it makes such an effective medicine for coughs due to colds. It's so easy to mix—a child could do it.

From any druggist get 2½ ounces of Pinex, a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its soothing effect on throat and bronchial irritations.

Then make a syrup with two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water. No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Put the Pinex into a pint bottle and fill up with your syrup. This makes a full pint of cough medicine, very effective and quick-acting, and you get about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and children love its pleasant taste.

This cough syrup takes hold of coughs, giving quick relief. It loosens phlegm, soothes irritated membranes, helps clear air passages. Money refunded if Pinex doesn't please.

FOR EXTRA CONVENIENCE GET NEW READY-MIXED, READY-TO-USE PINEX!

FEELS "NEW AGAIN"—CONSTIPATION GONE!

"For years I had taken pills and harsh laxatives for constipation. Then I started to eat ALL-BRAN regularly. Now I feel like a new man!" Earl Noecker, 2634 Derry St., Harrisburg, Pa. Just one of many unsolicited letters from ALL-BRAN users. If you are troubled with constipation due to lack of dietary bulk, do as this man does. Eat an ounce (about ½ cup) of tasty Kellogg's ALL-BRAN daily, drink plenty of water. If not completely satisfied after 10 days, return empty carton to Kellogg's, Battle Creek, Mich. Without Painful Backache

As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.

If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While these symptoms may often otherwise occur, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

Corwith Girls Win First Hancock County Tourny

KLEMME WINS SECOND PLACE, HAYFIELD WINS CONSOLATION

The first Hancock County Tournament for Girls Basketball was won by the Corwith High school. They won over the Klemme girls in the final round of play Monday night 55-37.

The opening round last Friday evening saw Klemme win over Crystal Lake 40-29; Hayfield over Woden 33-28; and Corwith over Goodell 42-18.

The semifinal round was played Saturday evening with Klemme winning over Hayfield 46-41 in a close game. Corwith won from Kanawha 50-25.

The consolation game played Monday evening was won by Hayfield over Kanawha 32-26 in a close game for third place.

The championship game between Klemme and Corwith was a decided win for Corwith from the first toss-up. The Klemme girls could not get started the first quarter, and Corwith was off to the races. The rest of the game was fairly even for both teams with Corwith out in front with a nice lead. The champions won by a score of 55-37.

Phylis Wildman, Corwith, was high point girl for the tournament with a total of 68 points. Nellie Greiman took second high with 50 points and Iris Schaefer captured third place with 45 points for the tournament.

USING GOOD SEED PAYS IN INCREASED YIELDS

Farmers who buy good- quality seed for 1951 plantings are investing in good insurance, says Joe L. Robinson, Iowa State College agronomist.

Robinson points out that, since high-quality seed can be bought from many reliable growers and dealers, it is poor management to introduce another hazard into farming by using seed of doubtful value.

The costs of quality seed are very small compared to increases in yields that result from their use. By using pure seed of adapted varieties, Robinson estimates farmers can get 10 to 20 percent higher yields than with other seed.

Assuming that the use of good seed will boost yields 15 percent, then an acre of ground producing 50 bushels of oats per acre would yield 57.5 bushels with high-quality seed. At 88 cents per bushel for the crop, the ordinary seed would bring an income of $44.00 per acre, while the use of good quality seed would mean an income of $56.60. The use of good seed would thus increase the over-all income per acre by $6,60, which would more than allow for the extra cost of good seed and still leave a higher net income.

Robinson reminds farmers that one way to be sure of getting high-quality seed that has been checked for purity, germination and adaption to Iowa is to buy seed with the blue certification tag. Certified seed has been checked while growing in the field and later in the bin for purity and quality.

The evening was spent playing 500. High score for ladies was won by Mrs. Lewis Jurgameyer and high for the men was Mr. Lewis Jurgameyer. Low for the ladies was Mrs. Fred Barz and for the men Edward Barz.

Mrs. Harvey Barz, Mrs. Marvin Barz, Mrs. Eugene Greiman and Mrs. Ronald Barz assisted Mrs. Rosenlahl with the lunch.

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY RAY EASTMAN

The telegraph operator read the message. He'd handled a lot, too many . . that were similar. Some of the words were the same: "War Department . . we regret to inform you . . " but this message had a strange, mocking twist.

"Dan, my boy, we're glad to have you home for a while." His father sized up the boy's uniform. Quite an improvement over what the army had handed out in '17. Made Dan look bigger, somehow.

"Sure, Pop," Dan grinned. "How about letting me use the car tonight Kind of like to see some of the old gang."

"Why, sure, Dan." He dug for the keys. "Course, your mother and I hope to see a little of you while you're on leave, but," he chuckled, "I know there is a gal a few miles outside town two who's dying to see that uniform. We'll see you tomorrow.

A uniform does make a man look bigger. Maybe it makes him feel bigger, too. Like he can do things the average man can't, take chances and get away with them.

Or then Dan was just in a hurry to see his girl when he rounded that curve at 70, hit a chuckhole and the car rolled.

The telegraph operator shook his head, picked up the message and started sending it.

"To the War Department, Washington, D. C.," it started. "We regret to inform you that our son, private Daniel J. Smith, was killed kesterday in an automobile accident . . . "

NEW SWEET CORN IS MEDAL WINNER

Developed In Iowa And Has Been Named Iochief

The new hybrid sweet corn, Iochief, has been awarded a gold medal in "All-American Vegetables for 1951" competition by the American Seed Trade Association. It was one of two vegetables to rate the award this year and marks the first time in the 20-year existence of the Association that sweet corn has been awarded a gold medal. The other gold medal vegetable in the nation this year was the New Hampshire midget watermelon.

Iochief was devolped at Iowa State College by E. S. Haber and has the same early midseason maturity as Goldencross Bantam, now the most widely planted variety.

Good All Around

It has excellent flavor and tenderness, and yields reported were heavier than those of the popular Goldencross, Iona and Tendermost. Iochief is highly recommended for home gardens, market, canning and freezing.

The new sweet corn is somewhat resistant to heat and drouth and is widely adapted over the entire country.

A vegetable undergoes rigid scrutiny and must prove itself before it can be awarded a gold medal in this competition. It must be grown on 21 different plots located in various sections of the country, each of which is under the supervision of a resident judge who grows and compares the many prospective new varieties. They must be superior or answer desirable purposes before any judge may recommend them for his climate and soil conditons.

Melon Wins Too

The other medal winner—the New Hampshire midget watermelon—is a small oval melon that matures early. Under favorable conditons, it ripens in 65 days, and is especially recommended for the northern, short growing season sections where large melons will not mature or develop good eating quality.

These vegetable seeds will be available through reliable seedsmen as long as the seed supply lasts during the first year of introduction.

FOR THE PROTECTION OF OUR CHILDREN

THE LAW of IOWA REQUIRES...

Exit (Fire) Drills Once Each Month

In Every School Building of 2 or More Stories.

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

Does it sound like foolishness to spend time and money on things you hope you won't need?

How about things like insurance on your house and car, health insurance, and fire extinguishers? You'd just as soon not have to use them, wouldn't you?

Fire exit drills in our schools are the same sort of thing . . . a kind of life insurance. We hope our children never have to get out of a burning school building in a hurry . . . but if they do, we want them to know how!

That's why Iowa law requires fire exit drills once a month in every school building of two or more stories. All you parents will probably feel better if you know that your children's school has regular, monthly drills.

Not too regular, though! That is, the school principal should occasionally block off a regular exit with a sign or rope, and make the teachers and pupils seek an alternate exit.

As a matter of fact, it's a good idea for all of us to find out where alternate exits are in theaters, hotels, the place where we work . . . maybe even in our homes! Fire isn't considerate. It doesn't always let you go out the way you went in.

Your Iowa Safety Congress says: "We need fire drills because fire kills!"

BOYS COUNTY TOURNAMENT STARTS TONIGHT AT GARNER

The Klemme Shamrocks play in the opening game of the County Tournament tonight at the Garner High School against Hayfield at 6:15 p. m. Let's get behind our team and have a big crowd at the game. Britt and Corwith will battle it out at 7:30, and Garner and Crystal Lake will tackle at 8:45 p. m. Come on Shamrocks and lets go.

The tournament schedule is posted around town and was in last weeks issue. So back our team and see the games. The finals will be played this Saturday, January 27th.

JOLLY WORKERS CLUB MET JANUARY 10TH

The Jolly Workers Club met at the home of Freda Lass Wednesday, January 10 with 15 members answering roll call by telling what they liked about winter. Our new president, Louise Pearson gave us all new club books for the year. We are sending $2.00 to the Polio Fund.

At our February meeting each member is to bring a few Christmas cards so they can be mailed to some Orphange for the past time of children.

For Valentines Day we are to bring a 50c gift for our Mystery Friend.

The February meeting will be on Valentines Day at the home of Maude Bachman with Verbel Gilpin as co-hostess.

After our business meeting Mrs. Pearson gave us a lesson "Better Light for Our Homes."

A delicious lunch was served by Freda Lass with Nellie Ausborn as co-hostess.

Surprise Birthday Party Held For Elsie Baack Friday

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Baack planned and carried out a surprise party for Elsie Baack on Friday evening, it being her birthday. 500 was played at 3 tables after which a nice lunch was served. High score was won by Menno Albers, low score by Gene Albers, who also captured the traveling prize. Elsie received so many beautiful gifts, she invited them all to come back again next week but not add another year to her age. Everyone there reported a grand time.

Facts About The Big Loss In Water Usage In Klemme

AVERY SUNBEAMS MET JANUARY 13TH

Eleven girls were present at Pauline Kramer's home on Jan. 13 for a 4-H meeting of the Avery Sunbeams. Maxine Stille gave an interesting talk on the sewing box. Eunice Helps told how to give proper care to sewing tools. A group activity was led by Lois Helps on how to thread a needle, knot a thread, and how to use a thimble. Pauline Kramer told and showed the parts of a sewing machine to the club. Elizabeth Lemke gave the Dairy Food needs. After the meeting, the girls listened to Claire deLune, and Liebestram on the record player. Darlene Ostendorf and Lois Lowenberg helped Pauline Kramer serve a delicious lunch.

COUNTY SPELLING CONTEST TO BE HELD MARCH 17

The Hancock County Spelling Contest will be held in the Garner High School gymnasium on Saturday morning, March 17, 1951, beginning at 9:30 A. M Contestants should be there by 9:00 A. M.

Two contestants may be entered from each township group, or three contestants from two townships, and one from each town school with an alternate from each unit. Township chairman should plan to have their respective contests before March 10, 1951.

There will be a written test in which each contestant will spell 100 words 10 at a time. The pupil missing the fewest words will be declared the written champion.

The words for the written tests will be taken from Horn-Ashbaugh Spelling We Use workbooks, first 24 weeks, grades 3, 4, 6, 8.

The ten best spellers in the written test will spell orally to determine the oral champion The words will be taken from a prepared Horn-Aasbaugh list until the word list is exhausted, or until the pronouncer chooses to use the Eaton Contest Speller, 1948 Edition.

The written and oral champion will spell orally to determine the county champion.

The state spelling contest has been discontinued.

New Elevator

NEW ELEVATOR BUILDING NOW TAKING SHAPE FAST

The new elevator building is now being sided with metal for the final coat, and the steel doors and most of the windows are in now. The men are moving in some of the power equipment and placing it in position.

Mike Lemke reports the work is about half done towards completion. The work ahead is finish work and requires a lot of time the same as the finish work in a house. When the building is finished, the inside will be painted, trimmed, and will have maple floors throughout.

The building will be finished sometime in April and ready for operation. The Times will run a feature issue on the building and will have pictures both inside and outside. This is a great improvement to the town of Klemme and we should be proud of the project.

METERS, TAPS AND OUTLETS SHOULD ALL BE CHECKED

Editors Note: There has been a lot of talk around town about meters not working, and the flat rate charge in certain cases. A big loss in water usage has brought more comment. Following are the facts given the paper by Roy Schaefer, council member.

To The Citizens Of Klemme:

As chairman of the water and sewer dept. of the town of Klemme, I feel it my duty to make the following announcement.

Due to the fact that our water revenue has not been paying out as it should, I started to investigate. For some time we have been pumping entirely to much water in porportion to the amount we were getting paid for, but was unable to give any accurate figures. However, from May 1, 1950 to November 1, 1950 the figures are as follows: Gallons pumped 5,634,750; gallons sold 3,180,299; gallons lost 2,454,451.

This should be a fairly accurate check for during this six months period we had no fires, therefore no water was used for the purpose. The two automatic pumps in use on the sewer line consume approximately 218,000 gallons during a six month period, this still leaves us with a balance lost of 2,236,451 gallons. With water at 40c per 1000 gallons this figures up a loss of $894 00 over a six month period.

Statistics tell us that the average consumption of water over the state is 400 gallons per person per day. This takes into consideration water used for fires, flushing sewers, automatic dumps, etc. Klemme for the last six months has averaged over 600 gallons per person per day, or we have been pumping 10,000 gallons per day more than we should.

I am sure that we all agree that water at 40c per 1000 gallons is one of the cheapest commodities we have and people do not object paying for what they actually use.

Our loss traces down mainly to water meters not being in working order and to leaks. We recently repaired a leak which was discharging over 2000 gallons per day into a tile.

The Thorpe Well Company of Des Moines tell us that an average town should get paid for 80 percent of the water they pump. A neighboring town now, during winter months, is running 86 percent. We have been running less than 60 percent.

Our electric pump bill is based on the number of gallons pumped which brings up our pumping expenses in addition to wear and tear on pump and well.

This condition should be taken care of immediately and will require the cooperation of every water user, the water supt. and the town council in general.

SHAMROCKS TOOK BEATING BOTH GAMES FROM GARNER

Last Thursday evening was a bad night for the local Shamrocks. The Garner second team led at half time 16-3. They found their range the last half and the final count was 48-13.

The Shamrocks trailed the Garner Cardinals 16-11 the first quarter, then dropped behind in the second quarter to the count of 29-19. The second half somebody put a cover over the basket for field goals for Klemme, as the Shamrocks only made 9 free throws. The Cardinals scored 22 points in the last half to bring the final score to 51-28.

KATHLEEN NORRIS
Frightened Woman

"I AM A FRIGHTENED WOMAN," writes Mary Friedman, from Indianapolis. "Here in the midst of a modern city, with good health, a good husband, and plenty of this world's goods, I am beginning to be sick with terror. When I married Frank, 19 years ago, I would have said that what I have today would have fulfilled my highest dreams; I only wanted one child, I got him, a fine boy now in high school. I wanted to love my husband and to have him love me, and that difficult wish was granted, too. Frank is a wonderful man in every way.

"Well, then, what's the matter? I wish I knew. I've even been to a psychiatrist, but as he began his kindly, sympathetic questions I suddenly began to laugh and then to cry and I unceremoniously left, and didn't go back.

"The symptoms of my trouble—and believe me, it is trouble—are these: I feel a terrible distaste for everything, in sudden fits and starts. Making a bed, discussing meals with my part-time maid, dressing to go out with Frank, lunching with women friends, I will find myself suffocating with a terrible restless feeling, as if I wanted to scream, tear things to pieces, rush out into the open air. Often I find tears running quietly down my cheeks.

"Reading a book seems out of the question now, and things like card games, movies, radio, all the amusements that once meant something to me just make me ache with boredom. It seems to me that life is sliding by me, I've accomplished nothing, I've nothing to show for it.

Fears the Future

"I told the psychiatrist that I needed excitement, romance, self-expression and as I said it, it sounded so adolescent and immature that I was ashamed. When Frank asks me what I mean by change, romance, self-expression, I don't know. All I know is that I am letting my nerves get out of control and I am afraid of the future.

"Finally," says Mary's letter, "please don't advise me to take up Red Cross or hospital work, study a language, go off on a trip by myself, take up book-binding, upholstery or church work. It drives me mad to think of substituting namby-pamby busy work for the raging dissatisfaction deep within me. Sometimes for as much as two consecutive days I will be contented and occupied, then this hunger for something I can't define seizes me and I feel as if I should fly to pieces"

This last sentence reminds me of one of those capable old ladies who sends for a doctor and then gives him a complete diagnosis of her disorder and tells him what to prescribe.

Discounts Cures

For Mary here mentions several actual cures for her unhappy condition, but discounts them all, untried, as namby-pamby busy work. And ridiculous as it is for a woman as fortunate as she to fall into this state, yet it is just our comfortable, protected, apparently carefree women who do go into these neurotic despairs, and find it almost impossible to get their feet firmly on the ground again, and once more breathe the air of healthy living and serving and enjoying life.

Well, perhaps the interests of a woman's life are like a bank. Put love and interest into your life from the beginning, from the happy days when everything goes well, and later on you can draw out that love and interest, infinitely increased in volume. Spread your sympathies and activities from the golden days of youth, first love, engagement, marriage, honeymoon, new home, new baby, new friends. Live fully and generously in those years, and when the first flush of zest and enthusiasm begins to fade—as it must—you will have a hundred outlets for your energy that are not essentially dependent upon youth and bloom.

Yes, languages, gardens, crossword puzzles, games, radio, Red Cross, charities all have their place in a balanced life. Obligations to the less fortunate should play a very important part in our lives as American women, and unless you are sharing, and sharing on a pretty generous scale, it is not surprising that you feel possessions and privileges sometimes fall rather flat.

In your case I would pick the lowest slum in the city, and the dirtiest house. Your organized charities will find it for you.

NO SEASONING

A young mother was changing her baby while her four-year-old looked on. When she neglected to sprinkle the tot with talcum powder before dressing him, the Four was quite indignant. "Aren't you going to salt him this time?" he asked.

Romantic Meeting

Mary—"How did you make the acquaintance of your second husband?"

Helen—"It was quite romantic. You see, I was crossing the street with my first husband, when my second husband came along in a car and ran him down. That was the beginning of our friendship."

Hint to the Wise

He: "I bet I know what you're thinking about."

She: "Well, you don't act like it."

Surprise Her

Don't keep telling your bride-to-be that you're unworthy of her. Let it be a surprise.

DEAR ME!

Shocked by the language used by two workmen repairing telephone wires close to her home, a spinster reported the matter to the company. The foreman in making his report on the incident wrote:

"Me and Bill Smith was on the job. I was up the pole and let some hot lead fall and it went down Bill's neck. He said, 'You really must be more careful, Harry,' and I said, 'Indeed I must. Bill, I will see that it doesn't happen again."

Well Raised Kid

Nine-year-old David hurried off to Sunday school one morning before his mother inspected his wash job. So, when he sat down in the classroom, breakfast was still visible on his face.

The teacher frowned and said reprovingly: "David you didn't wash your face. What would you say if I came to school one morning with egg and jam around my mouth?"

"Nothing," he reported smugly "Nothing at all. I'd be too polite."

A Colonel from Kentucky was telling his cook how he wanted a ham prepared.

"First pour a pint of whisky over it and bake it for an hour; then pour a pint of rum over it and bake for another hour; then pour a pint of brandy over it and bake till it's done."

"I dunno about the ham," remarked the cook, "but that sure will be wonderful gravy."

First Company

A stockbroker was desirous of having proficient clerks in his employ. Before a clerk could enter the office he had to pass a written examination on his knowledge of business. One question was: "Who formed the first company?"

One bright youth, puzzled but not dismayed, wrote: "Noah successfully floated a company while the rest of the world was in liquidation."

HASTY

I like the story that's come down from Sing Sing—of the condemned man walking to the electric chair, oblivious to the attendants surrounding him, reading a copy of "Quick!"

That Proves It

Judge — "Are you positive that the defendant was intoxicated?"

Officer—"No doubt about it."

Judge—"Why are you so certain?"

Officer—"Well, I saw him put a penny in the parking meter, then look up at the town clock and shout 'Hurrah, I've lost fourteen pounds.' "

Rest in Peace

A clergyman was spending the afternoon at a house in the English village where he had preached. After tea he was sitting in the garden with his hostess. Out rushed her little boy, holding a rat above his head.

"Don't be afraid, mother," he cried, "it's dead. We beat him and bashed him and thumped him until"—and then catching sight of the clergyman, he said, in a lowered voice—"until God called him home."

WINTER DRIVING HINTS

Average Passenger Car Does Not Need High-Priced Anti-Freeze

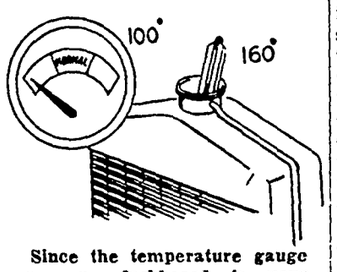
Every year about 100,000,000 gallons of anti-freeze are poured into 40 million or more automobile radiators in every section of the United States except Key West, Florida. Ninety-eight per cent of this anti-freeze is either the "low boiling" type, or the "high boiling" type—often erroneously called "permanent".

Both are made of chemicals belonging roughly to the alcohol family: the low boiling has ethyl (denatured) alcohol or menthanol (wood alcohol) as a base, the high boiling has an ethylene glycol or propylene glycol base.

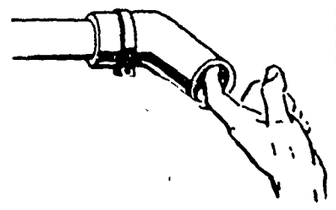
To the average motorist, however, the main difference is that the low boiling is standard-priced ($1.25 a gallon) while the high boiling is premium-priced ($3.50 a gallon).

Because of this difference, many motorists think they are giving their cars extra protection by buying premium-priced anti-freeze. Actually, most of them are wasting money—their cars don't need "extra protection." The National Bureau of Standards, which has been issuing authoritative circulars on anti-freeze for 25 years, states:

"For the average passenger car service, it is possible to use anti-freeze of either low boiling point or of high boiling point. For heavier duty, prolonged idling, or operation at high altitudes, a high-boiling anti-freeze is usually considered preferable, although low-boiling anti-freezes have been used successfully."



Since the temperature gauge on your dashboard is your warning signal if anything goes wrong, make sure it's working. A faulty gauge may show overheating or overcooling, even though the cooling system is in perfect order. So play safe, have your serviceman check the gauge.



Check your radiator hose occasionally by feeling for spongy or swollen places and making sure clamps are tight. Particles of rubber from rotten hose will clog the radiator. Loose connections will cause anti-freeze solution to leak.

The Du Pont company, with 17 years experience in anti-freeze research, made road tests comparing its standard-priced anti-freeze with its premium-priced product. These tests were made with every make of car on the road today. The results not only checked with the findings of the Bureau of Standards, but helped define them in greater detail. The tests showed:

That a good standard-priced anti-freeze provides full protection for four out of five cars.

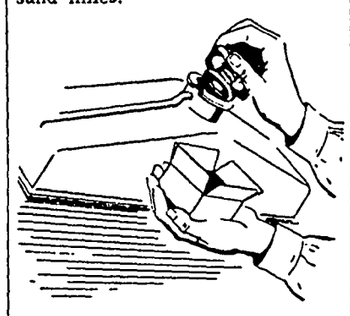
That the only cars requiring a premium-priced anti-freeze are those driven at high altitudes or in temperatures lower than 30 degrees below, or in which the standard thermostat has been replaced with a "high-opening" type to get more heat from the car heater.

In other words, if a motorist buys premium-priced anti-freeze when his car doesn't need it, he's throwing money away.

The term "permanent" anti-freeze is a misnomer. A certain amount of anti-freeze is bound to be lost for one reason or another during a season. Also, during use anti-freeze can become contaminated through leakage of exhaust gases and, if left in a car indefinitely, will cause serious damage. For this reason, the Bureau of Standards advises: "Drain the anti-freeze solution after one winter's use or earlier. Under no circumstances should it remain in the cooling system during the summer."

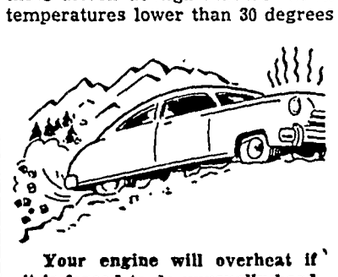
For the same reason, anti-freeze should not be saved and used again the following year, as many motorists do.

Contrary to popular belief, most anti-freeze losses in winter driving aren't due to evaporation. Leaks, expansion at high temperatures, "after-boil" and the surging of the liquid on sudden stopping are the chief causes. In fact, the Du Pont road tests showed that the average car loses less than one-pint of evaporated anti-freeze per thousand miles.



If your radiator cap leaks, anti-freeze solution will be lost and rust or water marks will stain the top of the radiator tank. A defective cap can usually be fixed by replacing the washer, which is cheaper than replacing lost anti-freeze mixture.

These tests also showed that, when anti-freeze is lost, the solution remaining gives about the same protection as the original fill. In other words, water evaporates, leaks or boils over in about the same proportion as anti-freeze and does not separate, as many people think. That's why anti-freeze should be mixed with water, and not added full strength to replace losses. Adding anti-freeze full strength not only wastes money, but is risky since it lowers the boiling point of the solution.



Your engine will overheat if it is forced to do unusually hard work for a long period, like spinning your wheels to get out of mud or snow. If sand or ashes aren't available, call a service station. A towing job costs less than a damaged engine.

Farmer's Almanac Forecasts Weather

You might as well face it—next summer's national holidays will be wet ones. Memorial Day, Fourth of July, and Labor Day are all going to be rainy.

New Year's Day will be c-c-c-cold January and February will have more than average snow, the white blanket lasting well into March. To begin the last week of the year just ahead, there will be a white Christmas.

Call all that one man's opinion or "guesstimate," if you wish, comments the National Geographic Society. But as part of the full year's weather forecast by Mr. Weatherwise in the Old Farmer's Almanac, it is typical of weather predictions in many farm almanacs that are gospel of a sort in many hundred thousand rural households.

Published at Dublin, N. H., the Old Farmer's for 1951 is the "159th continuous year of publication.' Only a few years its junior is the Hagerstown Town and Country Almanack of Hagerstown, Md. Many others have strong followings in various farm sectors.

In many farm households today, the two most important books are the Bible and the almanac. The same was true in Europe in Pilgrim times, and became the case in America during the 18th century. William Bradford published the first American almanac in 1687. Benjamin Franklin's Poor Richard's Almanac, still much copied in style, appeared annually from 1732 to 1757.

Clogged Radiators Cause Over-Heating

Keep your radiator free of leaves and other debris. A clogged radiator slows the intake of air and can cause the engine to get too hot, even if everything else is working properly. Most obstructions can be washed out from the back with a hose.

When adding coolant, don't fill your radiator to the top or you'll lose some of your anti-freeze solution. The coolant expands as your engine warms up, so room should be left for it.

Licenses, Training Urged For Sitters

State legislatures and city councils throughout the nation, have been petitioned to pass laws requiring the licensing of all baby sitters, private kindergartens, day care agencies, and nursery and play schools

It is suggested that such licensing be regulatory in nature and not for revenue.

The present lack of standards for these persons and institutions is highly detrimental to the health, safety and general welfare of infants and pre-school-age children, petitioners believe While some of the more progressive cities and states have already begun to inquire into the matter of licensing pre-school centers, entirely too many have been lax and indifferent to this need, many parents contend Little or nothing has been done, to date, by city and state governing bodies to require physical examinations of baby sitters.

Some parents think baby sitters should in addition be required to obtain the signatures of two persons in their community testifying to their moral character and reliability They believe that regular courses of study should be required of all baby sitters and directors and their assistants in day care agencies and nursery and play schools and suggest that, as a temporary measure, these courses could be made available in the form of evening classes sponsored by local civic groups or governing bodies

Pre-Historic Gable

The Cro-Magnon man was the glamou. boy of Europe during the Stone Ages. This tall, handsome, and intelligent man lived between about 30,000 and 10,000 B C. Like most handsome men, the Cro-Magnonman was clothes-conscious It was he who discovered how to make better garments by cutting pieces of skin and sewing them together.

Save Money On This Home Mixed Cough Syrup

Big Saving. No Cooking. So Easy.

You'll be surprised how quickly and easily you can relieve coughs due to colds, when you try this splendid recipe. It gives you about four times as much cough medicine for your money, and you'll find it truly wonderful for real relief.

Make a syrup with 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water. No cooking needed. (Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.) Then put 2½ ounces of Pinex (obtained from any druggist) in a pint bottle, and fill up with your syrup. This makes a full pint of medicine that will please you by its quick action. It never spoils, and tastes fine—children love it.

This simple mixture takes right hold of a cough. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, quickly eases soreness and difficult breathing.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its quick action in coughs and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

CLOSING DATE FOR SEALING AND COMPLETING LOANS JANUARY 31, 1951

The closing date for sealing and completing loans on the 1950 crops of oats and soybeans is January 31, 1951, according to information from the Hancock County PMA Office.

The loan rate for oats is 69c per bushel, and for soybeans, $2.08 per bushel plus premiums ranging from one to six cents depending on the moisture content of the beans.

The same closing date applies to flaxseed and barley. The loan rate on flaxseed is $2.60 per bushel and on barley, $1.14 per bushel.

The grain must be sealed and the loan papers must be completed, signed and approved before the closing date, and so producers wishing loans yet would need to make application immediately.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE HANCOCK COUNTY BOARD OF SUPERVISORS

1ST ADJOURNED JANUARY MEETING
Garner, Iowa
January 8, 1951

The Hancock County, Iowa, Board of Supervisors met in session on above captioned date pursuant to adjournment with Clint Daniels, Clarence Bird and F. J. Schoun present.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved as read.

Garner, Iowa
January 8, 1951

MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS OF THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF HANCOCK COUNTY, IOWA, ACTING FOR AND ON BEHALF OF DRAINAGE DISTRICT NO. 158 OF SAID COUNTY.

The Board of Supervisors of Hancock County, Iowa acting for and on behalf of Drainage District No. 158 of said county, met in the court room at the Court House for further hearing and consideration upon the report of the commissioners to assess benefits in said District and for further consideration upon the classifications of the lands in said District, all pursuant to the adjournment as of the meeting of December 26, 1950. All members were present. The Chairman, F. J. Schoun, presiding and in the chair, announced to the land owners present that the Board of Supervisors had made a personal inspection of the district, and that any land owner would be heard by the Board on any further statements any of them desired to make in support of their written objections filed prior to the meeting of December 26, 1950; and thereupon several of the various land owners, whose lands are included in said drainage improvement and assessed for benefits thereof, were orally heard by the Board; and at the conclusion thereof the Chairman again orally announced to the land owners present that if there were others present who had not been heard that the Board would listen to and give consideration to any other land owners present; and the written objections and the oral statements made in support thereof of certain land owners having been given further consideration and the report of the commissioners appointed to classify said land and assess benefits in said District having been given further consideration by the Board, and the Board having fully considered the report and all objections thereto, and the commissioners having on January 2, 1951 filed a supplemental and amended report which was duly considered by the Board, and the Board being now fully advised in the premises, it was moved by Supervisor Clarence Bird and seconded by Supervisor C. D. Daniels that the classification of the following lands be changed and the assessment for benefits be reduced accordingly as hereinafter shown, to-wit:

Property Owner	Description	Section	Acres
Laurence Nielsen	SW¼ NE¼	21	36	be changed from a classification of 4.06 to 3.28 for the main open ditch, and the assessment on said tract be reduced from $51.10 to $41.30 as to the open main, and that said tract as to Lateral D be changed from classification 19 to classification 15.27, reducing the assessment on account of said Lateral D on said tract from $680.58 to $546.88, for a total of $588.18 for the main and said Lateral D and that the total assessment against said tract of main and Lateral D be reduced from $731.68 to $588.18.

DRAINAGE AND RAINFALL ARE NOT CORRELATED

Spring floods are not made worse by tiling farm land in Iowa, nor does drained land cause drouth, according to Iowa State College agricultural engineer D. O. Hull.

He cites the annual precipitation charts for Minneapolis and St. Paul as a basis for this statement. These charts cover a period of 112 years and show no correlation between the drainage and precipitation. Old precipitation records based on tree ring charts clearly show that for the last 500 years there have been serious drouths on the continent.

Stream flow studies conducted by hydraulic engineers at the State University of Iowa indicate that about the same amount of water is passing through Iowa streams now as did before extensive drainage was started.

SEED QUALITY ASSURED BY BLUE TAG ON BAG

More than 1,800,000 bushels of crop seed will carry blue tags this year, according to Joe L. Robinson, secretary of the Iowa Crop Improvement Ass'n.

The blue tag attached to a bag means that the seed has met high standards for pudity and germinaion and has been approved by the state certifying agency.

This large supply of seed includes corn hybrids, small grains, legumes and grasses, soybeans and potato seed grown on 41,643 acres of Iowa's farmland.

Each variety seed that carries a blue tag has been approved by certification inspectors for its ability to grow and yield well in Iowa.

Farmers who grow seed for certification must meet high fied and storage requirements. Trained fieldmen from the Iowa Crop Improvement Association visit certified growers' fields during the growing season to check the purity of seed still in the field. Then, those fieldmen again check seed in storage for purity and germination. Only after the seed passes all these tests, both field and bin, can the blue tag be attached.

Robinson reminds farmres that the blue tag gives the farmer, at a glance, more assurance of seed quality than he could get by running a bushel of the seed through his fingers.

ALFALFA PROVIDES CHEAPEST PROTEIN

Soybean Ailmeal Ranks Next At Present Prices

A big cost in most feeding programs is the protein supplement. And alfalfa now furnishes protein at less cost per pound than any other feed, reports W. A. Pearce, Iowa State College farm economist.

On a cost-per-pound of total protein basis, alfalfa supplies protein for about 6½ cents. Soybean meal ranks second in economy at present prices, costing about 9½ cents a pound. Good clover-timothy hay comes next at a cost of 9.7 cents a lb., while linseed meal costs about 1 and one-third cents for each pound of available protein.

Consider Quality

The cost of protein is more important than the quality as a feed for cattle and sheep, Pearce says. That's because these animals have a digestive set-up that can use a poor quality protein feed. For these types of livestock it's wise to buy protein supplements on the basis of the actual amounts of protein they contain, he points out.

Feeders should also remember, Pearce says, that it takes twice as much of a 20 percent protein supplement to meet a fixed requirement as it does a 40 percent protein mixture. Usually, on the basis of pounds of protein contained, the 40 percent mixture is the cheaper.

Hogs, Poultry Differ

It's harder to know how to get the most from the protein dollar for hogs and poultry. For them the quality of protein is an important factor. Soybean oilmeal again ranks low in cost of vailable protein as a feed for hogs and poultry. Pearce says that a pound of protein from soybean meal is nearly a fourth cheaper than the average cost of a pound of protein from tankage or meat scraps.

An APF vitamin premix that contains all the necessary elements not found in vegetable proteins can be used along with soybean meal to produce a protein supplement equal to or better than proteins of animal origin. This is according to results from experiments run by the Animal Husbandry Department at Iowa State College.

Soybean meal plus the premix is still much cheaper than animal protein such as tankage or meat scraps.

RUBBING CATTLE MAY HAVE GRUBS

Use Of Rotenone Dust Or Spray Recommended

Cattle grubs will soon be showing up on the backs of beef cattle shipped into the state from Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas and eastern Colorado. Farmers who are feeding these cattle should keep a close watch and be ready to treat when the grubs appear.

Earle Raun, extension entomologist at Iowa State College, says that the best results on beef cattle will be obtained from two treatments, 30 days apart. Since the second one should come just 30 days after the first grubs show up on the backs of the animals, it's important to keep a close watch for them.

The entomologist says rubbing is a good sign grubs are appearing and is a good symptom to watch for. However, lice can be the cause and cattle should be examined before treatment.

If Lice, Use DDT

For control, Raun recommends spraying or dusting with rotenone. The way it's applied depends on the equipment a farmer has available and personal preference. The end results will be about the same if the treatmnt is thorough.

On advantage of spraying is that grubs and louse control will be handled in one operation. A mixture of DDT and rotenone should be used. The DDT will take care of the lice in the first operation so rotenone alone will be all that's needed for the final treatment.

The proper spray mixture is 7½ pounds of 5 percent rotenone powder and 1 box of detergent or wetting agent such as Vel, Dreft or Swerl, in 100 gallons of water. For lice, 8 pounds of 50 percent wettable DDT should be added. A good spraying pressure is 50 pounds.

Keep Spray Agitated

Raun says there should be agitation in the tank throughout the spraying operation to keep the mixture thoroughly stirred. One hundred gallons of spray should be enough to treat 100 head of cattle.

If dust alone is used, Raun says to use 1.0 percent of 1.67 percent rotenone applied at the rate of 1 pound per 12 head of cattle. This should be applied to the backs of the animals from a quart fruit jar in which one-quarter-inch holes have been punched in the lid. This method is effective for the grubs, but will afford little louse control if the rotenone is applied only to the grubby areas.

Raun points out that lice are scattered over the body of the entire animal. Rotenone will kill them if it's applied to infested areas, but these places are hard to reach when dusting beef cattle. Dusting will be an effective control for dairy cattle stanchioned in the barn where all parts of the body are accessible.

It's A Saving To Keep Your—

WARDROBE WELL GROOMED

Safeguarding the family wardrobe is going to be a number-one assignment for Iowa homemakers in the national emergency. Keeping clothes clean, mended and well groomed can prolong their life, and stave off paying higher prices for new clothes.

Half the reason why most folks want a new dress or hat or suit every so often is because the old ones look so dowdy.

These hard used garments would probably still look like new if we took care right from the start to keep them that way.

Prices Higher

Prices for new clothes are going to be even higher from now on. Futhermore, though clothing shortages are not foreseen, there is every probability that the clothes which have been selling in the lower price brackets just won't be as easily found in our stores. This is a good cue, we're told, for every homemaker and each member if her family to do an even better job of taking care of the clothes the family owns. Notable among the clothes to be most cherished are those of wool.

"It's the daily routine care that really counts up to longer life for garments," Elsie Williams, extension clothing specialist, Iowa State College, tells. Foremost among the little-but-important things she lists hanging up clothes on the right hanger. It's worth the price of a good padded wooden hanger, she says, to lengthen the wearing life of your wool coat or good dresses. Wire hangers, though useful for lighter garments, often slip when used for heavier garments such as coats and suits. They tend to push the garment out of shape and let it hang crooked.

Another pointer—button one or two of the top buttons on your garment. This will keep it from being knocked askew on the hanger. And take the belts off your garments and hang them separately. Otherwise they will tend to pull down on the fabric. This tip applies to men's trousers, too.

Get yourself a good, sturdy clothes brush and keep it handy. There's nothing like frequent brushing to keep your wool and wool-like garments new looking longer. You can't hurt fabric by brushing it, Mrs. Williams says It's the lack of brushing that does the damage. Dirt and dust become imbedded in the cloth and cut or fray the fibers. Most folks, Mrs. Williams says, think that the chief reason for brushing clothes is to remove lint and to help the person look well groomed. This is a good reason, she adds, but not the main one. And she suggests that you brush the cloth with the grain of the fabric or, if the cloth has a pile (velvet or velveteen), brush with the nap rather than against it.

Wearing the same outfit every day is not wise. An alternate outfit does much to prolong the life of both sets of clothes, we are told, since fibers in all garments need a chance to rest and to regain their resiliency.

Clean and Mended

Sending clothes to the dry-cleaners at regular intervals, or whenever clothes become soiled, is always more of a saving in the long run than the price that such cleaning might cost, Mrs. Williams says. Just as washable clothes become soiled and home laundering makes them fresh and clean once again, so do non-washable garments need to have a fresh start. Thorough cleaning at the winter season's end is always a "must."

If you snag your coat or good suit, send it to a professional weaver, she suggests.

SCHOOL NEWS

Kindergarten News

Our train is nearing completion. We have one car and the engine done. The boys and girls have been busy painting and fixing the different cars.

Thursday we went to the depot and saw different equipment that is used at the station. Mr. Harson explained how the signals and other equipment worked. We saw where they store the freight which comes in and goes out.

Wednesday, Jan. 24, we are taking a train trip to Garner. The bus will meet us at Garner and bring us back to school. The train leaves at 8:30. The boys and girls are very excited about going.

It was a close call for six-year old Dennis Severson of Forest City. He was taken to the hospital at Mason City with symptoms of meningitis. Diagnosis revealed his illness to be tonsilitis.

BEWARE OF UNADAPTED VARIETIES OF ALFALFA

Choosing the right variety of alfalfa is important, but the area from which the seed originated may make a greater difference in its performance than the variety itself, says R. E. Krenzin' Iowa State College extension agronomist. armers and seed dealers have been offered more alfalfa seed than usual this year from the production areas in the Southwest. Some of these seed lots may be adapted to Iowa, but some will not be sufficiently winter-hardy for Iowa conditions.

Certified seed of Ranger, Buffalo and Atlantic produced in the southwestern states is entirely satisfactory for Iowa use. Certification of these varieties requires that the foundation stock must be secured from a adaption even though the seed is produced elsewhere. Also Grimm, Cossack, Ladak and Northern Common, which originated from certified seed in the northern states, may be produced in areas of mild climates, but only if the seed planted there came directly from northern-grown stock.

Common southwestern-grown alfalfa seed is definitely not adapted to Iowa. Numerous tests save shown that the common southwestern varieties do not survive Iowa's average winter temperatures.

Farmers should carefully examine the label on seed produced in the Southwest. If it is certified seed of Ranger, Buffalo or Atlantic, it is safe to plant. If it is common alfalfa seed it very likely will not be adapted to Iowa climate.

SEE FURTHER DROP IN U.S. WOOL PRODUCTION

Another drop in United States wool production is expected for 1951. Iowa State College marketing specialists report an estimated decrease from last year's production of 2 million pounds of wool on a clean basis.

This would mean that about 109 million pounds of wool on a clean basis would be sheared this year in the United States. But our consumption will be around 410 to 440 million lbs., according to marketing specialist E. N. Francis. The armed forces will account for nearly one-eighth of this amount.

So it looks like another year of large imports, with domestic producers falling far short of the national need, despite a wool price climb of 57 percent in the last year. Francis thinks prices will probably rise even more during the next 12 months.

He hopes that foreign countries will take care of our wool deficit again in 1951. This looks like a favorable solution to our shortage, because in 1951, total world production is expected to climb 5 percent above the prewar average. This estimate was made by representatives at a London meeting of the International Wool Study group.

Australian wool output has risen sharply during the past 3 years due mainly to a recovery from heavy drouth losses. During the past 5 years world production has exceeded consumption, Francis says. The international wool group expects production to keep up with consumption for 1951, if wool consumption doesn't increase too much.

EGG PRICE OUTLOOK FOR SPRING HAS IMPROVED

Changed attitudes of poultrymen and persons in the egg prices than were expected earlier, according to Francis Kutish, Iowa State College farm economist.

While there is still a question whether egg prices will be as high as they were last spring, the egg trade is likely to move more eggs into storage this spring and cut into any surplus that may have been expected, Kutish reports.

In addition government figures show poultrymen now have 4 percent fewer layers on hand instead of the 2 percent cut shown in earlier crop and livestock reports. This reduction is expected to make a noticeable cut in the size of the 1951 spring egg output.

In view of these factors and current strong consumer demand for eggs, poultrymen are likely to revise upward their orders for baby chicks in late winter and early spring, Kutish says He adds that the egg and poultry outlook for 1952 continues to be favored for well managed farm flocks

FERTILE SOIL IMPORTANT IN PRACTICAL EROSION CONTROL

Failure to correct the fertility troubles in land may hasten soil depletion by other processes, Hancock County Soil Conservation District Commissioner Ben Riemer points out in a report of the Soil District Commissioners Short Course at Iowa State College January 2-5.

Riemer says that according to material presented at the short course by H. B. Cheney, extension agronomist, soil depletion or removal of plant food nutrients from the soil is carried on by leaching, through crops and by erosion.

Cheney said that improving or maintaining a soil in a fertile state with lime and fertilizer may also help indirectly to slow up processes of soil depletion such as declining amounts of organic matter, loss of granular structure or removal of surface soil by erosion. For example, when sloping soils that are strongly acid, and low to very low in available nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium are cropped, weak plant growth results and soil erosion may occur rapidly.

Riemer said that about 70 percent of the rotation land of Iowa is sloping and soil depletion by erosion is a problem. A high state of fertility is a strong aid in controlling erosion on sloping land because it provides for ample vegetation necessary in a practical erosion program.

Ample vegetation absorbs much of the impact of falling rain drops and slows down water runoff. Vigorous plant root systems help hold the soil in place, and legume-grass sods aid in increasing soil aggegation and in making soil more porous. In addition, water used by larger crops grown on fertile soil produces food and fiber rather than erosion, he point out.

IOWA WAS BETTER PLACE TO LIVE, IN 1950

Life was a little better in Iowa, in 1950.

On the surface, it looked about the same. Babies were born, younsters trudged to school, young couples were married and some of them divorced, paydays came as frequently as they ever do, people bought homes and cars and farm equipment. Life went on much as it always has.

But life was a little better than usual, it appears in the summing up.

More babies were born in Iowa, this year—60 more than last year, and 2,000 more than the year before. An estimated 63,577 infants joined the Iowa population during 1950. The 1949 and 1950 birth rates were 24.2 babies born per thousand population; 1948 births were 23.7 per 1000 population.

The 1950 Iowa babies had a better chance to live through the dangerous first year of their lives, too. Iowa's infant mortality rate runs about 20 percent below the national average, and it dropped still another notch in 1950. Of every 2,000 babies born in Iowa, 1953 happily celebrated their first birthday in 1950.

More Iowa youngsters went to school in 1950, but fewer of them trudged. Some 477,720 Iowans between 5 and 18 years of age were in public schools this year—an increase of 2½ percent. Six and a half percent more country pupils were riding school busses to town or consolidated schools — 67,586 this year, cmpared to 63,318 last year. And at least ten percent more were eating hot lunches at school: Nearly one thousand Iowa schools are serving hot lunches to some 137,500 pupils this winter.

Cupid was out-batting the gremlins in Iowa marriages, in 1950. An estimated 26,732 couples took out licenses to love and to cherish, this year—1200 more than in 1949. Only 5195 couples took their troubles to the divorce judge—250 fewer than in the year before.

Paydays were no closer than usual, in 1950, but they came more regularly and the paychecks were bigger. Unemployment dropped to a two-year low, and the average paycheck was the biggest on record, in October of 1950. Average factory wage in Iowa, for instance, rose to $1.40 an hour, and employees put in an hour or two overtime, most weeks, to give them an average paycheck of $59.26.

More Iowans were becoming home-owners, in 1950. Sixteen thousand more residents filed for homestead exemption in 1950 than in 1949—475,122 of our citizens now hold deeds to their homes.

More Iowans owner automobiles, too. Motor vehicle registrations topped the million mark in Iowa in 1950, and by the end of the year totaled 1,193,000. Of them, 878,606 were passenger cars, and more than 129,000 had been purchased in 1950.

As usual, Iowa farms were the most mechanized in 1950. Iowa continued to rank first in the number of tractors and other labor-saving farm equipment.

And while life was a little better in 1950, it was also a little longer. Iowans departing this life in 1950 averaged nearly 72 years of age, and had enjoyed at least two years more life than their friends who preceded them in 1940. Iowans can now look forward to a longer life than the residents of 44 other states—from two and a half to three years longer than the nationwide average.

Iowa's Money Man

Cousin Ed was talking about the fellow they call the $2 bill man. He uses $2 bills all the time.

"They're his trademark," Ed says . . . "so you'll remember him and his firm."

Well, that shows you the difference in people. Why, I know folks who consider $2 bills unlucky! And, out west, it's silver dollars they like to carry.

To me, that's another wonderful thing about America . . . we can take our pick, whether it be the kind of money we carry, or the kind of politics we vote.

Sure Ed votes one way and I vote another. That's OK by me. Some folks like money, some don't give a hang. And, at home, Edna likes her cup of tea and I like my temperate bottle of beer . . . and that's fine, too.

Be it money, marbles, or chalk, we Americans value the right to our own choice . . . and we're certainly going to keep it.

AROUND IOWA

Thief

Ernest Winter, Osceola farmer, has been missing gasoline from his farm tank recently. So he stayed home one Saturday evening, with the light turned off, while his wife did the shopping. Armed with a shotgun, he apprehended a 17 year old youth helping himself to gasoline.

Coin Collections

J. M. Cappel, Independence, started his own coin collection about 12 years ago. He now has 16,000 Indian head pennies, and a number of other rare coins.

Dragged In Car

A car driven by Lloyd Horstman was hit by a train at Guttenberg and dragged 74 feet, with the driver still inside. Horstman escaped without a scratch. One day previously, he had also escaped without injuries when his machine struck another automobile.

Owl Disrupted Lights

A horned owl disrupted the power service in Waukon for about fifteen minutes last week. The bird flew into a power-line about one mile north of the city. He was found dead by linemen, with his 40-inch wings scorched in two places.

Damages

Papers were filed in one of Dallas county's biggest damage suits recently. The estate of the late Frank Forrest, killed in an auto accident in 1948, is asking $52,690 in damages of the trucking company involved in the collision.

Embarrassed

The "law" at Marcus was embarrassed recently. A local resident was locked up for the night in the jail after imbiding a little too freely. Not liking the accommodations, the prisoner unscrewed the lock, using a dime for a screw-driver, and went home. The lock has now been welded on.

Sold Store

After 50 years of ownership by the same family, the Smith Department store at Burt has been sold. The store was founded at the turn of the century by L. C. Smith and for the last 20 years has been operated by his two sons.

Panther Sighted

Residents of near Sheffield report seeing a "black panther" near there recently. The panther has been seen in Iowa for the past four years; first at Tama, later around Des Moines and now at Sheffield.

Santa Claus

Orphans at the Anne Wittenmeyer home at Davenport enjoyed a nice Christmas this year. Donors of $160 worth of Christmas gifts were the resident of another institution—the men's reformatory at Anamosa.

Bagged Five Coons

When moving a hog house on his farm near Elliott recently, Lester Hill uncovered five big racoon who were making their home beneath it. He bagged them all. They weighed about 20 pounds each.

Narrow Escape

Three year old Linda Snitker had a narrow escape in her home at Decorah recently. A fire started by faulty wiring filled the house with smoke as she lay asleep. Her father returned home and brought her out safely.

Victim Of Basement Fire

Three year old Jimmy of Jefferson was the victim of a basement fire, which took his life two days after Christmas. He was playing in the basement when his mother heard him call out that his clothing was on fire.

Fell From Moving Car

Sandra Lou Simmons of Davenport fell from a car on the highway near Iowa City recently. The vehicle was going 65 miles an hour but Sandra Lou received only minor scratches.

Doing Fine

At Hampton, Ernest Schlaman has always taken pride in his ability to take care of himself and his family. He lost both arms in an accident while serving as a lineman on a REA high-line, a year ago. Now, he is a successful business man, operating his own appliance store.

Puppy Returned

A two-year old Denison lad is happy again; his missing Cocker puppy has returned home. The dog was bought "in good faith" by another Denison family, who returned it to the young owner after reading a newspaper story that the dog was missing.

"Panther"

After four telephone linemen had spotted Iowa's famous "black panther" near Remsen recently, a hunting party was organized. Aided with spotter planes, the hunters tracked down the animal, which proved to be a friendly big black dog.

60th Anniversary

At Ames, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Poage observed their 60th wedding anniversry recently. They were married January 1, 1891 and spent the first 46 years of their married life on a farm near Baxter.

New Sheriff

O'Brien county has a new sheriff, for the first time in 24 years. Veteran Ed Leemkuil retired this month, after serving 12 consecutive terms. His total experience as a peace officer at the time of his retirement was over 29 years.

Monoxide Fumes

A defective furnace sent 8 persons to the hospital recently. The group was visiting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Rogers, in Greenfield and all became unconscious when carbon monoxide fumes escaped from a defective furnace.

Collision

Claude Green of Avoca suffered damage to his automobile recently when a deer jumped in front of the car on highway 59.

Still First

A year ago, Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Akin became Hawarden's first parents of 1950. This year, the Akin family's Spaniel gave birth of pups a few hours after the New Year began.

Is 105 Of Age

Mrs. Lorinda Ferguson of Marion observed her 105th birthday there recently. She was born in Ohio in 1846. Two of her brothers served with the Union army in the Civil war and she recalls incidents of that war and the assassination of President Lincoln.

UNITED DEFENSE FUND

Organization Formed to Aid Financing of Welfare Services

The United Defense Fund, Inc. a new organization for financing of national health and welfare services made necessary by the defense effort, got under way recently with an appeal to the Community Chests in more than 1200 cities for funds to support a program of services in 1951.

A federation of national agencies and local community interests for the joint financing of national defense services in the field of health and welfare, the United Defense Fund, Inc. offered to local communities a "single-package" appeal for support of national defense health and welfare services for both civilians and the armed forces.

The organization was formed to meet the frequently expressed desire of local Community Chests that appeals to them from national agencies, especially in time of special need, be properly screened, budgeted, and united in their financing—just as is the Community Chest itself. Other reasons for the unification of these national agency services are: (1) a desire not to increase the number of appeals now being made to the American public; (2) a wish to join forces in carrying out needed services economically, efficiently and effectively.

The organization of the United Defense Fund, Inc. was preceded by a series of conferences which included the national agencies and groups concerned and representatives of Community Chests. As a result of these sessions a planning and advisory committee on national emergency services was jointly appointed by Community Chests and Councils of America, Inc. and the National Social Welfare Assembly, Inc. to consider what services were needed and how they should be organized and financed. This committee made a series of recommendations, one of which requested the two sponsoring organizations to set up a national fund which could finance such services and approach the country throug a single package of essential services. This recommendation was considered and approved by the governing bodies of both organizations and authorization was given to proceed with the fund organization.

E. A. Roberts, president of Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance Company, Philadelphia, Pa. was elected president at the first meeting of the Fund November 28, in New York City.

Charles H. Watts, chairman of board, Beneficial Management Corporation, Newark, N. J. was elected treasurer. William H. Bulkeley, vice president of Kellogg and Bulkeley, Lithographic Division, Connecticut Printers Incorporated, Hartford, Conn., was elected secretary.

SERVICES TO RECEIVE support from the United Defense Fund, Inc. fall into two groups at present.

The first group is concerned with services to the armed forces and will be conducted by: American Social Hygiene Association; Associated Services for the Armed Forces (which includes Jewish Welfare Board, National Catholic Community Services and YMCA); National Recreation Association; National Travelers' Aid Association and Y.W.C.A.

The second group will provide services to communities congested by the national defense effort. These services will be conducted by: Child Welfare League of America; National Organization for Public Health Nursing; National Federation of Settlements and Neighborhood Centers; National Urban League; National Catholic Community Service; National Recreation Association and Y.W.C.A.

The United Defense Fund, Inc. will raise funds through the "united campaign" approach wherever possible and will seek support from the nation's Community Chests on a share and share alike basis, community quotas being based on the recommendations of the National Quota Committee. Funds will also be sought in New York City.

The national campaign goal for the United Defense Fund, Inc. as approved by the National Budget Committee for services to be given in 1951 is $7,399,329. Community Chests throughout the country will be asked to provide $6,058,101 of this goal with the remaining $1,341,228 to be secured from New York City and other non-Chest sources.

BING CROSBY gives another performance as himself in "Mr. Music"; box office reports of the past prove that the movie-going public is satisfied if he sings and cracks jokes, so he does it once more. The picture is like a gaily wrapped present, containing plenty of entertainment. Ruth Hussey and

BING CROSBY

Charles Coburn lead the list of excellent actors, and the list of guest stars is impressive, including Dorothy Kirsten, Groucho Marx, and Peggy Lee. Nancy Olson carries the burden of the love story—never very important in a Crosby picture, of course. There is plenty of nice music and good dancing; for good entertainment, take "Mr. Music".

It had to happen some time, of course; too bad Ralph Edwards was the victim. He had filmed his Christmas "Truth or Consequences" television show, on which he really shot the works. So—the wrong can of film was sent by the agency to CBS-TV in New York, and was released, the week before Christmas, instead of the show scheduled for that date, on stations on the cable from New York.

There were divided openings when it was learned that NBC was negotiating an exclusive, long-term contract with Margaret Truman for radio and television appearances, receiving nearly $4,000 for each performance. Some people thought NBC might better spend the money in some other way, others felt her appearance recently on "The Big Show" really justified the deal.

Lauren Bacall has a way of getting what she wants. She wanted Humphrey Bogart, and got him. She has her screen career, her baby Recently she signed to make one picture a year for 20th Century-Fox, but first she will accompany Bogart when he goes to Europe to co-star in "African Queen" with Katherine Hepburn, for his own independent company. That's very nice planning.

ROOMS FOR RENT

By Dorothy Boys Kilian

"HONEY, YOU DON'T really think you can rent these rooms for the summer, do you?" Dick Shipley, still in his greasy cover-alls, frowned as he found his pretty young wife sitting on the wide-board floor in an upstairs bedroom, mending a faded blue rag rug.

3-Minute Fiction

Margaret stood up slowly and planted a kiss on his smudgy cheek "We want to have a nice crib and other things for our first baby, don't we, darling? And that takes money—more than we've got to spend."

"Maybe I could take another job in the evenings, or something."

"Why, Dick, you're exhausted when you come home from the garage; and lots of times you don't even get here until eight or nine."

"Yeh, I know. Starting a new business means no money and no free time for a while."

"Well, this house your mother left us has more rooms than we need for ourselves."

"But just look at the furniture!" Dick waved an arm at the room in general. "You sit in that wooden rocker for ten minutes and those slats make a prison bar pattern on your back. The bed's so high you need a Pullman ladder to climb into it, and that wash stand—"

"I think it's all kind of quaint," Margaret said placidly. Dick snorted. "People on vacation want to be comfortable, not quaint. And besides, think where we're located; practically out in the country, the opposite end of town from the lake and all the amusements."

"It's nice and quiet, though," Margaret insisted.

Dick shrugged. "I give up. But I hate to see you slaving away up here."

Margaret stood up slowly, put her arms around his neck and planted a kiss on his smudgy cheek.

"Oh, well," the doctor says I need plenty of exercise," Margaret said soothingly.

"There's the doorbell, I'll get it." Dick, still looking troubled, started downstairs.

A portly, pink-cheeked old gentleman stood on the porch. "This is the Shipley residence?"

"Why, yes," Dick looked goggle-eyed past him to the long shiny black car parked in front of the house.

"May I speak to Mrs. Shipley?"

"I'm Mrs. Shipley," Margaret called from the top of the stairs."

"I am Mr. Frost of Big Rapids. You have some rooms for rent?"

"Yes. Please come up and I'll show them to you," Margaret answered.

DICK stayed downstairs and listened glumly to the footsteps overhead. He winced as he heard the bathroom door squeak and imagined Mr. Frost's first view of the old tub standing high on its claw feet.

There was a lengthly murmer of voices in the upstairs hall. Then down came Mr. Frost, a hand on Margaret's elbow, and she accepting the little attention as the most natural thing in the world.

"Well, it's all settled then," Mr. Frost was saying. "We'll take the two rooms for the summer. "Yes sir, this advertisement hit us in the right spot." He fingered a little piece of newspaper.

"Advertisement?" Dick stared at the paper

"Your wife used a good psychological trick, didn't she?" Mr. Frost chuckled. "Playing down a thing so much that it excited your curiosity."

"Uh, yes," Dick laughed weakly. "Let's see that again," he said, trying not to look too astonished

"For rent," he read, "for the summer season, two rooms in ancient frame house, unfashionable part of resort village, very few modern conveniences, no recreational facilities nearby. Mrs. Richard Shipley, 1203 Stanley Road, Weehagen, Michigan."

"Yes," Mr. Frost said. "My wife saw that and said it made her thing of a Currier and Ives print—" He handed Margaret some bills, put on his grey homburg, and stepped briskly out the door. garet. "Your greatest triumph, honey, is that you've managed not to look triumphant."

½ teaspoon garlic salt
¼ teaspoon sweet basil
2 small bay leaves
½ teaspoon black pepper
1 finely diced green pepper
2 medium sized onions
3 large ripe tomatoes
1½ tablespoons dried parsley flakes
¾ teaspoon oregano, crumbled

Wash beans and soak overnight in cold water. Drain. Cover with water. Add salt, sweet basil, bay leaf and pepper. Simmer until tender. Drain. Melt 4 tablespoons of the butter in frying pan. Add green pepper and onion. Saute about 10 minutes or until tender but not browned. Add tomatoes cut into small pieces Add oregano and parsley and simmer for about 6 to 8 minutes or until tomatoes are soft. Mash tomatoes some with back of spoon as they cook. Add beans and butter and stir gently to blend. Note: Beans may be placed in baking dish and topped with a little grated Parmesan cheese and baked in oven in covered dish for 10 to 15 minutes, if desired.

Peas and Corn with Marjoram
(Serves 6-8)

1 package each frozen whole kernel corn and peas
3 tablespoons butter
¾ teaspoon powdered marjoram
2 tablespoons cream

Cook peas and corn until tender. Melt butter in small saucepan. Add marjoram and let steep 2 or 3 minutes in warm place. Pour over vegetables and toss gently to mix. Dribble cream over vegetables.

Carrots Julienne with Sage
(Serves 4-5)

1 bunch carrots cut Julienne style
2 tablespoons butter
¼ teaspoon powdered sage
Chopped parsley

Cook carrots until tender. Melt butter in small saucepan. Add sage and let stand in warm place for 2 or 3 minutes to steep. Pour over carrots and toss very gently to mix. Arrange in serving dish and garnish with sprinkle of parsley.

String beans with Freshly Grated Nutmeg

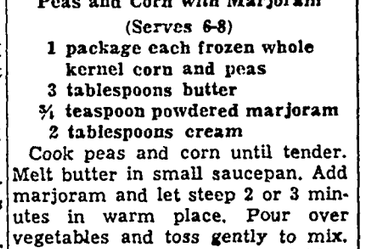
FOR A GOURMET touch,, add a sprinkle of freshly grated nutmeg to buttered string beans.



Leftover tongue combines with several vegetables like carrots, green beans, potatoes and onions in this hearty casserole. The horseradish seasoning gives a zippy flavoring to the white sauce which is so delicious with mild flavored vegetables and sliced tongue.

LYNN SAYS:
Give These Costumes To Vegetable Service

Using a tightly covered pan, use 3-4 cups cut vegetables, and cook with 2 tablespoons salad oil and just enough salted water to cover. These panned vegetables have a new and delightful flavor.

Hollow out the halves of egg plant. Stuff with cooked egg plant, mushrooms and onion in cream sauce. Cover with crumbs. Bake in casseroles 20 minutes in a moderately hot oven (400°).

A harvest ham dinner will be especially good when the vegetable served with it has green beans, cooked until tender but left a lovely green, then spiced with a grating of nutmeg.

Mashed Potatoes with Rosemary Butter
(Serves 2-3)

3 small or 2 medium sized potatoes
¼ teaspoon salt
Pinch black pepper
Rosemary Butter
3-4 pounds top milk or light cream
Paprika

Peel and cut potatoes in half. Cook in boiling salted water until soft but not mushy. Drain. Crush with warm masher and beat until all lumps are out. Add salt, pepper, Rosemary Butter, and beat to blend. Add top milk or cream and beat thoroughly until light and fluffy. Place in serving dish and garnish with extra plain butter and a sprinkle of paprika.

Rosemary Butter

2 tablespoons butter
¼ teaspoon crumbled leaf rosemary

Place butter and rosemary in small saucepan. Heat gently until butter is melted. Set in warm place to steep for ½ hour. Strain out rosemary leaves. Use as in above recipe.

Tongue and Vegetable Casserole
(Serves 6)

3 carrots, sliced
1 cup cut green beans
2 cups cubed potatoes
1 small onion, sliced
1½ cups tongue broth
About 1¼ cups milk
4 tablespoons butter
6 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
4 teaspoons horseradish
12 slices beef tongue

Cook carrots, beans, potatoes and onion in the tongue broth until tender. Drain, saving broth and adding enough milk to make 3 cups of liquid. Make a white sauce with the butter, flour and liquid. Add salt, horseradish and vegetables. Slice the cold tongue about ⅛ inch thick. Pour half the creamed vegetables into a 7-cup casserole and arrange half of the sliced tongue over it; add rest of vegetables and lay rest of tongue slices on top. Cover and bake in a moderate oven, (350°) for about 20 to 30 minutes.

Harvest Ham with Sweet Sauce

½ ham
½ cup currant jelly
1½ teaspoons dry mustard
¼ teaspoon each ground cloves and cinnamon
Whole cloves

Bake ham according to directions on wrappings. Skin and score top into small squares or diamonds. Insert a clove in center of each square. Combine jelly, mustard, cinnamon and ground cloves. Spread over top of ham. Bake 30 to 40 minutes longer, basting several times with juices in pan. Slice ham and arrange slices on platter. Pour cherry sauce over ham slices, if desired. Platter may be garnished with sprigs of parsley.

Slivered potatoes and carrots can be cooked together to glamorize them. Season with butter, pepper and minced parsley.

Celery Leaves: Use in green salads, in bread stuffings, in stews and soups, with roasts and for garnish.

Cauliflower Leaves: Ask for untrimmed cauliflower. Save leaves nearest head. Trim off lower tough parts. Cook in boiling water to cover, 15 minutes. Drain. Season and butter. Or chop and add white sauce.

Al Didn't Go for Soft-Soap, but He Was an Easy Touch

By BILLY ROSE

In Miami some winters ago, Al Jolson stopped in for a quick one at the bar of the hotel where he was staying, and as if on cue the juke box began playing his recording of "Sonny Boy." When the machine clicked off, a plainish-looking woman walked up to the bartender and said, "Lend me a couple of nickels, Mac. I can't get enough of that song."

Jolson pushed a quarter down the bar. "The next five are on me," he said.

The woman looked over and her face lit up. "Why—you're Mr. Jolson!" she said.

"Sure," said Al, "and you knew it the minute I came in. What's the idea of the corny routine, sister?"

Billy Rose

"I just had to talk to you," said the woman. "I've been sitting here all afternoon hoping you'd drop in."

"WHAT'S ON YOUR mind?" asked Al.

"My husband is in a jam," said the woman. "He's the desk clerk in this hotel and he was on duty the other night when you checked in and left an envelope full of money to be put in the safe. Yesterday he heard about a sure thing at Hialeah and took a thousand dollars out of your envelope and bet it on the horse to win. Well, the 'sure thing' came in fifth."

"Has your husband ever dipped into the safe before?" asked Jolson.

"Never," said the woman. "In fact, he never bet on a horse until yesterday—and the only reason he did it was because our son is getting out of high school next June and we've got our hearts set on sending him to college."

"And you thought that by playing 'Sonny Boy' you could soft-soap me out of a thousand bucks?" said Al. "Well, I don't soft-soap that easy. Go and get your husband—you're both coming with me."

A FEW MINUTES later the couple were in a cab with Jolson, sure it was all over but the fingerprinting, but instead of heading for a police station the hackie drove out to the South Miami dog track. There Al led the husband to a pari-mutuel window and handed him five one-hundred-dollar bills.

"This makes fifteen hundred you owe me," he said. "Bet the five C's on No. 4 to win—I got a tip on him this morning."

No. 4 ran so fast it darn near caught up with the mechanical rabbit, and when the clerk cashed in his tickets he was handed $3,000—the odds had been five-to-one.

"I'll take my fifteen hundred," said Al, "and let this be a lesson to you. Never bet the horses—if you gotta bet, bet the dogs."

Last Fall, after a guest broadcast in New York, Jolson was buttonholed by a young man as he was leaving the studio.

"I don't suppose you remember," he said to Al, "but several years ago you took my folks out to the Miami dog track and helped them win fifteen hundred dollars. That money made it possible for me to go to college."

"Sure, I remember," said Al, "and when you write your mom tell her she still owes me some dough."

"I never heard about it," said the young man. "How much was it?"

"A quarter," said Jolson. "She was playing a juke box and ran out of change."

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

By DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

SCRIPTURE: Mark 3:13-4 34. DEVOTIONAL READING: Matthew 5:1-12.

The Great Teacher

Lesson for January 28, 1951

WE HEAR a lot about a "better world." God pity the poor lout who thinks the world as it is, is all right! And may God stab awake those who are afraid to try to make this world better. If you want to see a group of people who are not afraid, and are really working at this, go to your nearest Sunday school. There you will find teachers of religion. They may be doing a good job or a poor one; but anyhow they are trying. And when one of these teachers succeeds, even a little, in what they are all trying to do, the world has already been made a little better.

Dr. Foreman

Greatest of Teachers

EVERY Sunday school teacher, or any other sort, for that matter, should study the methods of Jesus to see what good teaching can be. He is and will always be THE Teacher.

His object was not to teach science or history. The only technique he taught was the most important of all—the technique of fine living. His object was to teach "what we are to believe concerning God, and what duties God requires of man."

In short, his subjects were Faith and Life, not separately but welded into one.

Down Where We Live

HIS method was always simple He did not use long words, he did not "put his hay on such a high shelf that only intellectual giraffes could reach it," as Billy Sunday expressed it. Common people heard him gladly, because he taught in the kind of language they used, he spoke of things that were familiar to them.

So the good teacher today never teaches over the heads of the class. This means he has to have a good imagination, has to make believe to himself that he is one of the class instead of the teacher. He has to remember how the world looked to him when he was a boy, he has to stay young in heart.

Jesus could surely have taught more profoundly than he did. Indeed, he said at the end of his days, "I have many things to say . . . but ye cannot bear them now." However true a thing might be, he would not say it if his hearers were not ready for it.

Truth in Pictures

THEN Jesus taught in pictures; we call them parables The best-loved and remembered parts of his teaching are the stories he told. Every one of them was simple; they were about the kinds of people his listeners knew or had often heard of.

The good teacher will always use illustrations. But the best ones will come right out of the experience of the pupils. Jesus never quoted from a book his hearers had not read. He never used illustrations that only a Ph.D. could understand. Furthermore, he never tried to teach two things at once.

A teacher, looking over a Sunday school lesson, may find it full of suggestive ideas; but it is generally better to pick out one truth and illustrate it in several ways, as Jesus did when speaking of the Kingdom of God, than it is to try to bring out everything that could be brought out, and so confusing the class

Making Them Think

NOW some teachers, trying to be simple, succeed only in being dull. The good teacher must keep the class awake, otherwise no one can learn anything. There is a good motto which might be borrowed by all Sunday school teachers: "Nothing that is not interesting; not everything that is interesting; nothing merely because it is interesting."

Jesus gained attention and interest in various ways. One was the "cryptic" nature of his teaching; that is, it was often puzzling. There was often something that sent listeners away thinking: Now what did he mean by that?

Confucius once remarked: "I give my pupil one corner of an idea. If he cannot get the other three corners for himself, I do not want him for my pupil." So Jesus often gave out one corner of a truth and let his hearers (and ourselves!) wrestle out the other three.

Into the Fogs

Sport, amateur and pro, is coming through the deepest fog it has ever known. The larger part of this fog is due to the ever-extending spread of the draft Another heavy problem is television There is nothing any genius can do about the draft Its encircling arms are gathering them in between the ages of 19 and 25, the true athletic age, day by day. But television can be handled. Television can afford to pay large sums but it is a question as to whether any sum can make up for half-filled stands. Even games televised far away from the home scene can still cut in on other sectors.

Grantland Rice

"A sellout type of game can handle television," one of the leading athletic directors said recently. "But who can tell in advance just when a sellout game will arrive? I think the Big Nine handled the situation better than any other section. And their crowds were the largest in the country.

"Television has hit Los Angeles and vicinity harder than any other place. This city has taken quite a beating, both in its pro and amateur football You apparently can't make their football people see that thousands of followers would rather have the game brought to them for nothing than pay to travel to the stands. Each year there will be more and more television sets, which won't be any help. It is only on rare occasions, such as the Army-Navy game, that you'll have both television and a complete sellout. These occasions will come along rarely in the future"

The scope of the draft makes any form of prediction the rankest sort of guesswork. Predictions are usually guesswork, anyway. But with so many stars in army, navy or air force uniforms, the prophet will be a blind man peering into deep darkness

Fighters in the Black

How many boxers or fighters save their money and have a few rupees for a rainy morning? This query came up again when a traveler from the Argentine ran into an old-timer remembered as Luis Angel Firpo, the Wild Bull of the Pampas.

"Firpo was smart financially when he was up here meeting Bill Brennan, Jack Dempsey and others," he said. "He saved most of his money. I recall in the training period for the Firpo-Dempsey fight that Dempsey spent $2,000 a week for sparring partners and Firpo spent about $400. Firpo saved almost every quarter he picked up.

"I still recall the admiration he drew from Bill McGeehan for his careful qualities. The Argentine fighter had the ring hangers on wild. They never picked a dime from him. As a result Firpo today has a big farm of many thousands of acres outside of Buenos Aires, stocked with cattle. He is a wealthy man. He has a healthy bank account on the side. He weighs only 240 today against the 223 he weighed against Dempsey. He has taken good care of himself these last 25 years.

The fighters around Firpo's time were a careful lot. Dempsey fought for more than $10,000,000 during his ring career. He drew much bigger gates than Joe Louis or anyone else has ever drawn except Gene Tunney—who fought Dempsey twice.

Dempsey made money, spent money and saved money. There will be no collections taken up for Dempsey. I've called him twice in the last two weeks only to find that he was on his way west or on his way to Canada to referee some wrestling match.

Dempsey gets a kick out of handling these wrestlers, now and then exchanging punches where he never gets the worst of it. A wrestler can't punch. Even Frank Gotch was a third-rate fighter. The old Mauler, meaning the guy from Manassa, has a fine home in Los Angeles for his two daughters and his restaurant here has always done well.

Tunney and Others

Gene Tunney made money, a lot of money, and married money. Tunney certainly has no financial worries and never will have. He is a canny, careful administrator of his affairs. He is also a smart investor.

Among the modern group of fighters both Ray Robinson and Jake LaMotta won't need any benefits. Both have done extremely well financially and haven't thrown too much coin away.

"It would surprise you," Eddie Eagan said recently, "to know how much money a number of boxers are putting away each year. Some of them are not too well known. You don't read much about their fights. But they do all right."

ADEQUATE MILKROOM MEANS LESS LABOR

A fully equipped milkroom will put an end to long trips to the house and back with milk and milking utensils. It also will help put better dairy products on the market.

Besides, the savings will soon more than compensate for the expense of buying and installing the new equipment in a milkroom, explains R. J. Moe, Iowa State College extension dairy industry specialist.

The new milkroom can be built inside the barn if the room is properly constructed, or as a separate building near the barn. If it's in the barn, the walls must be sealed tightly and there must be a vestibule to keep out barn odors. Cost of the inside milkroom may run as low as $200, Moe says. An outside milkroom will cost up to $800, depending on how elaborate it is.

Good hot water heaters are available for about $75, Moe points out, with a two-compartment wash tank costing around $35. A can rack can be made out of pipes plus a few dollars for welding. The milk cooler will vary in cost from the price of cement and construction for a homemade water cooler up to the cost of a mechanical cooler, Moe continues.

SEVERAL FLAX VARIETIES ARE ADAPTED TO IOWA

Results of flax variety tests for the period 1946 to 1950 indicate that several varieties are about equally well adapted in Iowa.

Victory led the commonly grown varieties in yield, but was followed closely by Dakota and Koto, according to results summarized by R. E. Atkins, Iowa State College agronomist. The 5-year average yields were: Victory, 20.3 bushels; Dakota 20.2 bushels; and Koto, 19.8 bushels.

Dakota, the most widely grown of the three varieties, has been damaged by rust in some areas the past two seasons. Koto is also susceptible to some races of rust, while Victory is resistant to rust. All three are moderately wilt-resistant and susceptible to pasmo.

Of the older varieties tested, Redwing is the only one still recommended to Iowa growers. It has been only a moderately high yielder, but its maturity makes it of value when seeding must be delayed.

Redwood, a new Minnesota varity, was included in the Iowa variety tests for the first time in 1950. It was the top yielder during the past season, with an average yield of 29.3 bushels per acre. Redwood is resistant to all races of rust known to occur in North America, Atkins reports.

Iowa led all other midwestern states in average yield of flax harvested in 1950. Iowa farmers averaged 16.5 bushels per acre on 82,000 acres during the past season.

WILDLIFE NEED SHELTER DURING COLD WEATHER

When wildlife can be seen suffering through winter blizzards and cold spells, it's a good time to make plans for a wildlife haven next spring, says Iowa State College extension wildlife specialist R. B. Moorman.

Wildlife in areas where there is protection should survive the winter in good shape. It's the wildlife that have nothing for shelter but fence rows and meadows that may never see spring, Moorman says.

He suggests putting wildlife havens in odd-shapped corner of fields or in spots that may be isolated from the use of farm machinery during part of the growing season, such as areas on the far side of a creek bed. Where these havens can be established in eroded areas, plantings will also serve as erosion control measures.

Most of the trees and shrubs recommended for wildlife haven are available from any commercial nursery. By purchasing hedging shrubs—the less perfect shrubs from nursery stock—farm families can keep down the costs of planting a wildlife haven.

Plantings should be at least ½ acre in size with a row of the tallest trees in the center, Moorman says. Trees in adjacent rows can be shorter, with outside rows planted to shrubs. This makes a dense patch of trees and also forms a gable shape that will lift the wind off the ground.

The wildlife specialist advises planting the shelter well away from farm buildings where farm cats and dogs might take a heavy toll of wildlife.

IOWA LUMBER BETTER IN MOST RESPECTS

Iowa-grown lumber rates high compared with lumber produced in other states when tested on the basis of bending strength, nail-holding power and durability. Only in paint-holding properties does Iowa lumber fall short in comparison, says R. B. Campbell, extension forester at Iowa State College.

Tests show that Iowa lumber works well for dimensional purposes, sheathing and other uses where paint is not necessary.

Farmers can have confidence that they are not sacrificing qualiy if they use their homegrown lumber for most of a new building they plan to put up, Campbell says.

For example, red or white oak, red elm, black walnut and ash all have a higher bending strength than such common shipped-in species as white pine and douglas fir. Bending strength refers to the number of pounds per square inch required to bend a board to the breaking point. Campbell says this is an important characteristic for dimensional lumber.

In durability, another major point to consider, Iowa timber again rates high. White oak and black walnut are superior to most shipped-in lumber in this respect. Red oak, white elm, red elm and hackleberry are also durable wood.

White oak, red oak, white elm, soft maple, hard maple and ash all rank equal or superior to such common out-of-state species as the pines and douglas fir.

Tests show that about the only kinds of common homegrown lumber that hold paint to any extent are basswood and cottonwood. Soft maple and hard maple do a fair job of holding paint, Campbell says.

PLUGGED VENT PIPE CAN CAUSE BAD ODORS

Foul odors in the house during the winter are sometimes caused by a plugged vent pipe in the sewage disposal system. Trapped gases then back up into the house.

When vent pipes are too small where they emerge from the roof, accumulated frost can soon plug them, reports Iowa State College extension agricultural engineer C. E. Worlan.

There's little danger from plugging where an increaser is used at the roof. Then the vent pipe can be enlarged where it is exposed to outside temperature. This allows enough space for accumulated frost and air passage, Worlan explains. He advises an expansion to at least 5 inches at the roof.

Freezing in the sewage disposal system is not a problem when the septic tank is in constant use. Warm water and the heat generated from sewage decomposition will generally keep temperatures well above freezing. But Worlan warns that where the system won't be used for a while, or where exposure of the lines is severe, it's a good idea to mound over the poorly protected areas to get added protection.

CENTRAL STATES ELECTRIC CO. MAKES MAJOR IMPROVEMENTS

The Central States Electric Company, with district headquarters at Garner, announced this week that construction crews have moved on the job to make major improvements on their transmission lines and substations in the Thornton, Swaldale, Meservey, Alexander and Couler area. Necessary material has been on the ground for 60 days - including poles, conductors, hardware, transformers and insulators.

New and modern automatic reclosing switches will be installed on the lines constructed to insure continuity of service. Tree interference will also be eliminated during the construction program.

H. O. Sandberg, District Manager in charge of the company's facilities in North Central Iowa, stated it would require approximately 100 days to complete the entire job.

NEW BEEF GRADES ARE NOW IN FORCE

Live, Carcass Grades Are Brought Into Line

Several changes have been made in the terms used to designate the live cattle grades of slaughter steers, heifers and cows, according to Rex Beresford, extension livestock marketing specialist at Iowa State College. These new classifications are now in use in government market news reports, so it is up to cattlemen to become familiar with the new system.

The changes are designed to bring live cattle grade names in line with the new grading system for carcass beef. The new set of grades went into effect December 30, 1950.

Combine Prime, Choice

The new slaughter grades combine the former Prime and Choice grades under the name Prime. Beresford says these are the finest finished animals coming to market.

The former Good grade has been renamed Choice and will be composed mainly of quite well-finished cattle. The greatest number of grain-fed cattle coming to market fall in this grade.

New "Good" Grade

A new grade, Good, has been established for cattle that were formerly in the top end of the old Medium grade. Commercial replaces Medium as the live grade name for lower quality young animals and older steers and cows which show some quality and finsh.

The livestock marketing specialist says the former Common grade has been renamed Utility and will be composed of cows and young animals lacking both quality and finish. The Cutter and Canner grades will remain as they have in the past.

Coincidence

When Earl Winterstein of near Griswold turned in his 13-year old car on a new one recently, he found that the serial number on the keys for the old car were identical with the number issued him on the new one.

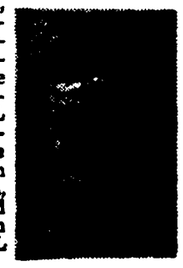
Teenager Gets Appetite Back; Thanks Hadacol

HADACOL Supplies Vitamins B₁, B₂, Niacin and Iron Which Her System Lacked.

According to Sara Loraine Beck, Box 253, Coker, Alabama, when a person is only 15 years old and feels terrible, can't eat or sleep the way they should, it's mighty bad. That is the way Loraine says she used to feel, but that was, of course, before she started taking HADACOL. Loraine found that taking HADACOL helped her system overcome deficiencies in Vitamins B₁, B₂, Niacin and Iron, which HADACOL contains.



Here is Loraine Beck's own statement: "I was run-down, sick and skinny, and weighed only 90 pounds before I used HADACOL. I would not eat because I had no appetite. Now I weigh 123 pounds and have an appetite. I feel a lot better. I have been taking HADACOL 10 months and am still taking it. I am 15 years old. HADACOL has done me lots of good."

Hancock County '50 Road Notes By Merten, Eng.

ROAD NOTES BY C. F. MERTEN, COUNTY ENGINEER

During the year of 1950 there were constructed in Hancock County the following Farm to Market projects:

5 miles of grading and graveling on a local road across Ellington Township south of Pilot Knob; 6 miles of grading and graveling on trunk road from Highway No. 111 to Corwith; 2.5 miles on Eagle Lake State Park trunk road; 2.6 miles on Trunk road from Crystal Lake north to Winnebago County line; one mile of concerete paving on south line of Garner.

The funds for constructing these roads including the purchase of right of way, and part of the engineering was paid from the Farm To Market road fund which consists of gasoline tax, motor vehicle license tax, and federal aid. All of these roads were completed with the exception of the paving which will be completed early in 1951.

The total amount spent on the above projects from the Farm To Market fund was $158,470.09. Approximately $55,000.00 of this amount was spent on the paving project and the balance on the graveling projects on which the average cost was approximately $6400.00 per mile. The construction engineering on the grading and graveling projects was done by County Engineer and his assistants and the cost of this engineering was paid from the County Road Construction fund and not from the Farm To Market fund.

Our annual allotment of Farm to Market road money is an approximately $110,000.00 and the fund is now overdrawn by nearly $10,000.00. This means that we will be unable to construct as large a program in 1951 as we did in 1950. The proposed construction consists of one mile of paving east and west of Kanawha, 5 miles of grading and graveling between Hutchins and Corwith, 6 miles of grading and graveling between Woden and Crystal Lake and 8 miles of grading and graveling between Crystal Lake and Forest City. We will build as many of these roads as we can with the funds available.

In addition to the roads constructed from the Farm to Market fund we build some roads and construct bridges from the County Road Construction fund which like the Farm to Market fund comes from gasoline taxes and motor vehicle licenses fees but does not include any federal aid. During the year of 1950 there was expended from the fund for construction the amount of $80,628.00 as follows:

4 wooden bridges	$9877.00
18 cross road culverts	5328.00
11 miles of grading	26,956.00
Clearing and grubing	2146.00
Entrance culverts	2431.00
Gravel surfacing	14,834.00
Right of way	10,731.00
Engineering and supervisors	6965.00
Gravel pits	1360.00

With the exception of one mile all grading in 1950 was done on right of ways exceeding four roads to provide ditches wide enough for mowing and snow storage. The average right of way width on local roads graded in 1950 is 86 feet, and on trunk roads it is 94 feet.

The 1951 program for road and bridge construction is not fully determined but a county line bridge is planned over the Winnebago River east of Section 24, Ellington Township, to replace a steel truss bridge built in 1895 which is no longer safe for heavy vehicles.

The maintenance of Hancock County roads in 1950 cost $281,926.00, which was paid from the County Road Maintenance fund. The Road Maintenance fund received $95,000.00 from the Road Construction fund, $186,000.00 from tax levies and the balance from miscellaneous sources. The money was spent for the following items:

labor	$79,035.00
new equipment	89,129.00
equipment repairs	32,571.00
contract graveling	23,395.00
buildings	14,222.00
gasoline	11,367.00
diesel fuel	6760.00
miscellaneous supplies	3966.00
tile drainage assessment and repairs	7178.00
calcium chloride	2850.00
oil and grease	2617.00
2-4D weed killer	4264.00
engineering and supervisors	4572.00

Labor and machinery cost are higher than they were a year are. Labor costs have gone up about 10 percent and machinery costs have gone up 20 percent. More money was spent for resurfacing by contract and maintenance buildings were built or improved at Garner, Goodell, Kanawha and Corwith.

Boy Scouts -

A COMMUNITY ASSET

February, a month of notable birthdays, sees the celebration of a "birthday" in which all Americans can properly join. Boy Scout Week, February 6 to 12, reminds us that one of America's largest youth organizations has reached another milestone.

The Boy Scouts of America has reached its forty-first anniversary. Since February 8, 1910, more than 17,750,000 American boys and have been influenced by the Scout Oath and Law. They have benefitted by using their leisure-time energies in outdoor living and activities of cultural and practical values which lead boys to become dependable men.

Today over 2,750,000 boys and men are actively enrolled in over 75,000 different units. Fortunate indeed are communities where Scouting flourishes.

American adults of good character give generously of their time to give leadership. Others help by raising funds and are members of Local Boy Scout Councils which in turn provide training for leaders, camp facilities, worthwhile year-round activities, personal advancement and opportunities for Scouts to render community service.

In celebration of this birthday, the Boy Scouts are engaged in a nationwide clothing collection to meet emergency needs abroad, are stepping up their training for Civil Defense and are promoting greater interest in conserving the nation's natural resources.

May you have many more happy birthdays, Boy Scouts!

Invites Public

Gordon Gammack, War Correspondent, Speaker Feb. 5 At Garner

The Garner Adult Night School Voc. Agriculture Group are sponsoring as guest speaker Gordon Gammack next Monday evening at the Garner High School Gym. The public is invited to attend this meeting, the admission is free, and there are no reserved seats, except for those working in connection with the program. The auditorium seats between 1,000 and 1,200, and if necessary a loud speaker will be used in another room.

Gordon Gammack, war correspondent for the Des Moines Tribune, will give a talk on the Korean battlefront. He will use on-the-spot phonograph recordings to illustrate his talk.

Gammack is probably one of the most demanded speakers in the state of Iowa, and it will be up to you to hear him next Monday evening, February 5th at 8:00 p. m.

FEBRUARY 6 TO 12 IS 41ST ANNIVERSARY OF BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA

The nation's 2,750,000 Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts, Exployers and their adult leaders will observe Boy Scout Week, Februray 6 to 12, marking the 41st anniversary of the organization, by engaging in a nation-wide clothing collection to meet emergency needs abroad, by strengthening their efforts in Civil Defense, and pointing up the need for conserving the nation's natural resources.

The anniversary is observed in all parts of the nation by over 85,000 Units. During the week many store windows will be given over to the Boy Scouts to demonstrate some of the useful skills they acquire at their meetings and in Scout comps. There will be displays of handicraft exhibits calling attention to the conservation efforts of the organization, its appeal for spare clothing and its training in civil defense.

The Civil Defense Staff of the National Security Resources Board has recognized the role that the Boy Scouts of America play in working with state and local Civil Defense agencies.

In a statement the Board said that the Boy Scouts, nation-wide in scope and operating under a federal charter granted in 1916 by Congress "has the responsibility of maintaining a program for training boys and young men in Scoutcraft, outdoor skills, physical fitness and citizenship responsibilities, and in developing character."

The Boy Scouts of America, the Board recognizes "has long been active in developing and carrying out a program of service in time of emergency. It's regular activities include first aid, firemanship, life-saving, communications, sanitation, safety and similar skills that prepare for service. Its participation in the work of the state and local Civil Defense agencies should be encouraged."

Scouts Active in Civil Defense

The Boy Scouts of America is prepared to assist by furnishing a Civil Defense messenger service, help the Red Cross in first aid training and cooperate with other organizations responsible for providing food, clothing and shelter during emergency periods, and aid rescue units and ambulance services when requested.

In addition, when requested by state and local Civil Defense agencies, members of the organization will be trained and made available to work with Civil Defense leaders in organized self-protection programs, and such auxiliary programs as aircraft observers.

If conditions require it, the Boy Scouts of America is prepared to make available and operate its 831 Boy Scout Council-owned camps for evacuees, provide activities in such centers and train its members for operating other evacuation camps.

President Truman and Civil Defense leaders have indicated that Scout leaders, directly related to the leadership of boys and young men should continue in Scouting as their major contribution to civil defense programs. Boys and young men can serve well only under trained leadership.

"I hope you will encourage your adult volunteer leaders," said President Truman in a massage to Dr. Arthur A. Schuck, Chief Scout Executive, "to keep on with their work in their units. Boys will then continue to receive the benefits of Scouting's character building and citizenship training program, and to acquire the skills which fit them for emeregency service.

During Boy Scout Week members will put on test mobilizations to see how quickly they can assemble, fully equipped, to help in emergency situations. In some communities they will make a "lost persons search" and in others they will be tested through "emergency hunts" to round up needed supplies should a disaster strike the community.

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

The town of Nashua, Iowa, is a quiet little place . . . best-known, probably, for its "Little Brown Church in the Vale."

But the town of Nashua, Iowa, would overnight become nationally and internationally famous . . or infamous . . if its entire population were wiped out.

In a sense, just that happened last year. The division of vital statistics of the Iowa department of health estimates that 1,650 Iowans died in accidents and fires last year . . a total a little greater than the population of Nashua.

But there were no headlines.

Nobody demanded to know what great disaster wiped out a segment of the Iowa population equal to the population of Nashua. Fire deaths and accidental deaths are a little like hidden taxes. You don't notice them so much unless they hit you all at once.

Your Iowa Safety Congress urges you to help reduce this "death tax" through a concentrated effort to live safely . . . because only constant, careful, common-sense attention to safety in all fields will exempt you from the "death tax!"

Kanawha Beat Klemme For Third In The County Tourney

Corwith High School became the County Champs for this year at the Garner Gym last Saturday evening, in the final game, beating out Crystal Lake in a good game. The consolations were played by Kanawha and Klemme, with Kanawha winning third place and our boys bringing home the ball for fourth place.

The first round of play last Wednesday evening wiped out the favorites and a good team, the Britt High School, with Corwith beating them in a toss up game by one point. Then the Garner team got upset in their first game by Crystal Lake. These two teams that did the upsetting were the teams in the final game. And that's basketball.

Capt. Hanson Guest Speaker At Hawkeye Press Club

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Jorgenson, Jr. attended the Hawkeye Press Club meeting Saturday evening held at Club 18 near Mason City. The club enjoyed a turkey dinner; and after a short business meeting and election of officers, we enjoyed a talk given by Capt. Hanson.

After living in Japan for the past two years and flying a jet plane in the Korea war, Capt. Hanson is now home on leave. His picture was on the front of Time magazine in December, and he was the first pilot to fly 100 missions in the war. Capt. Hanson and Dorance Grange went through cadet pilot training in 1943 and were very good buddies. His talk was enjoyed by the Press Club and it was very interesting from the word go.

After his talk a number of questions were asked about the Korean war, and we are still wondering why Mr. W. Earl Hall asked several times and was so interested in Maggie, the gal war correspondent?

HELLO FOLKS

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Eckes of Long Prairie, Minn. are the proud parents of a baby boys, weight 7 lbs. 15 oz. and born January 22. The little man has been named Douglas Norman. Mrs. Eckes is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Nuehring.

WELLIK-WILLE NUPTIALS

Marriage rites took place at St. Wencelaus Church, Duncan, January 15 at 9 a. m. at which time Miss Mary Ann Wellik, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wellik of Garner, became the bride of Aaron Wille, son of Mrs. Marie Wille of Klemme.

The Rt. Rev. Msgr. W. C. Hradecky said the services with Jerry Zrostlik, Vincent Buzicky, Edwin Hrubes and Leo Hadecek as acolytes.

Mercedes Formanek was organist and the church choir sang the Nuptial Mass and hymns.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white slipper satin gown with chantilly lace trimmed net yoke, fitted bodice with long sleeves and a full skirt and a long train trimmed with lace. Her fingertip veil was chantilly lace trimmed and attached to a bonnet with pearl head trim. She carried two lavender orchids on a white prayer book.

Mrs. Jerry Psotka, acted as her sister's matron of honor. She wore a gold satin colonial style gown. The bridesmaids Sally Buzicky and Marilyn Zrostlik, cousins of the bride, wore identical colonial style gowns of aqua and pink satin.

Each lady wore a headdress to match her gown and carried removable corsages of pink camelias and pink and blue carnations on white muffs. They wore rhinestone necklaces, gifts of the bride.

Virginia Blanchett of Klemme was dressed in lavender satin identical to the matron of honor and served as flower girl. Diane Hrubes, Whittemore, served as ringbearer.

The bride's mother was attired in an aqua-colored crepe dress. The bridegroom's mother wore a black crepe dress. Both had corsages of pale pink carnations.

After the ceremony a wedding dinner and reception were held at the All-Vets Social Center, Clear Lake. In the evening, a shower and wedding dance were held in the Duncan community hall.

Many relatives and friends from out of town attended the ceremony, reception and dance.

The couple left for a honeymoon through the eastern states. For going away, the bride wore a navy blue dress with gold colored accessories.

The bride is a graduate of Hayfield high school and since completing her work she has been at home. The bridegroom was educated in the Klemme schools and saw active service in World War II. Since his return he has been farming with his mother.

Upon their return from their wedding trip the couple will be at home on a farm north of Duncan.

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY RAY EASTMAN

Henry was a careful guy, who never took a chance. Said he, "A guy who gambles stands to lose his shirt—and pants!" So Henry wouldn't roll the dice, or play a hand of poker He wouldn't play canasta, 'cause he might not draw a joker. He stayed out of casinos, said "I you would see a fool, let me show to you the man who tried to beat the game of roulette." And added, "You can rest assured my brain is getting tottery. If ever you should catch me with a ticket on a lottery." Mining stocks and four-horse parlays never tempted Hank But one day in his auto, Henry's cautious mind went blank. He gambled with a wheel of chance —the one designed for steering. He tried to pass an auto when a hilltop he was nearing. The crash killed four, and here's the point at which we have been drilling:

When Henry finally gambled, folks, he really made a killing!

JUNIOR HIGH LOSSES AT MASON CITY 33-19

The Junior High "Rockets" lost their 6th game of the season to Holy Family Junior High of Mason City Saturday afternoon. The score was 12-4 in Masons favor at the halftime. The "Rockets" crept up to 12-8 right after the halftime and then faltered. Our scoring was very even again with Dulmes and Thieman each getting 6 points, Neuberger 3, Barz and Jacobs 2 each. Vega was high for Holy Family with 8 points.

Our return game is Saturday, February 10 and we expect it to be a thriller. Be sure to attend and bring your donations. We also play Hayfield, boys and girls here February 12 at 7:00. Lets back our future basketball stars of Klemme. Our record is now 6-6.

Rabies Reported In This Area By Veterinarian

Dr. D. P. Anderson reports several cases of rabies in both wild and domestic animals in this area. Rabies has been diagnosed and confirmed by the Veterinary Diagnostic Laboratory at Ames.

If you have any animals or pets that act strangely, it would be well to consult a veterinarian.

In shooting animals that have rabies, do not shoot them in the head. The head must be sent to Ames for the diagnoses.

Jack Zielie Died Monday In Clear Lake

Jack Zielie, age 97, died Monday afternoon at a Nursing Home in Clear Lake. Mr. Zielie will be remembered as a former resident of Goodell. His wife, Alice preceded him in death 26 years ago.

Having no children of their own they took in two children, a nephew, George Zielie and Nora Swanson, now Mrs. Edd Schoenwetter of Garner who made her home with them for 16 year. Mr. Zielie has a brother living in Canada who has reached the age of 101.

Power of God

Lesson for February 4, 1951

ONCE UPON a time, miracles were one of the strongest arguments supporting Christianity. In our times, it is quite the reverse; miracles are for many Christians a major embarrassment, and for others a principal reason for not believing what Christians teach. There is no room in one column to debate this question. A very readable recent book on this line by C. S. Lewis, called "Miracles," may help to clear the reader's mind, showing that the common idea that miracles are impossible, is a mistaken idea.

Dr. Foreman

Christ the Power of God

PAUL calls Jesus Christ "the power of God" (I Cor. 1:24). Whether you believe that Jesus could perform miracles or not, whether you find such a belief hard or easy, depends a good deal on what you think of Christ. If you think of him as a main much like yourself, and no more, then you have as hard a time believing that he could work miracles as in believing that you yourself could do so. But if you believe that in some way he was more than simply a man like yourself, but that God was in Christ (as Paul said), that in his mind was the wisdom of God and through him surged the power of God, you will not have much difficulty with the miracles.

But suppose you cannot start with the high faith in Christ as Son of God; at least you can start with historical facts which no one can reasonably doubt. One of these facts is that there lived a person named Jesus of Nazareth. Another fact is that it was believed about him, already in his lifetime, that he could do all sorts of astounding things,—cure hopeless cripples, bring people back from the dead, stop a storm in its tracks, drive demons back to hell.

You will have to admit that this Jesus must have been an extraordinary character to have such things believed of him, even if they were not true. Starting from that point, you may be led to look into this man's story further, and—like many others—may come out at last believing in Christ as the divine Lord.

Motive for Miracle

ONE THING the thoughtful reader will see in these miracles told of Jesus: they were not done to show off. Jesus himself did not brag about them, nor call attention to them, nor talk much about them. He saw people in trouble and he came to their help. It was as simple as that. He is not reported to have stopped all the storms in Galilee, but only one; and that one not to save himself nor even to save any one else from death, but to save them from fear.

He sent the demons tumbling into the lake, not to create a wonder-tale nor to show how much stronger he was than demons, but he did it to help a poor wild madman back to sanity. He did not go around to funerals in Palestine bringing all the corpses back to life and cheating the undertakers for three years running. On the contrary, he went to Jairus's house only when asked.

There is a certain modesty about all these miracles; and there is love in each of them. The great difference between miracle-working power in the hands of Jesus and such power in the hands of ordinary men, is suggested in the remarkable tale by H. G. Wells, "The Man Who Could Work Miracles." It is the tale of a man who found to his dismay that his supernatural powers brought only disaster to the world.

The Most Personal Miracle

SOME YEARS ago there was a young man in Austria who had for a long time put up an unsuccessful struggle with himself. To put it shortly, lust had him in its grip. He had about given himself up as a bad job, when he made the acquaintance of two young priests

He asked himself: What do these men have that I do not have? And he discovered the answer: Christ. That was how Baron von Hugel, one of the great minds of our century, became a Christian.

He discovered that Christ, now can work a miracle in a man; and one miracle, experienced in one's own life, can be of more value than a hundred miracles recorded on paper.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

In kitchenettes where serving-table space is scarce, if you have the kind of ironing board that comes out of the wall, let it come out just before dinner's ready to be served. It'll give you added space on which to put serving dishes and such. If you're going to use it regularly, you might make an oilcloth cover for the board.

Spattered grease on the wallpaper behind your stove can be removed easily if you paint the paper, while it's new, with a coat of colorless shellac. To be more elaborate, you can hang an oilcloth wall rug behind the stove. Or, have the area covered with a large piece of plate glass. Attach it with "corner brackets" or hang it like a mirror.

Grand Champion Cook Wins 179 Prizes

Iowa's 1950 Grand Champion cook—that's Mrs. Oscar Vik of Onawa, Iowa! State Fair officials awarded Mrs. Vik more than 80 prizes for her entries, an event that came as no surprise to anyone who had seen Mrs. Vik walk off with 99 first prizes at the 1950 Clay County Fair held earlier. Grand champion Mrs. Vik has used Fleischmann's Yeast for many years. She says, "Fleischmann's New Improved Active Dry Yeast is the best ever. It's so easy to use and so fast too. I'm very pleased with it."

Yes, everybody agrees with America's prize-winning cooks that it's the easiest, fastest yeast yet. You just add it to warm water, stir it well and it's completely dissolved! You can depend on it for fast-rising action, prize-winning results when you bake at home. Get Fleischmann's New Improved Active Dry Yeast today.

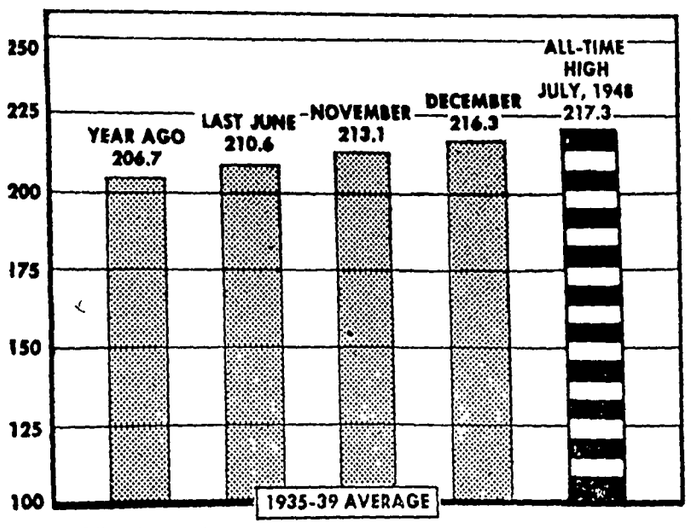
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

President Truman Asks for Unity As Nation Builds Up Armed Might; U. N. Forces Continue to Pull Back

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



With food prices near the all-time high of July, 1948, which was nearly 217.3 per cent of the 1935-39 average, the government drafted a 30-day moratorium on all prices increased. The chart above traces the food price spiral. The moratorium was delayed by disagreement within the government's economic-control organization.

TRUMAN:

Drops Fair Deal

President Truman opened his "State of the Union" message to congress with the words "our country is in a healthy condition." From that point he stressed strength and unity in the face of Communist aggression throughout the world.

One of the remarkable points of the President's message was his apparent willingness to drop his much debated Fair Deal program —for the time being—in order to get on with the business of building up the free world's ability to wage "a full-scale war against Russia," if such conflict becomes necessary.

Mr. Truman's plea for unity was impressive and undoubtedly won him some new friends in a hostile congress. "I ask the congress for unity . . . I do not ask, or expect, unanimity . . . . Let us debate the issues, but let every man among us weigh his words and deeds," he said.

Many legislators called the President's speech conciliatory And despite certain routine political sharpshooting which some Republicans indulged in after his address, it was obvious that the opposition party was affected favorably by his effort to find unity of purpose.

It seems likely that an era of greater co-operation and political peace is in store for the 82nd congress than could have been hoped for a few months ago. The people along the main streets of America may at least see swift and vital decisions made to meet the crisis.

It was also evident from the President's speech that on one point he would not give an inch. He stood unyielding on the issue of military co-operation with western Europe.

The Program

President Truman outlined a 10-point legislative program in his "State of the Union" message to congress:

1. Appropriations for the armed forces build-up.
2. Extension and revision of the draft law, presumably to induct 18-year-olds and extend the draft term from 21 to 27 or 30 months.
3. Military and economic aid to the rest of the free world.
4. Revision and extension of his authority to expand production and control wages, prices, and rents.
5. Improvement of the agricultural laws to help "obtain the kinds of farm products we need for the defense effort." This might include a direct subsidy to farmers to keep from setting farm price ceilings at less than parity.
6. Improvement of labor laws to "help provide stable labor-management relations" and assure "steady" production.
7. Housing and training of defense workers and "the full use of all our man-power resources."
8. Legislation to increase the supply of doctors, nurses, and other medical personnel.
9. Federal aid to the States for elementary and secondary education.
10. A "major increase" in taxes.

A-Bomb

Atomic energy commission chairman, Gordon Dean (above), reported recently the Russians do have the atomic bomb. He made the announcement during a news conference in which he told newsmen that the government will have to cut down its development of atomic energy for peacetime uses because of the international situation.

KOREA:

Pattern Repeated

The pattern of the Korean conflict continued to repeat itself. Following the January 1 attack by Chinese and North Korean Communists on United Nations forces south of the 38th parallel, a general retreat to the south and the old Pusan beachhead continued.

The retreat was along the old "Heartbreak Highway" down which Americans and South Koreans first retreated before the North Korean invaders last July.

Although Communist casualties were reported heavy, the Reds continued to attack and push southward.

It seemed unlikely that United Nations forces would be able to establish a line short of the Pusan beachhead. What would happen after that is anyone's guess.

Some military leaders believe U.N. troops will be able to stand off Communist thrusts with the aid of U.S. fleet guns. It seemed unlikely, however, that a counter-offensive could be launched for months.

It was obvious to every observer that the position of U N. troops in Korea was steadily growing worse. And there was no indication that their position would get better.

FARMING:

Some Curbs Lifted

The government removed all restrictions on production of wheat and corn for 1951 in an effort to maintain safe reserves of these vital bread and livestock feed grains under the national emergency.

The only crops still under production controls are some types of tobacco, peanuts and rice. It is possible that restrictions may be eased on peanuts and rice.

The action came too late for additioal planting of winter wheat but is expected to increase spring wheat planting which makes up 30 per cent of the nation's crop

Farm experts predicted that the unlimited corn acreage would increase the nation's meat supply by at least three pounds per person this year. There was enough meat available in 1950 to supply each person with 145 pounds.

TAFT:

Constructive Criticism

In a speech which he called "constructive criticism" of the administration, Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio served notice that the Republican party pledged itself to securing a greater voice in policy making.

The senator based his criticisms on what he called the President's legal right to send American troops to Europe. He added that we "had better commit no American troops to the European continent at this time."

Mr. Taft expressed a tide of thought that has been growing throughout the United States since reverses in Korea, namely, that the defense of Europe was primarily western Europe's responsibility, not ours.

Undoubtedly the most powerful Republican in the senate, Taft seemed to be serving notice on the administration that congress intended to cut in on the President's power to formulate foreign policy. If the Republicans are willing to push the question it could lead to a state of confusion in congress never before seen in a time of crisis.

One of the most startling statements of the senator's speech was the one when he said the U.S ought to go along, for the time being, in the U.N for its value as a world forum, but that the instrumentality was mortally weak in having been founded, not upon "justice" but upon the power of its leading members. To the people in the home towns of the country who had placed their faith in the United Nations it was like a blow below the belt.

Was is possible that some of the nation's leading legislators believed that the United Nations was as dead as the League of Nations? Was it possible that some of our prominent leaders favored U.S withdrawal from the United Nations? Taft's speech put those questions into the minds of many.

Two days after his "policy" speech, Senator Taft announced he was in favor of pulling U.S troops out of Korea and setting up a new Pacific defense line based on Formosa and Japan. For these he would fight, he said He then warned that if Russia attacks western Europe "it means war"

CONTROLS:

A Matter of Time

Wage and price controls appeared certain for the nation as it moved toward full mobilization. To the average housewife the need for price controls on food was becoming desperate.

A disagreement within the government's economic-control organization blocked action on a planned 30-day wage-price freeze. The action was a temporary measure to hold the line until enforcement machinery could be set up about March 1.

Price controller Michael V. DiSalle reportedly will need 30,000 workers for a nationwide staff, of whom more than half would be charged with tracking down black marketeers, hoarders, price gougers and other control chiselers.

Some temporary plan to stop the price spiral was considered necessary by most people. At the present rate of increase, food prices would be at an all-time high by March 1 and would bring hardship for fixed income groups. Millions of workers have contracts which grant pay increases as the price index climbs and this group would not suffer

The people on pensions and white collar workers are hardest hit by any price spiral.

Eisenhower

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower (above), is surrounded by lensmen as he speaks for newsreel and television cameras in the Pentagon during his first press conference after being named commander-in-chief for European armies. He left for a tour of European capitals shortly afterwards, declaring that the defense of western Europe cannot be carried out successfully unless sacrifices of other Atlantic pact nations equal those of the U.S.

DRAFT:

For All 18-Year-Olds

Any day now the defense department will ask congress for a blanket draft of all physically fit 18-year-olds to serve 27 to 30 months in uniform.

There is a question, however, whether or not congress will approve immediately. A number of legislators were reported splitting hairs over the request. Many felt that 18½ was young enough and 24 months long enough.

UNITED NATIONS

U.S. Seeks to Brand China Aggressor

Britain's Sir Gladwyn Jebb told the United Nations his country was not yet ready for a final decision on American demands for U.N. condemnation of Red China as an aggressor. He hold the U.N. that to "look well before you leap is a wise maxim in foreign affairs. If we do loap, we should all leap together."

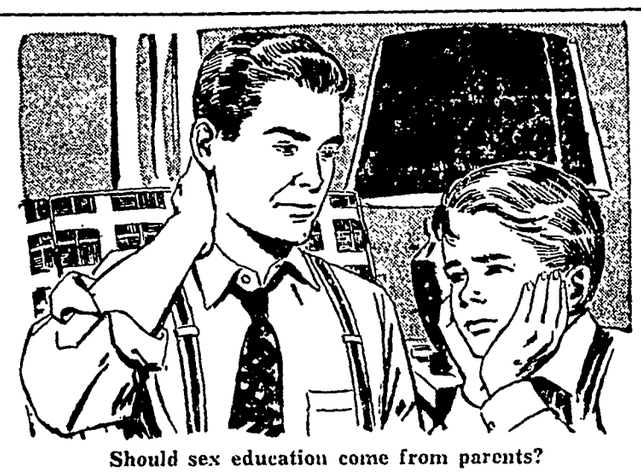
There was an undertone to Jebb's speech, however, that indicated Britain and other countries might go along eventually with the American proposal for a verdict condemning Peiping as an aggressor in Korea.

In many quarters it was believed that Britain, which has recognized Communist China, is leaning more and more to the American view of China's aims in the far east.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Facts on Sex Most Vital

By Lawrence Gould



Should sex education come from parents?

Answer: It starts with them, whether they intend it to or not. A child's basic feelings about the relations of the sexes grow out of his impression of his parents' attitude toward sex and toward each other, and if they try to ignore the subject all they do is make him feel it is too shameful to speak of Factual information is highly desirable, and may well be given by others if the parents feel themselves unfitted to impart it. But wherever sexual knowledge comes from, the atmosphere that surrounds it is what really matters

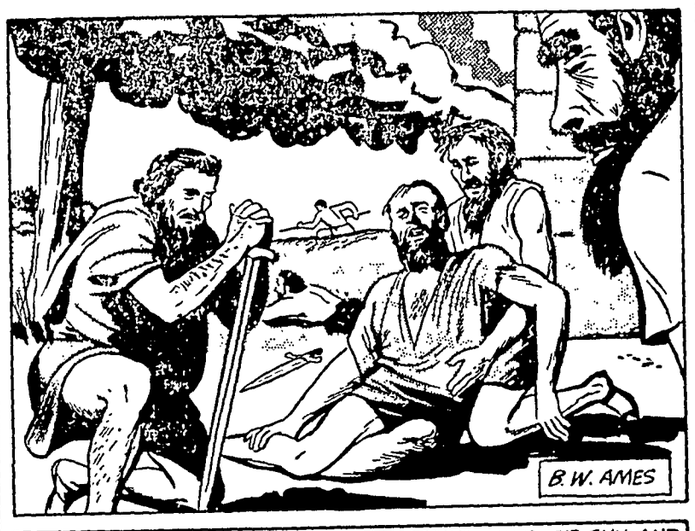
Do some people like "routine" jobs best?

Answer: Yes. There is a type of person known as a "compulsive character" who feels safe only if he always does the same things in the same way. Changes disturb him, and having to make decisions in a hurry terrifies him. He is afraid of responsibility, but even more of letting himself act spontaneously. He grew up with an exaggerated fear of his own natural impulses and feels that to follow a fixed pattern of behavior is the only way to keep them under control. Too early and too strict toilet training may be where the trouble started.

Does music help industrial production?

Answer: That is the conclusion reached by a research conducted by the British Broadcasting Corporation and reported in Biology and Human Affairs, London. If the music "piped into" an industrial plant is well selected, it apparently helps workers to forget fatigue, relieves boredom, cuts down nervous strain, lessens the amount of distracting conversation, and reduces absenteeism No one can do without pleasure very long, and if work offers little or none, any supplementary pleasure is of value.

LOOKING AT RELIGION



THE BATTLE AT BETH-HORON, WHERE JOSHUA MADE THE SUN AND MOON STAND STILL, MIGHT BE CLASSED AS THE MOST IMPORTANT BATTLE IN HUMAN HISTORY BECAUSE THE RELIGIOUS DESTINY OF MANKIND AND THE WORLD WAS AT STAKE. IN THIS ONE BATTLE THE ISRAELITES' CONQUEST OF CANAAN WAS MADE CERTAIN, EVEN THOUGH NOT FULLY ACCOMPLISHED UNTIL MUCH LATER.

KEEPING HEALTHY

Long Trip of Food Through Body

By Dr. James W. Barton

INDIGESTION is one of man's commonest foes, yet when we think of the tube that carries our food from the mouth to its exit from the body, and trace its winding course uphill, downhill, around single curves, and then around double S curves, the wonder is that we do not suffer even more digestive troubles.

The tube is not unlike an elastic tube in that it can be stretched at certain points The fact that there is so much elasticity in the walls of this tube means that it can remain "on the stretch" for long periods.

The stomach can be distended by too much food, too much water, or because it hangs too low at times This makes a hard climb for the food up to, instead of down to, the opening into small intestine The small intestine which is 20 feet long, and piled up in folds in the abdomen, empties into the large intestine by means of a valve which prevents the digested food from flowing back. All the nourishment of this digested food is absorbed into the blood and lymphatic vessels, leaving only the wastes to travel the six more feet of the large intestine and thence out of the body.

There is often a delay just beyond the valve in the large intestine and the waste matter pouches or dilates the large intestine in region of appendix at lower right side of abdomen. After climbing about 10 to 12 inches up right side, the large intestine with its wastes makes a sudden turn across abdomen from right side to left, about two or three inches below stomach. Sometimes it doesn't go straight across as it may form a loop downward for inches and sometimes a foot or more, which, of course, means a delay in progress of wastes to the left side. This condition may be mistaken for appendicitis

When the large intestine reaches the left side, it again has to make a sudden curve downwards (another delay at this curve); it then goes all the way down the left side till near its lower end when there is another double S curve, causing a slowing up or delay of wastes.

Naomi Circle Met Thursday Afternoon

The Naomi Circle met at the home of Mrs. Dave Schwichtenberg on Thursday afternoon.

There were 19 members, 4 visitors and 3 children present. Mrs. Dwight Hummel was in charge of the lesson. We welcomed two new members into our circle, Mrs. Blanche Stille and Mrs. Albert Lange. Mrs. Nova Stokesbary was elected to fill the office of Secretary-Treasurer of the Circle, which was held by Mrs. Howard Farris who is moving from this community. The February meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. C. A. Larsen. After the meeting lunch was served by the hostess who was assisted by Mrs. Lloyd Sherwood.

Martha Circle Met January 24 With Mrs. Lester Stille

The Martha Circle met at the home of Mrs. Lester Stille Jan. 24th with 23 members present.

Mrs. E. J. Arnold led the inspiring devotional lesson. A report on the membership activities was given by Mrs. Geo. Schoenwetter. One new member, Mrs. Virgil Cook, was present. We were asked to save our General Mills coupons and the Rap-in-wax coupons. The sample church-pictures plates were shown and discussed. A lovely lunch was served by the hostess.

RECORD BOOK HELPFUL IN OBTAINING LOAN

Young farmers often need financial aid to enlarge their operations and to operate more efficiently. But these farmers are the ones who often find it most difficult to get the money because they have little property for collateral on a loan. Here's how a farm record book will help to solve this problem.

The usual procedure is getting credit is to give the banker a net worth statement, says H. B. Howell, Iowa State College extension economist. Then on the basis of a farmer's net worth the banker decides how much credit the farmer can have.

This works to the disadvantage of those who are just getting started farming, since their net worth is usually low. But an up-to-date farm record book will help these young men get more adequate credit, Howell points out.

Most bankers consider that sound and efficient production is as essential to good use of credit as good collateral. A farm record book will indicate such good management by showing the farmer's sources of income and how he is using them, Howell says. This is just another one of the many ways that a farm record book helps Iowans.

The local county extension director and the Farm Management Section of the Extension Service at Iowa State College have 1951 farm record books in stock at the present time.

Isabelle Gibbs Named To The Solicitations Committee Of The World Student Service Drive

Miss Isabelle Gibbs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Gibbs of Klemme, has been named to the solicitations committee of the World Student Service Fund Drive at Morningside College, Sioux City.

The WSSF drive is an annual occurence on campus and will take place this year during the week of February 5 to 10. During this time committe members will solicit Morningsiders for contributions to the world relief fund. The 1951 goal for the Sioux City school is $1,000. The WSSF drive is a nationwide campaign observed on most American college and university campuses.

Dr. John W. Johannaber, directer of religious life at Morningside, is advisor to the all-student project. Robert Burtness of Sioux City is general chairman.

Value Your Health More Than Riches

Some folks think that fine clothes and fine, big houses are the most important things in life, but these things really don't mean too much if a person doesn't feel well enough to enjoy them. Most folks don't realize this, but Mrs. Lucy Braswell, of Route 2, Stone Mountain, Ga., realizes it very well. Mrs. Braswell takes HADACOL, and by taking HADACOL she found she is helping her system overcome deficiencies of Vitamins B_1, B_2, Niacin and Iron, which HADACOL contains.

Here is Mrs. Braswell's own statement: "I have been sick for some time with stomach disturbances. I began taking HADACOL and I have been taking it about six weeks. I am so much better and much stronger. I will continue to take HADACOL. It sure has helped me. I tell my friends about HADACOL. I can't praise HADACOL too much. I am 59 years old."

NEWS FROM THE MOTOR CLUB OF IOWA

Despite the increased tempo of America's armaments program, threre is no indication that motorists will be faced by consumer ratiining at any time in the near future, G. J. Timmermann, President of the Motor Club of Iowa, argest Iowa affiliate of the American Automobile Association, reported recently.

"AAA National Headquarters in Washington, D. C., is keeping a close check on the developing situation," Mr. Timmermann said, "and, according to their latest dispatches, there is absolutely no sign of any type of consumer rationing at the present moment.

"Estimates on cut-back in auto production aary all the way from 20 per cent to as much as 50 per cent. According to latest advices from Detriot, production during the first quarter of this year will be above the output during the corresponding period of last year.

Gasoline supplies and stocks are plentiful and the Deputy Petroleum Administrator for Defense, has officially stated that no rationing is evening being contemplated.

"The outlook for rubber is a bit coudy today but nothing like the desperate situation of World War II days. The Gop. has ordered cut-backs in use of rubber by manufacturers and has tanen over the importation of all natural rubber. Tire inventories are low; you may have to shop around or go on a waiting list to get the tire you want. But tire production in 1950 was at an all-time high level and the synthetic rubber plants are being rushed back into operation. By March 1st, these plants will be producing, which with present import plane, would resilut in a total acquisi- of 1,800,00 tons of all rubbers, about 50 per cent more than we have ever consumedl in any previous yeaor."

The 7th World Scout Jamboree will be held in the summer of 1951 about 35 miles south of Salzburg, Austria.

LITTLE CATTLE FEEDERS MET AT ESK HOME

The regular monthly meeting of the Little Cattle Feeders was held at the home of Edward Esk. The Feeding of a Brood Sow, was presented by Galen Gruis. the Railroads RESPECT...

What is the TRUTH?

the Labor Unions seek to REPUDIATE this agreement!

At various states in the present dispute with the brotherhoods of railroad operating employees

. . . the railroads agreed to arbitrate. The union leaders refused.

. . . the railroads accepted the recommendations of President Truman's Emergency Board. The union leaders refused.

. . . the railroads accepted the White House proposal of August 19, 1950. The union leaders refused.

Finally an Agreement was signed at the White House on December 21, 1950. Now the union leaders seek to repudiate the Agreement.

The railroads stand ready to put the terms of this Agreement into effect immediately, with back pay at the rates and date indicated.

The Agreement is given in full below.

MEMORANDUM OF AGREEMENT

Washington, D. C.
December 21, 1950

1. Establish 40 hour week for yardmen with increase of 23 cents effective October 1, 1950; and additional 2 cents effective January 1, 1951.

2. Set aside 40 hour week agreement until January 1, 1952, and establish 6 day work week for yardmen. Effective with the first pay roll period after 30 days from the date of execution of the formal agreement, yardmen required by the carrier to work on the 7th day to be paid overtime rates except engineers who shall receive straight time rates for the 7th day. This does not create guarantees where they do not now exist. On and after October 1, 1951, three months' notice to be given of desire to go on 40 hour week. Provide for consideration of availability of manpower and 4 cents per hour if and when the 40 hour week actually becomes effective.

3. Settle rules for 40 hour week and 6 day week:

4. Grant yard conductors and brakemen other rules such as daily earnings minimum, car retarder operators and footboard yardmasters as recommended by Emergency Board No. 81.

5. Settle following rules:
Initial Terminal Delay (Conductors and Trainmen)
Interdivisional Runs
Pooling Cabooses (Conductors and Trainmen)
Reporting for Duty
More than One Class of Service
Switching Limits
Air Hose (Conductors and Trainmen)
Western Differential and Double Header and Tonnage Limitation (Conductors and Trainmen, all Territories)

6. Road men to receive 5 cents per hour increase effective October 1, 1950 and additional 5 cents per hour increase effective January 1, 1951.

7. Quarterly adjustment of wages on basis of cost of living index (1 point to equal 1¢ per hour. First adjustment April 1, 1951. Base to be 176).

8. Agreement embodying principles applicable to yardmasters to be entered into for benefit of yardmasters.

9. Effective October 1, 1950, the basic hours of dining car stewards shall be reduced from 225 to 205 hours per month; no penalty overtime to accrue until 240 hours have been worked, the hours between 205 and 240 to be paid for at the pro rata rate.

Effective February 1, 1951, overtime at time and one-half shall accrue after 220 hours have been worked. The basic monthly salary to be paid for the 205-hour month shall be the same as that now paid for the 225-hour month. Except that four dollars and ten cents ($4.10) shall be added to the present monthly rate effective January 1, 1951.

10. In consideration of above, this agreement to be effective until October 1, 1953, and thereafter until changed or modified under provisions of Railway Labor Act. Moratorium on proposals for changes in wages or rules until October 1, 1953, as follows:

No proposals for changes in rates of pay, rules or working conditions will be initiated or progressed by the employees against any carrier or by any carrier against its employees, parties hereto, within a period of three years from October 1, 1950, except such proposals for changes in rules or working conditions which may have been initiated prior to June 1, 1950. Provided, however, that if as the result of government wage stabilization policy, workers generally have been permitted to receive so-called annual improvement increases, the parties may meet with Doctor Steelman on or after July 1, 1952, to discuss whether or not further wage adjustments for employees covered by this agreement are justified, in addition to increases received under the cost of living formula. At the request of either party for such a meeting Doctor Steelman shall fix the time and place for such meeting. Doctor Steelman and the parties may secure information from the wage stabilization authorities or other government agencies. If the parties are unable to agree at such conferences whether or not further wage adjustments are justified they shall ask the President of the United States to appoint a referee who shall sit with them and consider all pertinent information, and decide promptly whether further wage increases are justified and, if so, what such increases should be, and the effective date thereof. The carrier representatives shall have one vote, the employee representatives shall have one vote and the referee shall have one vote. **

11. If the parties cannot agree on details of agreement or rules they shall be submitted to John R. Steelman for final decision.

The usual protections for arbitraries, miscellaneous rates, special allowances, and existing money differentials above existing standard daily rates will be included in the formal agreement.

 The foregoing will not debar management and committees on individual railroads from mutually agreeing upon changes in rates, rules and working conditions of employees covered by this agreement.

Nothing Better Than Good Food, Says Ohio Man

If a man isn't able to eat the foods he likes he's in mighty sorry shape — imagine going through life without being able to enjoy a fine big platter of bacon and eggs That is the way Joseph N Damillot, 3414 E 5th Street, Dayton, Ohio, used to be, but since he has been taking HADACOL, he says he feels just fine and is able to enjoy lots and lots of fine foods. Mr. Damillot found that taking HADACOL helped his system overcome a deficiency of Vitamins B_1, B_6, Niacin and Iron.

Here is Mr. Damillot's statement: "My first bottle of HADACOL convinced me that HADACOL was what I needed for the gas on my stomach at nights. I could not keep food on my stomache, but after the first bottle I was going great. Now I eat bacon and eggs, and other foods that never would stay with me. I also can sleep well at nights. Thanks to HADACOL. I will never be without it, and can recommend it to all who suffer with the above ailments that I had. I know because I have suffered for quite some time."

RIGHT AMOUNT OF AIR INCREASES LIFE OF TIRE

Proper inflation will add years to the service life of tractor tires, says Dale Woolsoncroft, extension agricultural engineer at Iowa State College.

When air pressure is too low the tire cord can be smashed against the rim, or broken. This is caused by stretching when a sharp object is run over. Buckle breaks also result from underinflation. A sidewise thrust while the tractor is pulling will tend to buckle the inner sidewall of the tires. Cords sperarate and before long the sidewalls have breaks.

Tires that are over-inflated will also damage easily. Contact with sharp objects may break distended rords diagonally or in an X-shape, and can extend from bead to bead. Too much air will also cause excessive tread wear, Woolsoncroft says. Forward edges of the bars will be scuffed and cut when the tractor is used on abrasive surfaces.

If the tractor is to stand for a long period, block it up to remove weight from tires. Never allow rubber to stand in oil and grease, Woolsoncroft warns.

ELL TIP TOPPERS MET WITH JoANN LEMKE

The regular meeting of the Ell Tip Toppers 4-H club was held at the home of JoAnn Lemke on Jan. 20 with 10 members present. GOT ANY IDEAS?

If we get paid for 60 per cent of the water pumped, then $884.00 is a 40 percent loss. If, like some other towns, we got paid for 80 per cent, then our loss would be only half as much. You and I pay higher taxes to make up things like this, but before we start cussing somebody, suppose we find out what is at the bottom of it. Got any ideas?

RURAL HEALTH

Small Town Ingenuity Improving Health Condition in Farm Areas

More than 18,000 accidental deaths per year occur among farming people in the United States. Farming is the most dangerous occupation a man can enter, even more dangerous then mining, lumbering or construction.

Farmers have all the illnesses of city folks but in addition they have this special problem. That's one reason why farm areas have a special need of doctors and hospital facilities. And according to the Health Information Foundation, rural areas, largely because of the ingenuity and initiative of their citizens are making it possible for doctors to bring the benefits of good medical care to these communities.

The availability of medical assistance in rural areas, the Foundation points out, is at a level never before reached, because of the telephone, the automobile, improved highways and a vastly stepped-up hospital construction program. But in addition, many communities which never before had quick access to the best diagnostic equipment and skilled medical assistance now enjoy these advantages, because they actively sought them.

"Some of the methods by which individual rural communities have achieved this level of medical efficiency," says Admiral W. H. P. Blandy, U.S.N. (Ret.), president of the Foundation, "are a tribute to American ingenuity and cooperation."

Admiral Blandy, who commanded the joint army-navy force which conducted the atomic bomb tests at Bikini, said that where the chief problem has been the lack of a doctor, citizens have banded together to create conditions which would attract a young physician. In other communities both a doctor and a clinic or hospital have been needed and in such cases it has been possible to raise funds to erect community-owned facilities offering the necessary equipment for the practice of medicine in its most modern form.

TYPICAL OF SUCH endeavors by the admiral was the hospital built in Ennis, Mont., by the people of the community. In order to attract a doctor to head the new hospital, the town arranged for suitable living quarters for the physician and his family, and raised the money for both the hospital building and equipment.

In this particular case, before the building and equipping of the hospital was an accomplished fact, an automobile accident caused six patients to be brought to the unfinished facility. Citizens turned from fund raising tasks to gathering the necessary beds and other equipment to care for the patients. Fortunately, the doctor had arrived some time before and had set up practice in the town. Previous to his arrival, Ennis had been five years without a doctor.

The town of Okarche, Okla., population 500, is another example of community enterprise described by the Foundation president. Townspeople built and equipped a $118,000 hospital, raising the money by soliciting funds, by voting a $40,000 bond issue and by selling pre-paid hospital certificates. In addition, they devised a plan of dedicating memorial rooms, which brought in enough money to reach the final goal.

The first hospital to be built in Washington County, Kans., is the Hanover Hospital and Clinic, a one-story steel, brick and concrete structure with all up-to-date facilities and ten beds (15 in an emergency). It was financed locally by a bond issue of $35,000 in an area of eight square miles designated for tax purposes as the Hanover hospital district. It actually serves a much greater area. Donations from individuals and organizations such as the American Legion totaled another $10,000, which was used for equipment.

The doctor who heads this new facility, Daniel S. Roccaforte, M.D., came to the small community from Omaha because he preferred to practice in a small community. When interviewed by a Foundation representative, Dr. Roccaforte explained that he was able to move to Hanover only because there were in Hanover the tools and facilities he needed to practice.

"Any community which is in need of a doctor or a hospital might profit from the splendid examples set by these American communities," Admiral Blandy said. In many cases, medical care community problems which seem insoluble can be solved readily by community initiative and the assistance of experts who can give guidance on technical aspects.

Star Dust
STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

VIRGINIA MAYO, on location at Lone Pine, Calif., for "The Travelers," suggested a picnic when some friends from Hollywood came to visit. The party, which included her husband, Michael O'Shea, drove as far as possible into the High Sierra country, then walked for several miles. Starving hungry, they settled down for lunch. But—nobody had brought the buns to go with the hot dogs, they couldn't find any wood that would burn, and a swarm of gnats moved in. They returned to Lone Pine and a restaurant.

Ronald Regan, who broke his leg in a charity baseball game last year, figures that it cost him $100,000 on salaries he didn't earn while waiting for it to heal. But come spring he figures he'll be playing baseball again.

Kathi Norris, fast-rising NBC television star, was bowled over when her husband, producer Wilbur Stark, showed her an eight-foot shopping bag a fan had sent her. She couldn't think what to do with it. Daughter Pamela, aged five, solved the problem. The shopping bag, turned upside down, became a wigwam. Then Kathi had to dash out and buy her an Indian suit!

Actors who want to travel should sign with the two Bills—Pine and Thomas. All their 1951 pictures will be made on location. "Crosswinds," with John Payne and Rhonda Fleming, is set in Florida. "Hong Kong" will be made in China. "The Rebel" will take a troupe to four mid-western states. "High Tension" is a railroad story; that company will ride about 10,000 miles on railroads.

THE FICTION CORNER
THE LAST STRAW

By Lula W. Kellams

3-Minute Fiction

IN THEIR EARLIER married years Flora and Ralph Wilson were an ideal couple. Both were handsome and jolly, with identical tastes and friends. But, as they grew older, Flo matured, while Ralph tried to say boyish and frisky.

"Why not act your age?" she often asked, wistfully. "We have such a lovely, comfortable home for middle aged folks. Our department store is dignified enough for older management. You don't have to keep up a front."

Ralph would chuckle. "Not jealous of your old man, are you, Laby? No foolin', I don't show the years a bit, do I?"

"It's not honest," Flo contended. "Everyone recognizes middle age when he sees it. Anyone can recognizes a toupee."

But she knew when to hush. They mustn't quarrel over trifles. Of course, she didn't think this growing breach in their ages was a trifle, but Ralph did.

Every day she felt more strongly that something must be done to preserve their marriage; and every day she could think of no possible solution.

One morning she said, "I—I don't feel like going to the store, dear. I'm sure Miss Gray can manage alone. There is housecleaning and things to do here."

"Okay, dear," Ralph agreed readily, kissing her good-bye.

Fear stabbed Flo. Why did he agree so hastily? Why didn't he ask her what was wrong? She had an impulse to change her mind and go. But tears and self-pity were aching in her eyes and throat.

"Funniest thing happened," Ralph said. "When I took off my hat my toupee came off, too."

To conceal her feelings, she said briskly, "Wear this old hat, dear. I want to send that one to the cleaner's."

"But it's so shabby and it doesn't fit well."

Stubbornly Flo held out the old straw hat until he donned it reluctantly, leaving his soft gray felt on a chair. She refused to watch him swagger off, whistling like their son Danny when he was a college freshman.

Tears blurred her vision while she picked up things and cleaned and swept. Wasn't there something that would save their marriage, something like taking reducing exercises, or turning kittenish?

The idea was revolting. She had no heart to compete with their three young daughters. If— if she had just begun years ago trying to remain glamorous instead of turning into a mother, maybe things would have worked out better.

BY NOON, she felt less frustrated. She even hummed while she whipped up Ralph's favorite cake and cooked potroast. If she had an especially appetizing supper, and the children were in jubilant mood, maybe Ralph would see how well off he was. Maybe, just once, he would forget his diet.

At 5:05 the children called saying they had to stay for play practice. Flo's spirits drooped. Would Ralph call, too, pretending that business detained him, leaving her alone in the dark, silent house?

She waited with apprehension. At 6:15 sharp she heard the car stop, then Ralph's step on the porch.

"Supper ready, Mom?" he called.

Dread gripped Flo. He'd called her mom instead of baby, or dear! Just one day's staying home made her seem old-fashioned to him!

He strode into the living-room. "Mom, you're looking at a successful man! Today I landed that fat Atkinson account. Mr. Kimley, their new buyer, said I looked like a settled, respectable business man."

He chuckled at Flo's astonished face. "Funniest thing happened. Remember how tight that old straw hat was? Well, the minute I took it off in front of that flippy Miss Gray and the office force, they all started giggling. My toupee came off too, so I glared— like I meant to look fifty, instead of thirty. It's a wonderful feeling of relief. What's for supper, Mom?"

"Potroast and your favorite cake, Dad!" As they marched in to supper, arm in arm, Flo just knew that there never had been such a lovely bald head as her husband's."

Black Bean Soup Starts a Fine Dinner
(See Recipes Below)

Savory Soups

NOTHING IS SO delightful and cozy on a blustery day than the soup pot simmering merrily on the range. It's a sight to warm the heart and tantalize the appetite.

Those appetites which have every appearance of never being satisfied can be appeased nicely with a first course of soup, hot, hearty and well-seasoned. On a busy day when you're almost too rushed to prepare a big meal, serve a chowder with crusty bread, crisp salad and fruit from the canning cupboard.

FOR DINNERS at which you entertain, it's easy to give a party-like atmosphere with easily made-in-advance soup, such as this black bean soup served with a slice of lemon:

Black Bean Soup
(Serves 8)

1 cup dried black beans
1 quart cold water
½ small onion, sliced
1 stalk celery broken in pieces or ⅛ teaspoon celery salt
1 teaspoon salt
Few grains pepper
Few grains mustard
Few grains cayenne
1 tablespoon butter
1 teaspoon flour
Juice 1 lemon
½ lemon thinly sliced

Soak beans overnight. Drain and add cold water. Cook onion 5 minutes with half the butter and add to beans. Add celery, simmer 3 or 4 hours or until beans are soft, adding more water as water boils away. Rub through sieve. Reheat to boiling point. Add lemon juice and well-mixed seasonings. Bind with remaining butter and flour cooked together. Garnish with lemon.

Oyster Bisque
(Serves 4 to 5)

2 tablespoons butter
1 cup finely minced celery
2 tablespoons flour
1 pint cream
1 pint stewing oysters
Salt, paprika
Chopped parsley

Clean oysters, chop very fine. Reserve oyster liquor. Simmer celery and butter in double boiler until tender. Blend in flour. Add cream and seasonings, stirring well. When ready to serve, add oysters, oyster liquor, and parsley. Heat thoroughly, do not cook.

Navy Bean Soup
(Serves 8 to 10)

2 cups navy beans
3 quarts cold water
1 ham bone
½ teaspoon sugar
1 large onion, chopped
1 stalk celery, chopped

Soak navy beans overnight in cold water. Then add ham bone, sugar, onion and celery. Simmer 4 to 5 hours until beans are soft. Dilute with water or milk and season. (Put whole beans through sieve and thicken slightly with flour and water, if desired.) Serve hot.

Spiced Tomato Bouillon
(Serves 10 to 12)

Lynn Chambers' Menu

Beverage
*Recipe Given

3 quarts tomatoes
2 onions, sliced
6 whole cloves
1 to 2 teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon sugar
½ teaspoon garlic salt
½ teaspoon dried basil
3 bouillon cubes
½ lemon, sliced

Simmer together for 10 minutes all ingredients except sliced lemon. Strain through fine sieve. Add lemon very thinly sliced. Reheat just before serving; top each serving with a spoonful of sour cream, if desired.

Savory Fish Soup
(Serves 6 to 8)

1½ pounds white fish
1 quart water
1 onion, chopped
1 clove garlic, chopped
3 tablespoons butter
1 cup canned tomatoes
2 tablespoons parsley flakes
6 cloves
1 bay leaf
Pinch of saffron
¼ teaspoon white pepper
½ cup heavy cream
Salt to taste

Cut up the fish and cook in quart of boiling water for 10 minutes. Saute the chopped onion and garlic in the butter to a light brown, then add the fish. Next add the tomatoes, 1 tablespoon parsley flakes, cloves, bay leaf, saffron and pepper. Cook over a slow fire for 30 minutes. Strain soup. Season with salt, slowly add heavy cream, simmer for 10 minutes more, and serve with parsley flakes and slices of toasted bread.

Clam Chowder with Tomatoes
(Serves 8)

1 quart clams
3-inch cube fat salt pork
1 sliced onion
½ cup cold water
4 cups potatoes, cut in ¾-inch cubes
2 cups boiling water
1 cup stewed and strained tomatoes
¼ teaspoon soda
1 cup scalded milk
1 cup scalded cream
2 tablespoons butter
8 soda crackers
Salt and pepper

Cook pork with onion and cold water 10 minutes; drain and reserve liquor. Wash clams and reserve liquor. Parboil potatoes 5 minutes and drain. To potatoes add reserved liquors, hard part of clams, finely chopped, and boiling water. When potatoes are nearly done, add tomatoes, soda, soft part of clams, milk, cream, and butter. Season with salt and pepper. Split crackers, soak in cold milk to moisten, and reheat in chowder.

Here's a new trick for meat loaf on the second or third day: slice loaf thin and spread with seasoned, mashed potatoes. Bake in moderate oven until meat and potatoes are heated through.

LYNN SAYS:
Increase Leftover Appeal By Artful Service

Slices of leftover tongue placed on pieces of split, hot cornbread then topped with hot mushroom soup make a delicious entree.

It's easy to make a casserole by placing sliced potatoes in a greased casserole and topping with ground, cooked meat. Pour over all a thin cream sauce, seasoned with grated onion, then cheese. Cover and bake until potatoes are tender, about 45 minutes.

Chopped leftover meat can be added to plain fritter batter. Drop by spoonfuls into deep hot lard (350°) and fry until golden brown.

Never discard small bits of chopped ham, crumbled sausage or bacon. Add them to beaten eggs before scrambling or to souffles for appetizing meat flavor.

Lamb roast makes wonderful sandwiches for luncheon. Spread a slice of bread with mint jelly, top with slices of lamb and season with salt and pepper. Top with a buttered slice of bread.

Charlie Learns Hard Way by Meeting a Six-Year-Old

By BILLY ROSE

Last night, in the mood for conversation and kartoffelklase, I went a-calling on my Aunt Frieda and my Uncle Charlie.

"Your uncle, he ain't home," said Frieda as I walked into their Allen Street flat. "He is having a nervous break-up, and Dr. Gittleson is sending him to Mr. Feitlebaum's place in Lakewood—Cathedral in the Pines."

"What brought it on?" I asked.

"Well, is like this," said Frieda. "A couple weeks before Groundhog Day—you should pardon the expression—is coming home your uncle and announcing he is becoming a baby sitter. Every Monday night, he says, the Lerners on Rivington Street is going to the theatre uptown, and Mrs. Lerner is offering him a dollar a hour and free television if he will sit with their little six-year-old boy, Wilbur.

Billy Rose

"Well, when Charlie is coming home the first Monday night, I am naturally asking him for the five dollars, but he is telling me he ain't got it. He and Wilbur, he says, is watching the wrestling on the television and betting a dollar who will win, and the little boy is winning five times consecutive.

"NEXT MONDAY, Charlie is again losing the five dollars. This time is baseball. He is betting on the Brooklyns, and the dumbhead, he is not knowing what Wilbur is knowing—that Jakie Robinson is not playing on account of because he has a busted hand.

"The third Monday, your uncle is going to the Lerners with a deck of pinochle cards in his pocket—and again is losing the five buckses Wilbur, he says, it catching on very quick, is remembering all the cards, and by 10 o'clock is trumping and melding him right in the ground.

"Well, all summer it goes like this. Every Monday Charlie is baby sitting and every Monday he is losing to the baby. And quinciquantly he is not eating so good and is hollering and banging with the doors. This little boy is making him plain crazy, and your uncle is swearing he will get even-Steven—no small fryer, he says, is making him a monkey.

"Last Monday I am figuring I will see myself what is going, and so I keep Charlie company to the Lerners. There I am meeting Mrs. Lerner who is giving me a big howdy-doodle, and explaining her husband is busy in the shop, and is inviting me I should go with her to the theatre.

"She is also making me acquainted with Wilbur, and while she is putting on the hat I am talking with him, and he is making on me a very good impression.

"LATER WHEN we are coming home from the theatre the impression is changing, because Wilbur is playing on me and your uncle a trick from a hundred years ago.

"A trick like this: When Mrs. Lerner and me are going out, the little boy is telling your uncle his mother wants he should take a bath right away, but he ain't got time because Hopalong Cassidy is in twenty minutes. So your uncle is telling him a man don't need twenty minutes for a bath, and he could do it easy in fifteen. So the little boy is betting him five dollars he can't take off his clothes, bathe himself and dress full up in fifteen minutes.

"'Starting from a full tub?' is saying your uncle.

"'Starting from a full tub,' is answering Wilbur.

"Well, as everybody knows, Charlie is a fast bather and is doing the job complete in nine minutes. And when we are coming home from the theatre he is smiling like Steeplechase. 'I want you should be present at the payme-off ceremony,' he says. 'For taking a simple bath, I am winning five dollars cash from Wilbur.'

"When I am hearing this, I am thinking the ceiling is falling down on me."

"I don't know you," I said to my aunt Frieda. "Why weren't you happy? Charlie finally won."

"Is alright," Frieda explained easily. "While I am getting acquainted with Wilbur and his mother is putting on the hat, he is betting me ten dollars he can make your uncle take off all his clothes."

Teenager Gets Appetite Back; Thanks Hadacol

HADACOL Supplies Vitamins B₁, B₂, Niacin and Iron Which Her System Lacked.

According to Sara Loraine Beck, Box 253, Coker, Alabama, when a person is only 15 years old and feels terrible, can't eat or sleep the way they should, it's mighty bad. That is the way Loraine says she used to feel, but that was, of course, before she started taking HADACOL. Loraine found that taking HADACOL helped her system overcome deficiencies in Vitamins B₁, B₂, Niacin and Iron, which HADACOL contains.

Here is Loraine Beck's own statement: "I was run-down, sick and skinny, and weighed only 90 pounds before I used HADACOL. I would not eat because I had no appetite. Now I weigh 123 pounds and have an appetite. I feel a lot better. I have been taking HADACOL 10 months and am still taking it. I am 15 years old. HADACOL has done me lots of good."

GRATEFUL FOR FREEDOMS . . . Former federal worker, Miss Margaret E. Gruver, 53, stands in front of the $10,500 home she deeded to the United States government in appreciation of the "freedoms enjoyed by an American citizen." Miss Gruver was forced recently to leave her job as a government worker by bad health. She announced the gift of the house to the government in a letter to Senator Johnson, Colorado Democrat. She enclosed a deed and the key of the house in the letter. Miss Gruver says that she plans to go to Florida to live in a trailer camp with her mother who is 73 years old.

GREEK WARRIORS IN ACTION IN KOREA . . . Greek soldiers on patrol are silhouetted against the sky as they proceed along a ridge in Korea during the withdrawal of United Nations troops after Chinese and North Korean Communists began their drive south across the 38th parallel. Presence of these troops and those of other member nations of the U.N. should dispel critics of the U.N. action in Korea who complain that the United States is bearing the whole burden of defending the Korean republic from the Communists. Most of the rear guard action in the evacuation of troops by sea has been fought by our allies.

BUS PERFORMANCE BRINGS DOWN HOUSE . . . This is a general view of damage wrought when a bus skidded on the icy street at Chatterton and Olmstead avenues, New York City, recently. It struck an auto, jumped the sidewalk and smashed into a ground floor grocery store, knocking down one wall of two floors of a three story apartment house. No one was hurt, but 16 families were forced out into the cold with no immediate arrangement for shelter from the weather.

MASQUERADING BANDIT . . . Salina, Kansas, police say Russel Pearsall is the much sought after "female impersonation bandit." He is held in connection with the shooting of a Salina policeman during a frustrated holdup attempt.

NOT A GHOST . . . Marine P.F.C. Albert Haebe, 19, New York City, erroneously listed as dead in the Korean fighting last September, erroneously listed as dead in the Korean fighting last September, displays war department wires with his parents following his arrival home recently. He recalled the mixup in telegrams which caused his parents to arrange a memorial service. Albert and his parents show the three telegrams which said he was (1) wounded, (2) dead, (3) recovered.

PIQUED . . . Claiming encroachments against their ancient privileges, India's displaced ruling princes have organized under leadership of Maharajah of Baroda (above) to win recognition and guard their ancient rights.

KATHLEEN NORRIS

Divorce Cause

A SEATTLE WOMAN got a divorce the other day because her husband drew up a list of the "ten commandments of marriage," and requested that she sign it. These laws included the following promises: that she should never embarrass her husband; that she pay attention when addressed—presumably by him; that she neither smoke nor play the radio too loudly, nor keep him waiting, nor make comparisons — again presumably between him and other men; that she shorten her telephone calls and make fewer; that she not harp on topics of conversation, that she cook three meals a day when requested, at specified hours, and that she continue to do well the things she has done well.

Now these rules of Mr. Horowitz are not radical nor cruel in any way, and they embrace only such concessions as most good wives make to loving and generous husbands. But the audacity and complacency of a man who can attempt to rise to a state of such superiority, of such medieval male supremacy, is something at which to marvel in these days. I would visualize such a man as small in every sense, building up an innate, and perhaps unconscious, sense of inferiority by puffing his little self up into something of a domestic dictator.

Too Busy Sniffing

Somehow one doesn't imagine this man as whistling as he cleans the car Sunday mornings, picking up a cookie as he goes through the kitchen, admiring his wife's new permanent, and lending a helping hand to Junior with his arithmetic. No, he is too busy timing his wife's telephone conversations, sniffing to see if there's been any smoking, watching her sharply to see how attentive she is to his account of the practical jokes he played when a boy in grammar school.

". . . turn it lower! . . ."

Few wives could stand that. Dorothy Horowitz couldn't, and she got her divorce. It must have been a great shock to her husband, because a man must feel himself perfect to demand such perfection. The clause that especially impressed me was that she must promise to "continue to do the things she has done well." No let-up for Dorothy under the new rules.

But in a happy marriage the give-and-take can include most of these marital suggestions without friction. A tired man, relaxed with the big chair and the newspaper can permissably call out to his telephoning wife, "honey, could Clarissa get it through her head that exactly at six o'clock is not a good hour to go over the whole week in review, including references to your happy childhood?"

Some Permissibles

He may say in perfect safety, "Mollie, we've thrashed this affair of Caroline's marriage dry. Let's wait until we know more."

He may even yell, "Turn it lower! Keep it on, keep it on, if the kids are so crazy about the program, but turn it down!"

Yes, and which one of our loving husbands hasn't said to his loving wife, "Would you mind looking up from that pattern and listening to Judy's doll house problems long enough to give me your attention for three minutes?"

One husband I knew, with such constancy, used to shout "I want your undivided attention!" that the very babes of the household used the phrase among themselves. Yet that marriage held happily for more than 40 years.

As for embarrassing your mate, only immature, adolescent little wives of the junior prom school think that is coquettish and funny. Nothing makes a real wife more sorrowful than accidentally to expose to others some weakness or mistake of the little man. That is an easy game to play, but too expensive to be a part of the bigger game of marriage. One wife I knew spoke perfect English because of a European education. She didn't say much that was worth while in that language, or in her own, for that matter.

The Horowitz rules offend the dignity of women because they are superfluous. It is as if Dorothy had asked her spouse please to put his shoes on the right feet and get out of the bus at the corne nearest his office. If such rules are necessary in a marriage, they won't have any effect. They are all implicit in the original covenant—with the possible exception of smoking, which ought to be settled, as it were, out of court, his reasons against and hers for being taken into account.

Draft Could Leave Yankees Intact

By GRANTLAND RICE

NO BIG-LEAGUE MANAGER, whether it be trouble from the draft or opposing teams, can look into a more cheerful future than Casey Stengel. The somewhat grizzled Yankee manager has hit two pennant shots in a row and nothing much that happens in 1951 can leave much of a dent in his fame.

Grantland Rice

When I rode from New York to Los Angeles with Casey in 1948 he gave complete evidence of being a philosopher first and a manager second.

You could figure from his conversation that he intended to give the Yankees all he had and let fate and nature take their courses.

We'll have a good year," he said then, "a very good year. But not everyone can win."

Casey says the same thing in the gray dawn of a new year—1951.

"We'll have another good year. If we don't win again—well, who can win them all?

"No one knows what the draft is going to do," Casey said. "Here is one angle about which no one can complain. We have already lost a young and very promising star in Whitey Ford. He should have been better than a 20-game winner this next season. But the Phillies, Tigers and others have also lost stars—and many more will go. Good veterans can mean more to a team today than promising rookies or younger players."

Casey survived a 75-game absence on the part of Joe DiMaggio in 1949. He also survived 74 serious illnesses or injuries on the part of his players.

Same for 1951

He will have the same rough road for 1951. The Red Sox, with Scarborough and Wight added to their pitching staff, will be or should be much harder to cudgel out. They still have the big guns ready. Their defense has been their weakness. Cleveland can be better and the Tigers can be rough.

But Casey views the future, as fog-ridden as it is, with an undisturbed mind. It requires a considerable amount of morbid detail to disturb Stengel.

"We have something of a family team," he says. "Not many kids around now. Most of us are married men with families. Our pitchers are no longer kids—after losing Ford, Raschi, Reynolds and Lopat are all far past the rookie stage, not so likely to be called. You can't fill Henrich's place. Tommy is too great a ballplayer. But we didn't have too much of him last year.

"We have a fine catcher—a good pitching staff—three-fourths of a good infield and at least a good outfield. No one can say how many games Joe DiMaggio can play, but he played 138 or more last year. That's quite a bunch for a veteran around 35. Then look at our coaching staff again—Dickey, Turner and Crosetti—with Henrich added. Why that bunch could run two or three teams."

They could—and do a good job—but Casey is still the boss. One point is that George Weiss had arranged for more farm strength than he ever drew credit for. He had more than a few good ballplayers in the offing when they were needed—including such people as Bauer and Coleman and Woodling. It may be that Rizzuto won't have quite as good a year as he had last season. But you can gamble he will have a very good year just the same. He was at his all-time best in 1950. He won't be far away in 1951.

So Casey Stengel looks out upon an upset world and an upsetting game with his philosophy in good working order. He hasn't started borrowing any trouble yet. "Why look for it," he says. "It'll find you, sooner or later."

Looking Ahead

A real prophet is the fellow who can tell you what eight football teams will be in the four major bowls on January 1, 1952. That's only a year off. This time we had California, Michigan, Texas, Tennessee, Kentucky, Oklahoma, Clemson and Miami. How many of these will be out at the next bowl show? Michigan, for one. The Wolverine can't return now in the next three years.

At this time last year Stanford was the team named as the likely West Coast Bowl candidate for Jan. 1, 1952. But Stanford didn't come close to making it. My guess for next year's Rose Bowl would be Howie Odell's Washington team with U.C.L.A. next.

Washington gets a flying start with a brilliant backfield, headed by passer Heinrich. Stanford still lacks depth. U.S.C. will be a problem once more, an unguessable guess. Washington has the better chance out here.

From the Big Ten, I like Illinois. This team barely missed out in a snowstorm this last time. Ohio State and Michigan can't come. So the Rose Bowl looks to be Washington and Illinois. All this, of course, is dependent almost entirely in the course of the draft.

PERCY GRAINGER, PIANIST-COMPOSER TO BE AT FOREST CITY

High school music students in the Klemme area are invited to attend a lecture-seminar to be conducted by the world famous pianist-composer, Percy Grainger, when he appears in Forest City on February 9th.

The free lecture-seminar will be held at 3 p. m. Friday, Februory 9 at the Civic auditorium in Forest City. High school music groups are urged to take advantage of this opportunity to hear Mr. Grainger in an informal gathering.

Mr. Grainger's main public appearance will be in his formal concert at 8:00 p. m. Friday evening at the Forest City auditorium. He is being brought to this area under the auspices of the Waldorf College Artist Series.

This musical artist has been acclaimed by music critics during more than 50 years of concertizing all over the world. The late Edward Grieg praised Grainger's interpretation of his own Norwegian peasant dances and called him "a genius such as we Scandinavians must love." Mr. Grainger has done much to popularize folk music throughout the United States and Europe.

As a composer, Mr. Grainger's most famous work is "Country Gardens," long a best seller in the musical world.

Tickets are now available in Forest City, Garner, Lake Mills, Thompson and Mason City, and at the box office on the evening of the concert.

OFFICIAL COUNTY PAPER

THE KLEMME TIMES

Volume 56. KLEMME, IOWA, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1951 Number 12.

Boy Scouts Mark 41st Anniversary

Official poster marking the 41st birthday.

President Truman will greet 12 outstanding Boy Scouts in the White House on Feb. 6 opening the 41st anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America. Boy Scout Week will be observed Feb. 6 to 12 in every part of the nation by more than 2,750,000 boys and adult leaders. "Strengthen Liberty" is the birthday theme.

At "birthday parties" during Boy Scout Week throughout the nation each member will repledge himself to the Scout Oath or Promise. In each community representatives of the churches, schools, government and business will observe the anniversary with their Scouts. At Unit "open house" parties, parents, relatives and members of the chartering institutions will hear a review of the year's program features, service projects and membership gains

During Boy Scout Week members of the organization will develop window displays and demonstrations on civil defense and conservation. Each member will inspect his home to make certain no hazards exist. Surprise mobilizations will test Scout efficiency should emergencies arise.

Since 1910 more than 17,500,000 boys and men have been identified with the Boy Scouts of America

FARM BUREAU MEMBERSHIP MAY REACH ALL-TIME HIGH IN 1951

Farm Bureau membership in Hancock County may reach an all-time high in 1951, according to the latest report from Paul G Shurts, county Farm Bureau Fieldman.

Up to January 31st, 1168 families had paid their 1951 dues in Farm Bureau, Fieldman Shurts said. The Hancock County quota is 1320 members.

Nearly 105,000 Iowans had paid their 1951 dues, reports from the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation Office in Des Moines This was up to Monday, Jan. 29. The state membership quota this year is 127,500, compared to an actual membership last year of slightly more than 124,000. There is a strong possibility Farm Bureau membership in Iowa this year will reach 135,000. Three townships in Hancock County have already reached their quota in the membership drive which opened January 4th with a kick-off meeting at the Garner School Auditorium. The townships already over quota include Britt, Amsterdam and Madison. Other townships close to reaching their quota include Crystal, Erin, Ellington and Liberty.

Klemme Boy Scouts Ask The Citizens To Save Paper

The Klemme Boy Scouts are asking the citizens of Klemme to save all their old newspapers, magazines, etc. for collection. The Scouts are planning to pick up paper in the near future, to be announced in the Times, and then regularly ever month or six week. The boys would like to have the people keep the paper in two bundles or piles; the common type paper and the gloss or slick finish. The Scouts sell the waste paper in the two grades and have to sort which is a job. Watch for the pick-up date, folks, and a bundle of paper means an income for the Scouts of Klemme.

TAKE A LOOK AT C. A. LARSEN'S BIG BULL ? ?

A good many people have been driving to the local stockyards to see the big bull C. A. Larsen purchased a week ago in Nebraska. The bull is a Hereford bred, is three years old, weighs a little over 400 lbs., and stands about three feet high. He is a dwarf bull, otherwise well built. It's something to see, folks, so take a look at Larsen's dwarf bull . . .

WINDBREAK CUTS FEED AND FUEL BILLS

Hancock County farmers can, in effect, move their cattle feed lots 200 miles south into milder weather by planting a good windbreak around them, observes County Extension Director Paul Henderson. A windbreak will protect the feed lot from cold winds and snow, and will make it more pleasant for feeding.

The protection it gives will save feed too. Stock in sheltered areas don't need as much feed to keep up body heat, and they can be outside on stormy days rather than in a barn or shed. Henderson thinks now is a good time to start making plans for setting out a windbreak this spring. There are many things to consider so an early start is advisable.

There are many other advantages to a good windbreak besides protection for livestock. Ed Gardiner, Iowa State College extension forester points out that it protects the farm home and will cut fuel costs. Research findings indicate fuel bills for heating homes can be cut 33 percent by the presence of a good windbreak.

It will prevent snow from drifting in around buildings and blocking farmstead walks and drives during snow storms, and will provide protection for the wildlife.

A windbreak also adds to the appearance of a farm and increases its value, Henderson adds.

MANY LIVESTOCK HURT MARKETING

Loading Carefully Is Especially Important

Iowa livestock is worth lots of money and should be handled carefully when marketed, says W. G. Zmolek, extension livestock marketing specialist at Iowa State College. Careful handling will prevent losses from bruises and dead and crippled animals.

Care in loading is especially important. Market animals should not be crowded into pens, chutes and gateways. Clubs, whips and canes are also out of order.

Bumping of hips and loin bruises account for most injuries on cattle. Zmolek reports that a 2-year test by the National Livestock Loss Prevention Board shows that 64 percent of cattle bruises were caused by crowding, bumping or rushing.

Third Of Hogs Bruised

A 4-year study on hogs shows 34 percent of the carcasses examined were bruised. Of all the bruises, 62 percent were inflicted by man, and 46 percent accured on the farm before the hogs even left for market.

Zmolek recommends quiet handling and using a canvas slapper for driving animals. Electric prods are all right for slow and stubborn animals.

A good loading chute on every farm will come in handy. These are better than slipshod affairs fixed up each time a truck comes on the farm. Old straw and litter from the barnyard placed on the chute will make it more familiar to animals and cause less trouble.

Fine sand is the best bedding to use in trucks, according to Zmolek. This can be covered with straw during the winter months. Sand prevents slipping and falls.

Avoid Overcrowding

It's important not to overcrowd animals in the truck. A 16-foot truck can safely haul 11 100-pound cattle, 35 200-pound hogs, or 45 100-pound sheep.

The livestock marketing specialist advises against putting more than one kind of livestock in the same truck. If this is necessary, they should be separated with a strong partition.

Animals will usually walk out of the truck by themselves at the market if they're given a little time. Rushing and pounding will only confuse them and make them harder to handle.

FARM BUREAU URGE STATE TO DESIGNATE TRUSTEE FOR REVOLVING FUND

Farm Bureau members have asked the state legislature to designate a state agency as trustee of the revolving loan fund administered by Farm Home Administration for rehabilitation purposes.

The fund, established during the depression, has increased through the years. However, it will revert to the federal treasury unless a state agency is designated as trustee.

The Farm Bureau resolutions, as quoted here by Gilbert Guenther, Farm Bureau Voting Delegate from Hancock County, read: "We urge that the 54th General Assembly take the necessary legislative steps to designate a state agency as trustee for the revolving rehabilitation fund in order that an agreement may be made with F.H.A. to continue the use of the fund for loan purposes.

"We believe that F.H.A. loan funds should be materially increased. Although the increased credit at this time may be inflationary, we believe that there is great need for rehabilitation loans such as are made by F.H.A. and which would, because of their nature, contribute little toward inflation."

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY RAY EASTMAN

Harry put the cap on the gas tank, hung the hose on the pump, and pulled out his cloth to clean the windshield.

"That'll be three fifty-seven, Mr. Meezer. Say, I've noticed you don't have defrosters. Pretty important, these cold days. We've got a set that,ll fit your car, for only . . ."

"Here's four dollars." Mr. Meezer looked sour. "And I just want gasoline, not conversation or defrosters. Costs enough to run a car as it is."

Harry grinned. "Well, how about a scrapper to take off ice and frost? We've got a plastic one for only two bits. Or one that holds a razor blade for just . . ."

"Young man-" Meezer was firm. "If you don't think I'm spending enough money here, I'll be more than happy to spend it elsewhere."

Harry shrugged. "Okay, Mr. Meezer. Three fifty-seven, sixty, seventy, seventy-five, four dollars. And thanks a lot. But I still think . . . "

Mr. Meezer wasn't listening. He had departed in a very uneconomical burst of speed.

"Boy," Harry addressed the gas pump, "sometimes I think I'd just as soon lose a customer like that."

As it happens, Harry did lose Mr. Meezer. The newspaper story said, "Authorities attributed the accident to obscured vision due to frost on the windows of Meezer's automobile. Funeral services will be tomorrow."

$246.30 RECEIVED FOR THE POLIO FUND

The Klemme workers have canvassed the town for the Polio Drive, and to date they have received $246.30 for the fund. Mrs. Lester Stille, chairman for Klemme, asks that the ones who have not been contacted, to send in their donations this week, so the final report can be made to Mr. Joe Osman, Hancock County chairman.

I am sure that no one has to be reminded of the things that this money does to help polio victims in our county and state, and for the research going on to find the causes. If you stop and think a dollor or two is very cheap insurance if your child should be taken ill. Let's all get in the fight against polio. Lets make it over $250.00 for Klemme.

FIREMEN ANSWERED CALL TO FINNEGAN HOME

The Klemme Fire Department were called Friday morning at 11:45 to the Joe Finnegan residence in the south part of town. A small area of the roof was afire and extinguished in a few minutes. A spark from a chimney was probably the cause of the fire on the roof.

BIG PRIZE LIST AWAITS TOP LIVESTOCK TRUCKERS AT CHICAGO

Chicago, Jan. 31—Prizes exceeding $4,000 in cash, bonds and merchandise are already in promise for truckers who do the safest job of hauling livestock to market in the Chicago Livestock Trucker Safety contest, according to J. S. Porcaro, assistant superintendent of the Chicago yards.

Top prize donor to date is the Chicago Livestock Exchange, trade organization of commission firms on the market, who have earmarked $1,000 in bonds for the contest. Many more contributions are expected before the prize list closes. Prizes will extend to 50 places in the contest.

Awards will be given at a Trucker Jamboree at the yards on April 6th to truckers who have the best records of hauling livestock here without any deads, cripples or bruises. Afterwards, the Union Stock Yards and Transit Company, operators of the market, will be host to truckers at a dinner and party.

Top donors in addition to the Exchange include Swift and Armour packers, Sear Roeouck Foundation, Union Stock Yard and Transit Company, the Livestock and Drovers National Bank, Sovereign Oil Company, Chicago Traders Livestock Exchange, Chicago Producers Commission Association, Jiffy Loading Chutes Company, and the independent Chicago packing houses of Siegel, H. Grvaer, Reliable, Russell and Triangle.

The contest, which closes on February 28 after a seven month run, includes nearly 4,000 truck operators. It is designed to cut down livestock losses due to careless handling in transit from farm te market.

The contest is a part of the Chicago Livestock Safety Pro-Program, begun in 1949 to cut bruising of livestock on the market. This program has spearheaded a national movement that seeks to reduce annual losses that amount to $36,000,000 or enough meat to feed a city of nearly half a million people for a year.

Officials here released a report this week based on studies by packing houses that showed the program has had a definite effect on bruise reduction. Bruise percentages have dropped since its inaugural from a high of 2.50 to an all-time low of 0.46 percent for catlle; and from 4.45 to a record low of 1.01 for hogs.

REPORT OF CHRISTMAS SEAL RETURNS

Mrs. Dwight Hummel, Mrs. Elwood Geary and Mrs. John Chambers, committee for the sale of Christmas Seals in Klemme for the Hancock County Tuberculosis and Health Association, have submitted the following report:

There were 201 letters containing seals mailed out in Nov., 191 were former contributors, 152 were returned, 4 were refused in the Post Office and 18 were returned with seals only

To date, there has been no reply from 34 of these. There were 10 letters sent out to new names this year, 8 of these have been returned, 2 with seals only.

A total of $152.35 was received in the letters and a total of $4.00 was received in the 3 plastic hearts placed in places of business. The local expense was $2.35 leaving a total of $156.65 received.

Ell Midgets Met January 29th

The regular meeting of the Ell Midgets was held on Jan. 29th. The meeting was held at the home of Charles and Darrel Goll. Then members answered roll call, all members brought a rope to make a rope halter. There was a demonstration on how to make a rope halter by Byron Greiman. When the evening was over we had all made a halter. The meeting was adjourned and a lunch was served.

If you're thinkin' that Abe Lincoln
Is a little out of date,
Just recall he said to all,
"Don't be a divided state."
Laws are made to be obeyed
By every mother's child of us.
(Some attempt to be exempt - - -
When caught, they raise so wild a fuss!)
If some obey, but others say,
"The law was never meant for me!"
They're dividing the law-abiding
From themselves. That shouldn't be.
When we select men to elect,
Then our voice on laws is spoken.
When we break a law they make,
Folks, that's our own law we've broken!
Yes, laws are made to be obeyed
By all. And this advice we've giving:
Only fools ignore the rules
Of safety that help keep them living!

VOWS EXCHANGED— Lucille Priebe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Priebe of Klemme, and Dick Gaffney of Swaledale, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Gaffney of Algona, were married January 29 in Mason City. After a short wedding trip they will be at home in Klemme.

Sorority pledging activities for the winter quarter began this week at Iowa State Teachers College, at Cedar Falls, said Anita Daasch, Dunlap, Intersorority council president.

Lillian Wille, of Klemme, has been pledged by Theta Gamma Nu, one of the nine social sororities of the Teachers College campus.

PLANS TAKE SHAPE FOR EGG AND POULTRY DAY

Plans are taking shape for the Egg and Poultry Day which will be held at Forest City Tuesday, February 13th and Clear Lake, Wednesday, Feb. 14th, county extension director reported this week.

The Civic Auditorium in Forest City, and Veterans Club at Clear Lake will open at 11:00 A M. and stay open until 4:00 A M. There will be no admission charge.

Henderson said that the Iowa State College Extension Service specialists are planning to set up several exhibits. They will cover the subjects of diseases, range practices, and quality poultry and egg production. A model Iowa laying house will be exhibited. It will show walls and equipment built to the scale of 2 inches equal a foot and will be set for demonstrational purposes.

Sponsored by the Agricultural Extension Service of Iowa State College and county extension personnel in cooperation with local agencies, the touring Egg and Poultry Day show will stop in 21 Iowa communities this winter. The event is being included on the Extension Service program this year because of the great need among farm people for information on the economical production and efficient marketing of poultry meat and eggs, according to Henderson. Farmers who keep only a small flock of chickens as well as the specialized poultry meats and egg producer will find it profitable to attend the Egg and Poutry Day. Vocational agriculture classes, G. I. farm training classes and 4-H club members also are welcome to attend.

Several approaches will be made by specialists to the problems of economical production and efficient marketing of high quality poultry products. Discussions will encourage good management practices. Demonstrations will be conducted on adequate housing and equipment for the laying flock. Also on the program will be discussions and exhibits on the prevention of losses in poultry by the use of correct santitation and control practices.

Jesus Meets Need

Lesson for February 11, 1951

WHAT PEOPLE want would fill many books. What people need is a simpler story. Whatever success Christianity has had, is due to its success in meeting human needs. If Christianity were only an argument, or a system of ideas, it would never have gone as far as it has, nor won so many friends.

Dr. Foreman

Ignorance

THE Church at its best has simply followed in the paths on which Jesus was a pioneer. The gospel stories of Jesus show him as one who "went about doing good" as Peter put it. Seeing a need, he bent himself to meet that need; this has been the ideal for Christians and the church ever since.

One of the first needs of man is to be saved from his ignorance. Jesus saw the human race not as a pack of wolves or a mass of snakes, but as sheep without a shepherd.

So Jesus then, and the church now, set out to teach. A church that does not teach is a poor church. "The church must teach or die," it is true; it is also true that the church must teach or others will die.

Sickness

IT IS not on record that Jesus ever walked by a sick person without making him well. Jesus did not think that sickness and pain are good things in themselves

When you think of all the loss of time, money and happiness that one miserable little cold can cause, and multiply that by the number of colds in North America alone; when you think of the pain and danger and after-effects of one attack of malaria, and then think of all the cases of malaria in all the warm regions of the wirld; and when you go on adding up all the diseases there are, you really wonder how the human race manages to stagger along.

Now the Christian church has always been doing something about this. Today, in many backward countries, Christian doctors and hospitals have pioneered in health, and indeed are the only effective disease-fighters in the whole region.

Hunger

WHATEVER else can be said of the feeding of the five thousand, one thing is plain: Jesus did not think it was a good thing for people to stay hungry.

So the church, following his example, has fed the hungry wherever it can. The church protests, and will continue to protest, against any society or institution that leaves people hungry. It is on empty stomachs that things like Communism rise.

So when a missionary like Sam Higginbottom in India teaches better ways of farming, or when the Salvation Army adopts the slogan "Soap, soup and salvation," or when heifers are rounded up and sent abroad as a gesture of Christian friendship, when CROP interests the Christian farmers of America in rural reconstruction in war-torns areas of Europe, the church is just following the lead of Jesus.

Slavery

ONE of man's deepest needs is freedom. Jesus did not set free any slaves in his time, it is said; but is this true? There are other kinds of slavery besides that from which Abraham Lincoln freed the Negroes in 1863. Of these other kinds, one of the worst is slavery of the mind. We see Jesus setting his contemporaries free from the heavy chains of taboos and false traditions which the Pharisees had piled on them.

So when the first Christians broke away from the burdens of the old ceremonial laws, or when a Christian missionary in Africa or China or Greenland set men free from the darkness of pagan superstitions, or when the Protestant Reformation came, a great Declaration of Independence in the name of Christ from the traditions and superstitions which had long obscured the truth and burdened the minds even of Christians, the church is only following the example of Christ.

When we stand for a free church in a free land and a government of free men, we stand as Christians ought to stand, enemies of tyrannies in every form.

AROUND THE HOUSE

Before tying up a package moisten the string. When the string dries, it will shrink and tighten up the knots.

If you burn pine wood and want to prevent the gum from collecting on fireplace stones, bricks or tiles, coat them, after they're thoroughly cleaned, with boiled linseed oil.

For tile fireplaces, sprinkle salt on the tiles and then rub them with half of a raw lemon. Follow this with a good scrubbing.

Chimney soot, if it's free from salt, makes exceptionally fine fertilizer for gardens and potted plants.

The ink-written address on a package can be protected from being smeared by water or snow if you rub it several times with the stump of a white candle

To save wear and tear on your tongue when you have a lot of envelopes and stamps to lick wrap an ice cube in a thick rag and moisten with that

When vegetable glue gets dry and hard, it can be softened up with hot vinegar. Add the vinegar drop by drop and keep stirring until the glue is soft. Cold vinegar can be used, but it takes several days to soak through and become effective.

If something needs gluing and you have no glue, colorless nail polish makes a good substitute for most purposes.

To clean a stone or brick fireplace, hot water and strong soap applied with a stiff brush are often adequate If they're not, mix up a paste of powdered pumice and concentrated ammonia and cover the smoked areas with it. Let it stay about an hour or two before scrubbing it off with hot water and soap.

To keep glue fresh when it's being used continually, throw away the top of the can, and push the brush or applicator handle through a large ball of modeling clay. The ball should be somewhat bigger than the mouth of the can, and it should be placed on the handle so that the brush reaches the glue. Thus, by resting the ball of clay on top of the can, air is kept out and the brush is always ready to use.

Railroad Worker And His Family Praise Hadacol

Hadacol Supplies Vitamins B_1, B_2, Niacin and Iron Which His System Lacked.

Railroad men all over the country are known for their extreme diligence and their wonderful sense of observation. Mr. G. E. Moncus, who has had sixteen full years of fine service as a railroad flagman, is no exception. He is proud of the excellent job he is doing, and his observation powers are not limited to his job by any means. For instance, when Mr. Moncus noticed how much better his wife was beginning to feel, he decided he had better try the same thing and he, too, might feel better. Yes, Mr. Moncus started taking HADACOL and now he says, "I have lots of pep and energy and just feel good in every way." Mr. and Mrs. Moncus were suffering deficiencies of Vitamins B_1, B_2, Niacin and Iron, which HADACOL contains.

Mr. Moncus says: "Quite some time ago I began to have indigestion and sour stomach. My food just didn't digest right. I'd get a full, 'gassy' feeling after I ate. This affected my appetite and my weight. I was run-down, too. My wife started taking HADACOL and so did my daughter. I saw how much it had helped them, so I started taking it. And HADACOL has certainly helped me, too. My stomach never bothers me any more. I have a terrific appetite. I have lots of pep and energy and just feel good in every way. I think HADACOL is wonderful. I wish I could tell everyone just how wonderful it really is."

Serve Tarts Delicious Enough to Tempt

(See Recipes Below)

Glamorous Desserts

WHEN YOU'RE CALLED upon to serve dessert and beverage combinations, do you have to rack your brain and mull over a whole stack of recipes? Keep a few of these glamorous desserts at your fingertips, and you'll solve the problem easily!

Dessert-and-beverage parties, held in the afternoons and evenings, are very much with us these winter days and call for delicious fare such as pies and cakes. They may be small and toothsome such as the cherry tarts with a rosette of cream cheese; some will like an upside-down cake, others will prefer a rich and satisfying cream pie or almond torte.

Chocolate Cream Puff Pie

(Serves 8 - 10)

Pastry:
- ½ cup water
- ¼ cup shortening
- ¼ cup flour
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 2 eggs

Filling:
- 2 envelopes (2 tablespoons) unflavored gelatine
- 2 cups freshly-made cold coffee brew
- 6 tablespoons cocoa
- 1 cup sugar
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1½ cups milk
- 2 eggs, separated

Frosting:
- 1 cup confectioners' sugar
- Milk
- 2 drops peppermint extract
- Yellow vegetable coloring
- Green vegetable coloring

To make pastry, bring water to boiling point. Add shortening; stir until melted. Bring again to boiling point; quickly add flour and salt. Cook, stirring constantly, about 2 minutes, or until mixture forms smooth, compact mass. Cool slightly. Add eggs, 1 at a time, beating after each. Beat 5 minutes, or until mixture is thick and shiny. Using ½ teaspoon for each, make on greased baking sheet 24 puffs, ½ inch apart. Spread remaining batter in greased 11-inch pie pan or plate (or greased 8-inch pie pans or plates). Bake pie shell and puffs in hot oven (450°) 12 to 15 minutes. Cool.

To make the filling, soften gelatine in ½ cup coffee brew. Combine cocoa, ½ cup sugar and salt. Add remaining coffee brew and milk. Beat egg yolks; add with gelatine to coffee mixture. Cook over hot water, stirring constantly, until slightly thickened. Cool slightly. Beat egg whites stiff; gradually add remaining sugar, beating constantly. Fold into coffee mixture. Allow filling to stiffen partially; pour into pie shell. Chill.

Miniature Cherry Tarts

- Bread
- Butter
- 1 can red cherries
- ¼ cup sugar
- 2 tablespoons cornstarch
- Cream Cheese
- Milk

Cut thin slices of fresh bread into 2½ inch squares. Press each square into a small greased muffin tin, brush them with melted butter and bake in a hot oven (450°) until golden brown.

Heat the cherries, add the sugar, and thicken with the cornstarch; cool. Put several cherries in each of the baked shells, and garnish with rosettes of the cream cheese slightly softened with milk and forced through a pastry tube.

Washington Cream Pie
- ⅓ cup butter
- 1 cup sugar
- ½ cup milk
- 1¾ cups sifted cake flour
- 2½ teaspoons baking powder
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 3 egg whites
- ½ teaspoon lemon extract
- ⅜ teaspoon vanilla

Cream butter. Add sugar and continue creaming until sugar granules are dissolved. Sift flour with baking powder and salt. Add flour and milk alternately to the butter-sugar mixture, beginning and ending with flour. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites and add the flavorings. Pour into 2 pie tins that have been lined with waxed paper and bake in a moderate oven (350°) 25 minutes.

Almond Torte
- ⅓ cup butter
- ½ cup sugar
- 4 egg yolks
- 1 cup sifted cake flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- 1½ tablespoons evaporated Milk and
- 1 ½ tablespoons water, mixed
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 4 egg whites
- ¾ cup sugar
- ½ cup blanched, chopped almonds
- ½ teaspoon cinnamon and
- 1 tablespoon sugar, mixed

Cream butter until smooth and plastic. Add ½ cup sugar gradually and beat until creamy. Add egg yolks and continue beating until well blended. Sift flour with baking powder and salt and add alternately with the diluted milk to the first mixture, beginning and ending with flour. Add vanilla. Turn into two 9-inch spring form or cake pans that have been greased and lined with waxed paper. Whip the egg whites until stiff. Fold in the ¾ cup sugar, then spread over the top of the unbaked mixture. Sprinkle almonds over top, then the sugar-cinnamon mixture. Bake in a moderate oven (325°) about 40 minutes. Spread the following cream filling between the layers:
- ½ cup sugar
- 2 tablespoons cornstarch
- 1 egg
- 2 cups Evaporated Milk
- 1 teaspoon almond extract

Blend sugar and cornstarch, add egg and stir until well blended. Add milk slowly to blend well. Cook over boiling water, stirring constantly, about 10 minutes. Remove from heat and add almond extract. Cool before using.

LYNN SAYS:

Tempting Foods Should Stay Within Budget

Split pea soup, whether homemade or canned, can be enhanced by the addition of two slices of bacon, fried and crumbled, and a few ripe olives, pitted and cut into pieces.

An easy, economical dip for potato chips uses a cup of sieved calavo seasoned with ¼ teaspoon curry powder, 2 teaspoons of vinegar, a few drops of tabasco sauce, salt and pepper to taste.

Any casserole takes on an elegant look and flavor when you replace the humble buttered bread crumbs with cooked, drained noodles fried in a bit of butter or drippings until just crisp.

Corn and canned tomatoes placed in pimientoe halves or green peppers are a choice, but budget-wise accompaniment to a steak dinner.

Do something different with creamed salmon: used canned asparagus tips as the vegetable to add green to its rosy red, and serve on toasted English muffins.

West Losses Threaten Rose Bowl

By GRANTLAND RICE

IF YOU TAKE enough punches, especially around the head, you are more than likely to get dizzy. This, apparently, is what has happened to Pacific Coast Conference football. Those five Big Nine victories—six if you care to include Alabama—have jolted the west coast off balance.

Grantland Rice

The first suggestion from the west coast presidents was to abolish the Rose Bowl game. Hooked with this startling idea were other suggestions such as playing the game soon after the regular season ended or having all-star teams from each conference play.

The latter suggestion doesn't make any sense at all. It would be merely an exhibition and would also conflict with the San Francisco Shrine Bowl, the finest charity that football knows.

The west coast presidents are in a tough spot. College presidents all over the map have been partly blamed for football's overemphasis, proselyting, payment of cash, alumni uprisings, coaching troubles and various other ills and ailments that have attacked the game.

The stew over the coaching system at Southern California and Stanford, the heavy panning Lynn Waldorf took after his third straight defeat, all helped to stir up the presidents. They wanted to do something about the situation, but they could think up no way of punishing or curbing the alumni, where a big part of the trouble starts.

It is all well enough to say a college president should take a hand in handling the disturbance. But he can't very well be coach, athletic director, commissioner, alumni director and president at the same time.

It was a heavy shock to the west to discover that its famous Rose Bowl was in real danger. This would also include the midwest, since the Big Nine or Big Ten wouldn't work with the south or southwest, and the east is out of the picture.

This situation would leave future bowl games to the Cotton, Sugar, Orange, Gator, etc., unless the Pasadena committee arranged an outlaw affair, apart from any conference. That could happen.

What with the sanity code leaping back into the picture, this promises to be the busiest winter football has known, far away from the actual gridiron.

More about Notre Dame

We ran recently into Jerry Groom, Notre Dame's star center for the last three years. Jerry has been one of the best defensive centers in football since 1948 and Notre Dame is certain to miss his effective play next fall.

"We lose a good many men from our 1950 squad," Groom said, "and our replacements for this next fall will be uncertain. There will be at least six or seven regulars missing—possibly more—and our freshman squad this season wasn't any too strong.

The freshmen had several pretty good men, but no outstanding stars. Our substitute or reserve list was pretty thin this last season. This was one of the reasons for our bad year."

It might be mentioned here that Groom will be one of the missing stars who will be hard to replace.

"Fortunately we have an extremely able coaching staff," Jerry continued. "But again this staff has no idea how many men we lose before next fall. And Notre Dame right now is not in a position to lose many more. We are not as well fixed for material as many others are."

There is a question as to whether the platoon system can survive the lack of material in a war year. It has been proved that teams with two platoons have a big advantage over the single platoon, although Michigan had five men who played on both offense and defense.

"Notre Dame had to work this way most of the season," Groom said. "We had to meet too many fresh troops."

It is more than possible that football won't be important enough next fall to bother about.

Size of the Draft

Football and baseball, our two major sports, lined up with basketball, the biggest drawing sport, face heavy cuts in their playing strength for 1951. Just how heavy these cuts will be is still a matter of uncertainty.

But since a big part of the draft strikes at ages ranging from 19 to 23 or 24, you can see what the impact will be. I asked Bert Bell, pro football's commissioner, how hard his game would be hit.

"We were facing the finest crop in pro football history," Bert said. "Up to the draft. I am afraid there won't be many left. I would say that at least 75 per cent of college stars graduating this spring will be taken. At least that many. The student who has just graduated will be called before those still in college. A great many colleges have ROTC courses and those enrolled in these will be given a chance to finish their training. In any event they must leave college to enter the armed forces."

IOWA DHIA HERDS SET NEW PRODUCTION MARKS

Iowa's Dairy Herd Improvement Association herds have chalked up new production records, according to results now summarized, reports Joe Hineman, Iowa State College extension dairyman.

Since May 1950, the average monthly production for all cows in DHIA has topped previous records for comparable months since the beginning of testing associations in 1909.

June was the leading month in this record breaking period when all cows in the association averaged 32 pounds of butterfat for the 30-day period.

Hineman accounted for this stepped-up production by pointing to recommended practices that are being adopted to an increasing extent by dairymen. He mentioned the practices of culling poor producers, the use of improved pastures, increased feeding of grass and legume silage, and grain feeding according to production.

Better breeding programs are another stimulus to this climbing production, the extension dairyman pointed out.

About 2,000 herd owners are now cooperating in the DHIA program.

BUTTER!

Piping hot biscuits . . . rolls—or vegetables, pancakes, potatoes—they're ALL so much better with plenty of butter. More nutritious, too. The natural golden color of butter comes from rich golden cream—since four pints of cream go into the making of each pound of butter.

For nutrition, for health, for downright goodness . . . there's nothing finer than the high-score Iowa butter for which our creamery has built such a reputation. Use butter generously in cooking, and at every meal.

BUTTER OUTLOOK IMPROVES

The butter outlook has made an abrupt change within the last 60 days according to reports Hancock County Extension Director Paul Henderson has received from Francis Kutish, Iowa State College farm economist

Holiday uses and high consumer incomes made a sharp increase in demand during the past 2 months and butter moved out of government storage so fast that the U. S. Department of Agriculture suspended sales until it could check up on the exact amount that was left.

Previously, the 150 million pounds of butter the government had on hand was expected to be large enough to prevent any great rise in prices for several months, Kutish told Henderson.

At the same time, butter output has dropped below last year's already low levels and prospects for an immediate boost in butter output are not great with more milking moving into fluid consumption.

Since over-all milk output is not expected to expand, butter production will probably continue to be below last year's figures. Therefore while feed cost will limit dairymen's profits, the dairy outlook is considerably improved.

SONG OF SAFETY

Camp Fire Girl Groups Conduct Programs on Traffic Education

ADMONISHING AUTOISTS to sing a song of safety while driving, Camp Fire Girls of the Central Valley Area Council in California launched a campaign in the communities of Stockton, Lodi, San Andreas, West Point and Oakdale.

At meetings of women and men's service clubs, PTA's, church and other groups, the young members of the youth agency distributed cards for drivers to clip on windshield visors. The card pointed out the perils of speeding along the highways and byways at 65, 75 and 85 miles per hour. Not content with this effort, Camp Fire members including Blue Birds (7 to 10) Camp Fire Girls (10 to 15), and Horizon Club groups (15 to 18), saw that every member of their organization signed pledges promising to obey safety rules while walking, skating, and riding bicycles and scooters.

St. Louis, Mo., Camp Fire members (above) receive a safety award for their safety campaign from traffic education division of the city's police department.

The girls also enlisted the aid of their parents in the safety campaign. Fathers sent letters to all drivers in the community asking them to please observe safe driving practices, especially while in the vicinity of schools and playgrounds.

The importance for teen-agers to learn safe driving practices was so vital to a group of Beaumont, Texas, Camp Fire Girls that they held a panel discussion on "Should a Fourteen-Year-Old Have a Driver's License?" The discussion was held in school as part of their English class program. The girls did a lot of preparatory research before planning the discussion. They sent for information from other committees and explored the laws of different states with regard to licensing young drivers in their communities. The conclusion reached was that a fourteen-year-old could be given a practice license for two years, should always have an adult in the car, and at the end of the probationary period could apply for a driver's license.

The initial panel discussion proved so successful that the Parent-Teacher Association requested a repeat performance. Later the panel went on the air over local stations.

IN MANY COMMUNITIES across the country Camp Fire members held "Safety Safaris" as demonstrations climaxing their safety drives. The girls enlisted the cooperation of local police and highway departments and civic organizations. Cars, bicycles, scooters, pedestrians and skaters all took part in the "safari." Snappy placards streaming from vehicles pointed out the "rules of the road."

The police department in St. Louis, Mo., recognized the good citizenship efforts of the local Camp Fire Girls safety drive by presenting the organization with an award.

"Camp Fire for a happy life—safety for a long one" is one of the themes of Camp Fire Girls current activities, in which more than 360,000 girls from Maine to California are participating. Skits and radio programs carrying out the safety theme have been given by Camp Fire members in practically every state in the Union and have demonstrated that "everybody counts" in making the world a better and a safer place to live.

Star Dust
STAGE—SCREEN—RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

GLORIA SWANSON certainly never expected that her greatest fame would come when she was a grandmother. Winner of the National Board of Review's award as best actress of the year, for "Sunset Boulevard," she has rocked New York audiences back on their heels with her performance on the stage in "20th Century." One critic wrote, "It long since ceased to be startling that Gloria Swanson was amazing. It's only startling that she can go on being more amazing." Meanwhile she turns out a delightful radio program five times a week, on Mutual. And though her hair is touched with gray, she sometimes looks young enough to be her own daughter!

Jose Ferrer, with his film, "Cyrano de Bergerac" showing in a neighboring theatre, appears opposite Gloria in the play, giving a magnificent performance. He also directed it, so well that he could have been content with it. As a highly eccentric producer of plays he wrings every ounce of humor out of his role; as a director he did the same for the other actors.

Thelma Ritter gets star billing in her eighth picture, heading the cast of "The Marriage Broker Story" (working title). She had served her time on the stage and in radio before tackling Hollywood; "Miracle on 34th Street" was her first picture. "A Letter to Three Wives" the one that made people sit up and take notice. "All About Eve" and "The Mating Season" are her latest.

THE FICTION CORNER

TAKE THE LEAD

By Sidney Du Broff

3-Minute Fiction

MISS PARISH drove her ancient automobile along the deserted highway toward home. Her deep satisfaction was justifiable in view of the successful play she had produced and directed that evening. Nothing Broadway would care to see, but a huge triumph for the amateurs of Deep Valley High School.

Even Mr. Wilks, principal of Deep Valley High, who was never lavish in his praise had said, "Miss Parish, we are extremely proud to have you as a member of our faculty. I speak for the town as well as its school."

Now it was over, except for the party she was giving for the cast.

Miss Parish applied pressure to the accelerator. Being detained at the theatre had made her late. She knew the cast would already be arriving at her home.

As she rounded the sharp turn in the road she heard a sudden noise followed by a loud hiss. The car pitched from side to side almost running off the road. Miss Parish fought desperately to egain control. The automobile straightened itself out, gradually losing momentum. She brought it to a stop.

She emerged from the disabled automobile. It was too dark to see anything. She opened the trunk and lit a match. "No jack! Now what am I going to do?"

Miss Parish sat down on the running board. "I suppose I could walk back to town and get help . . . or

"I'm in love with you, Roberta. I want to marry you," Wayne said.

I could stop a passing car—if there was one." She retained her position on the running board.

In the distance appeared a set of headlights. Miss Parish took a small handkerchief from her purse and waved it at the on-coming car. It slowed down somewhat, but then resumed its speed and disregarded the appeal for aid.

SHE waited for what seemed like a long time before another automobile came into sight. As one loomed near she waved her handkerchief hopefully. It came to a screeching halt alongside her own car.

"What seems to be the trouble, Miss?"

"I had a blow-out and I don't have a jack."

"Fear no more, my lady," a man said, getting out of his car. "I'm certain there is at least one around somewhere."

"You're a life saver."

"Wait a minute," the man said. "Come over here near the headlights."

She hesitated. "But, why . . ."

He took her arm, guiding her to where he could see her face.

"Roberta!" he cried out. "It's you!"

"Yes, Wayne."

"You recognized my voice—and you tried to keep me from knowing who you were.—Why?"

"I explained all of that to you in the note I left," she said.

"Note nothing. I've been looking for you for six months. I was ready to notify the police."

"No, Wayne, I . . ."

"I'm in love with you, Roberta. I want to marry you."

"I can't," she answered.

"Why can't you?"

"Because your success means too much to you . . . and to me."

"I can't have success without you, Roberta."

"You can't have it with me," she retorted, tears forming in her eyes. "The play you produced with me in the lead flopped. It flopped because I wasn't good enough for the part."

"It was a bad play Roberta."

"It was a good play," she said defiantly. "Don't you see, Wayne, you'd go on producing plays with me in the lead and everyone would flop because I'm just not good enough for Broadway."

"Is it somebody else?"

"No," she answered. "I'm the dramatic coach at Deep Valley High School. It doesn't pay as much as Broadway . . . but at least I can handle the part."

"Roberta, come back—"

"I belong here Wayne. Just as you belong on Broadway. We each have what we want, —or almost what we want. Now help me change the tire; I'm giving a party for my cast tonight."

BROADWAY AND MAIN STREET

Trouble Teaches Lena That Otto's Friends Are Not Bums

By BILLY ROSE

A beery little letter showed up in the mail today from a man in Milwaukee, and if you'll pull up a chair and help yourself to the pretzels I'll be glad to let you take a look at it. . . . Dear Mr. Rose:

There's an old German couple in our neighborhood named Otto and Lena Brenner, and something happened to them not long ago which you might want to mention in your column.

Otto has been a gateman at one of the local breweries for longer than most of us can remember, and ever since he got married in 1910 he's been turning his pay check over to his wife who cashes it at the grocer's and gives him a couple of dollars off the top for spending money. About 30 cents of this goes for smoking tobacco and the rest for beer at Stegmeyer's Social Club, a saloon where Otto drops in regularly for a little talk with the boys. Lena, of course, has never approved of the club, and has always said Otto's friends were a bunch of bums.

LAST MONTH Lena got word that her sister in Racine was sick and needed her, and so, not knowing when she'd be back, she gave Otto permission to cash his pay check himself, warning him, however, to stay away from Stegmeyer's where the boozers could only lead him into evil ways.

The following Friday night when Otto cashed his check he took the $37 in bills, rolled them into a wad, put a rubber band on it and shoved it into a pants pocket, along with an odd quarter left over from his previous week's spending money.

Then he went home, ate a little dinner and stretched out on the couch for a nap.

For the best part of an hour he turned and tossed, but finally he gave up, put on his hat and headed for Stegmeyer's. A few doors from the bar, a panhandler gave him a hard-luck story, and it was so convincing that Otto dug down and gave him the quarter. Then he went into the beer parlor where, of course, he got his usual warm reception and had himself his usual fine time. That is, until it was his turn to buy a round—when he reached for his money it wasn't there.

"What's the trouble?" said the bartender. "You look like you lost something."

"My pay," said Otto.

"Don't worry," said the bartender. "Your credit's good."

"It ain't that," said Otto. "This is the first time my old lady has let me cash my pay check and I'll never hear the end of it if I don't have the money when she gets back. I gave a panhandler a quarter before I came in and that's when the bills must have fallen out of my pocket."

WELL, PRACTICALLY everybody in Stegmeyer's went out to look for Otto's money, but there was no sign of it so he finally went home, plenty worried about how Lena was going to take it.

An hour later there was a knock on the gateman's door and it was Little Stevie, the kid who works for Stegmeyer. "The panhandler came in right after you left and gave us this," he said, handing Otto a roll of bills with a rubber band on it. "He says he picked it up right after you gave him the quarter, but his conscience started to bother him on account you was so good to him."

Otto counted the money—it was $37.

When Lena got back from Racine, the old boy handed her the dough and that might have been that, except the following night, while tidying up, she found a roll of bills wedged behind a cushion on the couch.

"Look," she said to Otto, "money! Thirty-seven dollars!"

"It must be my last week's pay," said Otto.

"You mean you got paid twice last week?"

Otto knew he wasn't worth a darn as a liar and so he told Lena everything.

"It means only one thing," said his wife. "Them bums at Stegmeyer's saw you was in bad trouble and took up a collection."

A few minutes later, Lena went to the closet and got her coat. "Put on your hat and let's go," she said.

"Go where?" said Otto.

"To Stegmeyer's, of course. First I'm gonna apologize to those bums for saying they're bums. After that the drinks are on me!"

Sincerely,
Louis Stegmeyer

PANCAKE DAY

Pre-Lenten Fete, With Ancient Tradition, Gains in Popularity

Pancake Day, which has gained in popularity in the United States in recent years, will be celebrated February 6. Last year, Pancake Day was celebrated in England, many countries in Europe, Africa, South America, Canada, as well as this country.

Notable among the celebrations in the United States was the first International Pancake Race between the women of Liberal, Kansas, and Olney, England. This race was the subject of newspaper and radio stories which flashed, many times, around the world. The women of Olney won, but on February 6 the Kansas women are determined to emerge victorious in the second running of this now yearly event.

Pancake Day always is the day before Ash Wednesday, the beginning of Lent. The holiday pancakes had their start as "shriving cakes." At the tolling of a bell, housewives in old England rushed to prepare their pancakes, according to a prescribed formula. They then flocked to their churches to be "shriven," or absolved of their sins. Hence, the last day before Lent became "Shrove Tuesday," then, as the religious significance dimmed, simply "Pancake Day."

As the religious emphasis on Pancake Day dwindled in England, the day took on the aspects of a merrymaking holiday. The day before Lent also became a fun-filled celebration time in many other parts of the world. The word, "carnival," which means "farewell to meat," was applied to pre-lenten fetes in the Mediterranean area. "Mardi Gras" (literally, "Fat Tuesday") is an annual event in parts of Europe as well as in New Orleans and Rio de Janeiro, where the current celebrations are quite boisterous. On "Fat Tuesday" in old France it was customary to butcher a fat ox for the annual feast before the Lenten fast.

A Household Sport

In frying their Pancake Day delicacies English housewives were taking advantage of an opportunity to use up their accumulated meat fats forbidden during Lent. Their flapjacks were customarily turned by flipping them into the air and catching them in a skillet. "Throwing the pancake" became a recognized household sport. It was this sport which soon led to the development of the 505-year-old Pancake Day race in Olney, England.

Football was played on Pancake Day in many parts of Scotland. The married men played the bachelors, and the married women tackled the spinsters. Modern football, as compared to these old traditional football games, is strictly for sissies. The goal lines for this football game were often three miles apart—a distance which usually held the score down to a couple of goals per game. The game has been supplanted by other Pancake Day sports in England, and most of the English women now have traded the gridiron for the griddle.

Boys at Westminster school in London eagerly await Pancake Day each year. At 11:00 a.m., a verger of the abbey solemnly emerges from the college kitchen followed by a cook bearing a large pancake. In the school he throws it into the crowd of waiting boys, who fight for possession of the flapjack. The lad who emerges with the biggest chunk of the pancake gets a sum of money from the abbey.

The burning of "Holly" and "Ivy" was one of the major pastimes on Pancake Day as early as the fourteenth century. Boys from the ages of five to 18 constructed a lifelike effigy of holly, while girls of the same ages made a dummy of ivy. Both "Holly" and "Ivy" were hidden early on Pancake Day, and the goal of each group was to find the other's dummy and burn it. It is believed that the custom originated as a symbol that the yuletide season of merrymaking was ending. Old-fashioned Pancake Day bore much of the prankish flavor of a smalltown Halloween. Men, women and children, dressed in outlandish costumes, carried their pranks out all over the town.

Pancake Jingles

An old writer testifies, "Some run about the streets attired like monks, and some like kings, accompanied with pomp and guard and other stately things; some like wild beasts do run abroad in skins that divers be arrayed, and eke with loathsome shapes that dreadful are to see; they counterfeit both bears and wolves and lions fierce in sight, and raging bulls.

These festives in England and many parts of Europe also led to a barrage of Pancake Day jingles. One of the most popular comes to us from Shropshire:

"Shrove Tuesday, Shrove Tuesday,
Poor Jack went to plow,
His mother made pancakes,
She scarcely knew how;
She tossed them, she turned them,
She made them so black,
With soot from the chimney
That poisoned poor Jack."

And there is another fifteenth century jingle that is often quoted today:

"Great 'A', little 'a'
Today is Pancake Day!
Toss the ball high,
Throw the ball low,
Those that come after
May sing high-ho!"

As Pancake Day celebrations became increasingly popular in all parts of the world, they ranged in tempo from the friendly international race between the women of Olney, England, and Liberal, Kansas, to such riotous celebrations as the "Mardi Gras" in New Orleans and a similar celebration in Argentina. A news item from Argentina last year reported that the Pancake Day celebration resulted in 23 dead and 3,844 injured.

A Public Holiday

Elsewhere in the world, Pancake Day is a public holiday in Africa, many other countries of South America, French Guiana, Miquelon, and the South Seas.

Pancake Day celebrations in the United States and Canada are typified by pancake breakfasts, luncheons, and supper conducted by civic, social, and church groups.

Highlight of all 1950 Pancake Day celebrations was the first running of the International Pancake Day Race. Miss Florence Callow, of Olney, was the winner. She defeated the American winner, Mrs. Dale Warden, by some seven seconds, over the 415-yard course.

Housewives of Liberal made plans for the second annual race long in advance of the event, determined to bring the engraved silver griddle, symbol of international championship, back to the United States.

Pancake Day Dates Back 1,000 Years

With a tradition that traces back at least 1,000 years, it appears likely that Pancake Day may grow in popularity in this country. It could eventually become a national holiday. Pancake Day is a traditional pre-Lenten celebration in many parts of the world today. The international race this year will receive a great deal of notice in English newspapers since the British government feels that in times like these, the race is an outstanding example of international goodwill and amity.

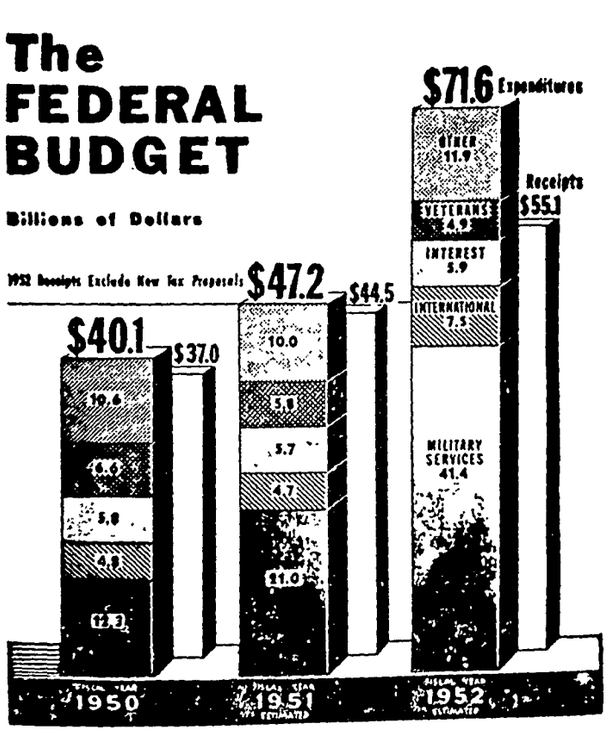
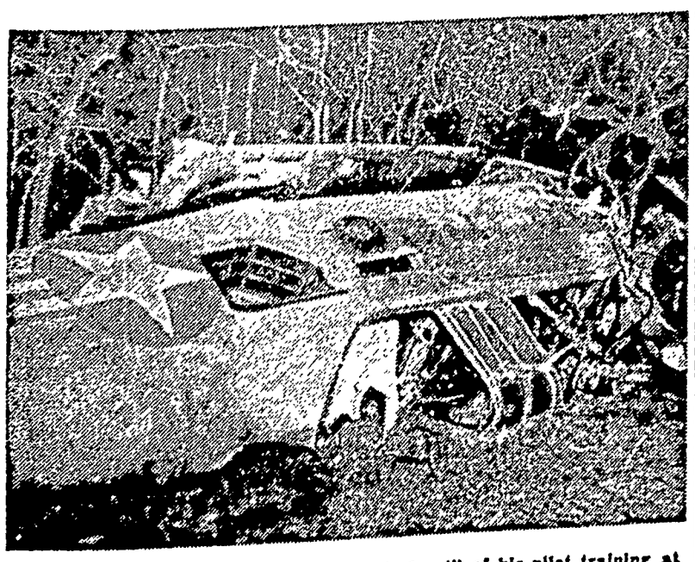
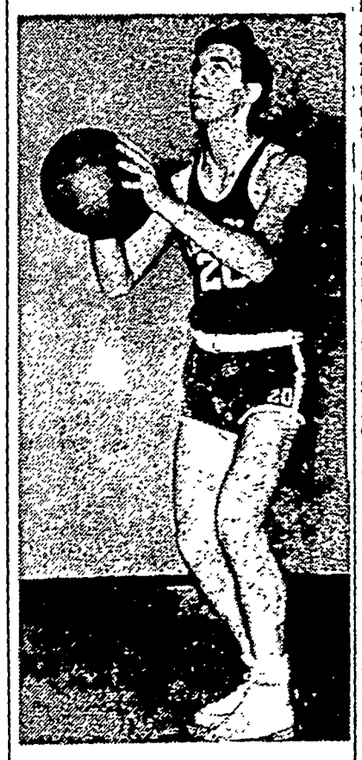
FRENCH REDS RE-ACT TO EISENHOWER . . . Simultaneously with the arrival of General Eisenhower in Paris, the French Communists went into action, defacing buildings with their posters of propaganda. This one reads, "Down with German rearmament. Let us unite against the traitors who accepted. Let us defend France." The poster shows a German soldier straddling French graves in the shadow of smoking ruins of French cities. General Eisenhower held talks with French leaders on the organization of a western European defense force in a conference with President Vincent Auriol at Elysee Palace.



NEW BUDGET AND OLD . . . President Truman in his budget message forecast expenditures of $71,594,000,000 for coming fiscal year, or $468 for every man, woman and child in the country. Of the total, more than $41 billion will go for military services, or three and one-half times the amount spent in the last fiscal year. The higher outlays reflect the cost of the rearmament program. The diagram above shows how the budget for 1952 compares with those of previous years.



CADET SOLOS TO DEATH . . . "Washed out" of his pilot training at Randolph Field, Tex., French aviation cadet Jean le Mitouard, Tangier, son of a French surgeon, took his flunking so hard that he took off in a plane from the field and sought death in the skies. He went into a death dive 120 miles from the field after other pilots tried to "talk him down." Before going into his death dive, he apologized to the United States government for wrecking the plane (shown above).



OWL WITHOUT A VOWEL . . . New whiz, Bill Mikvy, Temple basketeer, is scorching the nets with an average of nearly 30 points per game. Known as the "Owl without a vowel in his name," he hit 354 in 12 games.

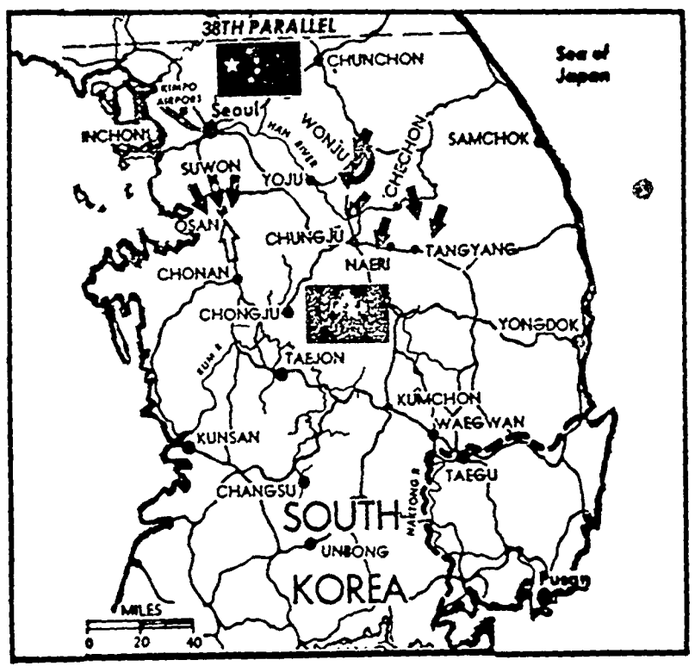
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Brunt of New Tax Program Likely To Fall on Lower Income Groups; Korean Evacuation Debate Rages

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



Bitter battles raged in Korea as North Korean and Chinese Communist troops continued pressure all along the line. United Nations forces retreated slowly toward the Pusan beachhead (dotted line) and what seemed possible evacuation of that war-torn country.

TAXES:

Era of Austerity

President Truman drew gasps from Wall street in his message to congress in which he asked an increase in taxes of "more" than $8 billion a year and outlined a defense program totaling $140 billion

He also called for broader wage-price controls, one million more men and women in the armed forces within a few months, and four million more in defense production by the end of 1951.

But what made the little man want to crawl into a hole was the President's tax program. The brunt of that increase would fall on the middle-to-lower income taxpayer.

Some of Mr. Truman's critics said his program would mean an era of austerity for the American people. Some said they thought the President was "hysterical" and others said he had thrown the American standard of living out the window.

Although the nation was shocked by the President's message, Americans in every walk of life were beginning to understand the scope of the program we have undertaken. Most people realized to carry out that program a great increase in taxes would be necessary—possibly the highest in United States history.

It became increasingly clear, too, that such items as automobiles, electric refrigerators, vacuum cleaners, television and radio sets will not be available in such abundance to the American public as in recent years Production of these items may be cut by one-third to well over one-half before the year is over.

By the end of 1951 the United States will be devoting about 18 per cent of its national output to defense. At the peak of World War II about 45 per cent of the nation's output was for defense.

CIVIL DEFENSE:

Truman Signs Bill

President Truman signed the civilian defense bill enacted in the closing days of the last congress which provides a defense program estimated to cost about $3,100,000,000.

The measure directs the federal governments to provide leadership to the states and communities in developing arrangements to protect civilian life and property in the country's 10 critical target areas against possible enemy attack by atomic bombs, biological or bacteriological warfare or any other technique.

The bill requires states to match federal funds provided for air raid constructions. It was o.. this point that the bill received some criticism.

Governor Dewey of New York, for instance, said his state simply could not find the $249,000,000 indicated as its need.

Civilian defense is the one phase of all-out war in which this country lags. Britain has added to bomb shelters built during World War II and has an extensive training program for rescue in the event of atomic attack.

Poster Boy

Twelve-year-old Robert Lawrence "Larry" McKenzie, Jr., 1951 March of Dimes poster boy, proudly displays President Truman's autograph. The boy visited the chief executive on the opening day of the nationwide drive for funds to finance the National Infantile Paralysis Foundation.

KOREA:

Evacuation Inevitable

Bitter battles raged in Korea as United Nations forces continued their retreat toward Pusan and what seemed inevitable evacuation of that war-torn country.

And while the battles raged in Korea, bitter debate continued in Washington as to whether or not U N. forces should evacuate the peninsula. There were rumors in military circles, too, that the U.S. had decided on a stand in Korea.

To the average man in the United States, to the people in the home towns of America, who are anything but defeatists, the Washington debates seemed ironic. The average American was counting the odds, estimated now at five to one, and which the Chinese can increase at will. In recent weeks there has been considerable confusion and a number of contradictions as to the actual number of Chinese troops thrown against U.N. forces.

To many the question now seemed to be whether or not U.N troops could successfully withdraw to the Pusan beachhead and carry out an evacuation. The situation was described like this. Now it's a question of saving face or saving our hides—and we'd better save our hides We'll need them in the future against the Communists.

The United States army in Korea is the only one this nation has at present and it must form the core of the new army we have dedicated ourselves to building in an effort to preserve our democratic way of life Attempting to hold in Korea would risk this army—too great a risk in the opinion of many observers.

Whatever the decision, one thing the average American will tell the world: Man-for-man, the North Korean and Chinese soldier is no match for a well trained American soldier. And any victory in Korea will cost the North Koreans and Chinese dearly.

AMERICAN AGRICULTURE

Farm Efficiency and Assets at Peak

The department of agriculture estimated American agriculture's total assets at the beginning of 1951 at $134 billion, two and one-half times the total of a decade ago. Much of it represented gains in tangible possessions and in cash savings.

At the beginning of this year, farmers as a group held nearly $22 billions in bank deposits, currency, U.S. savings bonds, and investments in cooperatives. This was more than four times the total of such liquid assets held by farmers at the start of 1940.

Aggregate farm debt at the beginning of 1951 was estimated at just under $13 billion, as against $10 billion on January 1, 1940. All of this increase has been in the nonreal estate category.

POLITICS:

Matter of Tradition

Critics of President Truman's foreign policy, led by Sen. Robert Taft of Ohio, charged the President "violated the laws and the constitution of the United States" by sending troops to Korea and Europe without congressional approval.

In the last few weeks the thunder of debate on the subject has rolled through the halls of congress. It is not, however, a new theme.

The issue of the President's right to send troops to carry out obligations of the country arose in the administrations of Washington, John Adams, Jefferson, Jackson, Tyler, Polk, Lincoln, Grant, McKinley, Taft, Wilson and the late Franklin Roosevelt.

And in every case the issue was settled in favor of the President, namely, that it is his sworn duty to carry out the obligations of the United States.

In this particular case, when the senate ratified the North Atlantic treaty it made the obligations of that treaty law, binding on the President of the United States no matter who he might be. Certain articles of the treaty bind the North Atlantic nations to united effort to maintain the security of the North Atlantic area, including the use of armed force if necessary.

It is these articles of the treaty that the President is upholding in sending troops to Europe. If the congress should deny the President the right to use troops or arms abroad, then certain articles of the treaty become meaningless.

In the few cases where similar questions have reached the Supreme Court, the President has been upheld in his action. It would seem that Senator Taft's attack, therefore, can not succeed in the face of tradition.

CROPS:

Prospects Not Bright

The agriculture department reported 1951 crop prospects not so bright as they might be for attaining the government's goal of a record harvest.

Shortages of soil moisture in important southwestern wheat areas, prospects of less irrigation water from snows, freeze damage to fall-sown grain crops in the south, loss of farm labor to the armed services and industry, and the prospects of shortages of repair parts for farm machinery were listed as having an effect on production.

The farmers of the nation face a production quota greater than any ever demanded in this country Increased grain production is needed to rebuild surpluses which have dwindled in the last two years. In addition to rebuilding surpluses, the United States must again assume the responsibility of feeding much of the world if open conflict breaks out between the east and west.

ARMED FORCES:

Goal Increased 260,000

Mrs. Anna M. Rosenberg, assistant to Secretary of Defense Marshall, told the armed services subcommittee that the goal of the nation's fighting forces had been increased 260,000 by June 30.

The armed forces had been working on a program of 3,200,000 by June 30.

Army, navy, air force, and marine officials urged the drafting of 18 year olds Unless the draft age is lowered, Mrs. Rosenberg said married men and fathers, and possibly some veterans, would have to be drafted to meet the expanded quota

Meanwhile, the FBI reported it had investigated nearly 9,000 cases of alleged violations of the draft law during the last six months. The bureau was reportedly receiving more than 2,200 such cases for inquiry every month.

More Men

Mrs. Anna M. Rosenberg, assistant defense secretary in charge of manpower, told a senate armed services subcommittee that President Truman had increased the goal for the armed services from 3,200,000 to 3,462,205 men by June 30. She said the increase would require the drafting of 18 year olds.

BUILDING:

Thirty Day Freeze

The government clamped down on the construction of new commercial buildings, prohibiting the starting of virtually all such new projects until February 15.

After the freeze period, each private new commercial building project must be submitted to the national production authority for approval. The NPA said the ban was necessary to save materials for mobilization.

Eugene Johnson, Emily Johnson and Carl Swearingen all of Marshalltown were week end guests at the Mrs. Henry Medaus home.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Elder drove to Ames Saturday for several days visit with their son and family, Mr. Clarence Elder.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Larsen visited with Mr. and Mrs. Nick Ell at Belmond Sunday. Mr. Ell had returned home from the hospital last Wednesday and is getting along fine.

Mrs. Sumner Trumbell underwent an operation a week ago Monday at the Mercy hospital at Mason City. She is expected to return home Thursday or Friday of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson Sr. returned home Monday afternoon from a two weeks vacation trip to Texas and New Mexico. They enjoyed their trip until the cold weather hit the south, and there it was really cold. They visited the past week with Juanita's sister and husband in Carlsbad, and with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Vaughter of Amherst, Texas.

Dubuque's Shot Tower

Ever see the old shot tower at Dubuque?

"It wasn't built in time to fire the shot heard 'round the world," says Grampaw Jim, "but it made many a shot heard in the Civil War."

With that famous, old tower Julien Dubuque started Iowa's first industry. But, how things have changed!

Today, Iowa industry ranks with farming in producing wealth for our people. What a difference if Iowa were ALL industry, or ALL farming! None of us would be as well off. It's the BALANCE that makes us prosperous.

And it's the balanced thinking in our way of life that makes us a happy people. Whether a man likes farming or office work, enjoys coffee or a temperate glass of beer, goes in for fishing or golfing as a hobby . . . we have them all in Iowa, and we recognize each man's right to his choice.

Yes, Iowa's broad-minded approach to things make a formula for fine living that's hard to beat.

45 Head of Gilts & Tried Sows

Style Queen, Selling as No. 1 Gilt

Monday, Feb. 12, 1951

1:00 O'CLOCK P. M.

This offering has been fed along with the gilts we will keep in our own herd. They have been fed bran, alfalfa meal, a complex mineral, a supplement, along with farm grains. Only a limited amount of corn has been fed. They have had lots of room and have had to walk for their feed. Everything has been done for the future usefulness of these gilts and sows.

The bulk of the offering is sired by our great herd sires, Swankee, The Marquis, and the Nobleman. Services to two of our great young boars are available, along with some to the great sire, The Marquis. Consider these matings before you select your feature litter for 1951.

Local Girl Chosen To Tour For Six Months In Europe

LOIS HUENEMAN CHOSEN AS INTERNATIONAL YOUTH EXCHANGE

Lois Hueneman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vic Hueneman north of Klemme on U. S. Highway 69, was chosen to represent Iowa as the International Youth Exchange to go to Europe this year. This announcement was made by The Iowa State College Extension Office this week.

Lois will leave for Europe the first part of June and will be gone for six months. The Country to which she will be sent will be decided upon later.

Lois will represent the 4-H clubs and Rural Youth Groups in Iowa who sponsor sending two people each year.

Richard Loman of Winneshiek County was selected as the boy to represent Iowa on the same program.

At present Lois is teaching school in Liberty No. 8. She was a 4-H member in Hancock County for six years and was County 4-H Secretary during one year of that time. She is the secretary of the Hancock County Rural Youth Group this year and is an active member in the Hancock County Rural Women's Chorus.

Lois represented Hancock Co. Rural Youth People at the State Talk Meet in Des Moines in November and was placed second in the State Meet.

Other organizations that Lois is active in includes Church Choir, Iowa State Educational Association and Hancock County Educational Council.

HANCOCK CO. DHIA ELECTS LOREN ABELE PRESIDENT FOR 1951

The members of the Hancock County Dairy Herd Improvement Association elected Loren Abele president, Fern Huling vice-president, Everett Sheets secretary-treasurer, E. A. Christensen and Cecil Katter directors at the Annual meeting of their association Thursday noon, February 8th at Hull's Cafe.

Mitchell Bock, retiring president, showed pictures of a DHIA picnic and a trip his family made to Florida.

Paul Henderson, County Extension Director, was called on for some timely remarks on feeding and management of Dairy Cattle. He also pointed out the necessity of arranging the Dairy chores to save time and labor.

The Association can use a few new members when they start their new year March 1st, 1951.

HANCOCK SHOWS MONEY ON HAND

Hancock County Supervisors recently approved the semi-annual report of Hancock County Treasurer, Roy L. McMillin. The report covers the period from May 31, 1950, to December 31, 1950, and lists receipts totaling $1,518,987.54 and a balance on hand in all funds as of Dec. 31 in the sum of $561,660.89.

Some of the larger expenditures listed in the report are county auditor's warrants in all funds, $369,078.49; warrants to school treasurers, $225,401.38; and cites and towns, $31,406.02. The report also lists homestead credits totaling $65,936.00.

HELLO FOLKS

JEAN KURTZ MARRIED TO THOMAS O'DONNELL

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Jean Kurtz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mike Kurtz of Goodell, and Thomas O'Donnell, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. E. O'Donnell of Frederic, Wis., on Jan. 20th, at 9:30 a. m. at St. Francis Church. Rev. R. A. Ormsby officiaed at the single-ring ceremony.

Attending the couple were Mr. and Mrs. Ralph O'Donnell brother and sister-in-law of the groom.

The bride wore a navy blue gabardine suit with blue accessories and carried a corsage. The groom wore a blue tweed suit.

Following the ceremony a wedding dinner was held at the Kurtz home for the immediate relatives and that evening a wedding dance honored the couple at the Ventura community hall.

After a short trip to the home of the groom's parents at Frederic, Wis., Mr. and Mrs. O'Donnell are making their home in Belmond.

Mrs. O'Donnell, a registered nurse, has been on the local hospital staff since Dec. 1 and has returned to that position. Mr. O'Donnell is employed on the Alfred Goll farm near Garner.

FAMILY CHURCH NIGHTS

A series of five Family Church Night Programs has been planned for successive Sunday evenings in the Klemme Methodist Church, beginning next Sunday, February 18th. There will be a pot-luck supper at 6 o'clock, followed by a period of study. There will be classes for adults and the various children's age groups. The adults will study the story of the church as portrayed in a study booklet "Endless Line of Splendour," and a membership manual "I Join the Church." Youth groups will meet in their regular Sunday evening sessions during the study period.

Following the study period there will be a motion picture of interest to all age groups. The evening's program will conclude with a brief worship service and inspirational message by the Rev. C. H. Pettersen, pastor of the Methodist Church at Forest City. The program will follow this general pattern throughout the series.

Hostesses will be assigned for the supper tables and will have the responsibility of inviting guests for their tables for the evening assigned them. Preliminary plans call for hostesses from each of the five circles of the Klemme Woman's Society on successive Sunday nights. Families failing to receive specific invitations for any given Sunday evening are urged to attend, as extra space and food will be available.

REPORT ON POLIO DRIVE

Mrs. Amos Hanson, of Goodell, chairman of the polio drive in Avery township, entertained the women who solicited. They brought in the funds totaling $463.05 to date. Mrs. Donald Burk, chairman of Twin Lake Township, reports $273 with 2 districts yet to come in.

Mrs. Emma Christie's Birthday Honored With Dinner Sun.

Mrs. Emma Christie's birthday was honored with a dinner Sunday at the home of Mrs. Frank Sandry. Guests brought well filled baskets of food for the dinner. Those present were:

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Busse, Mrs. Herb Greiman, Mrs. Edna Thada, Mrs. Frances Swalve, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Josten, and Mr. and Mrs. Dave Schwichtenberg. All had a fine time.

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

Ideas are worth a lot in this day and age. Rewards to people who can come up with good, sound, workable ideas.

Ideas are needed in the field of safety, just as they are in business and industry and the armed forces. Ideas which can help promote safer living are always valuable and always in demand.

So, your Iowa Safety Congress is sponsoring a "Safety Poster Idea Contest" for all Iowa school children.

It's a contest with several purposes. First, of course, the winners will furnish ideas for future "Safety Sake" poster messages. Second, the contest will help create a feeling of safety consciousness in the boys and girls taking part. And third, it will be a "grass-roots" report on the nature of safety problems existing in Iowa.

A total of $1,000 in cash, savings bonds and merchandise awards will be divided among 318 winners—21 in each of 13 districts plus 45 state-level awards.

All Iowa school children—public, private and parochial—are eligible to enter. They can get complete rules and regulations from their teachers.

Editor's Texas Trip Notes

KLEMME WELL REPRESENTED IN THE RIO GRANDE VALLEY

Editor And Wife Spent 5 Days In Fruitful Valley

Mrs. Jorgenson and myself are back in Klemme after a short two weeks of vacationing in the south and sounthwest. I will write a few articles that may be of interest to our readers, and at this time I will tell about the "Klemme Community" in the Rio Grande Valley of Texas.

I will briefly mention that our tour covered some over 3,500 miles and we just about circumnavigated the great State of Texas, driving down near the east side into the valley, then northwest along the Rio Grande and north to Carlsbad, New Mexico, and again heading north and east into the Panhandle of Texas and on again northeast into Oklahoma and through Kansas.

Our headquarters in the Valley was at Pharr, Texas, adjacent to and almost a part of McAllen. At Pharr we shared an apartment at the SunDeck Motel with Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Chapman of Kansas City, who had already spent a few weeks in the Valley and would later leave for California.

The first night we were at Pharr we drove to Mr. and Mrs. James Matherson's new home at McAllen. Mrs. Matherson is the former Maxine Bachman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Bachman. We enjoyed a nice visit with Maxine, her husband and little Stevie. They have a nice home in a new residential district in McAllen and were well and happy.

Not Many Home At Brownsville

As there were a number of Klemme people further down in the Valley we struck out for Brownsville and on the way stopped at San Benito to see Mr. and Mrs. Tom Roths. We did not have any luck seeing them, but visited for a brief time with the lady at their bakery, who informed us that Mr. and Mrs. Roths had left only a few minutes earlier. We then drove out to where they and Mr. and Mrs. Rank Buss live, but none were at home.

We then drove on to Brownsville and had no trouble locating the J. M. Neuberger butane store on Boca Chico Blvd. This is the real "Klemme Community' at Brownsville as here live J. M. Neuberger and family, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Ax, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Blumer, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Neuberger and Mrs. Wm. Ax and Erwin, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Van Buskirk were also living there for a vacation. Of all those Klemme people only Mrs. J. M. Neuberger and Mrs. Wm. Ax and son Erwin, who live with the Neubergers, were at home. But we did enjoy a good visit with Mrs. J. M. Neuberger, Mrs. Ax and Erwin.

Mr. Neuberger has a nice Butane gas business and employs several people. Mr. and Mrs. Neuberger have built a beautiful home, nicely arranged and finished largely in knotty pine. A few doors east is Mr. and Mrs. Emil Blumer's nice home built a couple of years ago. Mrs. Wm. Ax also owns a home near the Neubergers which she rents out throughout the year:

When the J. M. Neubergers went to Brownsville a few years ago because of Mr. Neuberger's ill health, they purchased a 12 acre tract of citrus fruit trees, where they now have their business and home. The heavy freeze of two years ago killed all the trees so they are now laying the tract out into lots and expect to build a number of houses which they will in turn sell. They are located in a nice section in the outskirts of the city near a large airport. They have a good business and John has recovered his health and all are happy.

We were sorry that we did not get to see all of these people from up around Klemme, but some were out sight-seeing and others were looking after business. We hope for better luck next time.

Also spending a vacation in the "Klemme Community" were Mr. and Mrs. Paul Van Buskirk of Klemme and Mr. and Mrs. Henry of Ventura. A few days previous Mr. and Mrs. Edmund K. Josten and daughter of Klemme had visited the Klemme folks there.

After we left the Valley a "big freeze" hit all of Texas and no doubt thousands of acres of fruit trees and vegetable fields were destroyed. Some orchards were hit two years ago, some damaged by frost this year in December and with this hard freeze again a lot of people in the Valley will be broke.

I expect to write several articles for future issues of the Times telling of some of the interesting things I have seen in the South and Southwest.

Upon Hanson's plea of guilty he was fined $100 for each pheasant violation and $100 on the gun offense. Fifty dollars was suspended on the gun violation.

JOE FINNEGAN SELLS HIS BUSINNES HERE TO MAN FROM COLLINS

Fred Aegerter Will Take Over Pool Room About Feb. 20th

Last week Mr. and Mrs. Joe Finnegan completed a business deal whereby they sold their pool room and beer parlor business to Fred Aegeter of Collins, Iowa. Mr. Aegerter will take possession of the business about February 20th.

Joe Finnegan and family came to Klemme about three years ago and started the pool hall and beer parlor business here. They have built up a nice business and have always conducted a good, clean place of amusement. Mr. and Mrs. Finnegan have nothing definite in mind for the future but expect to remain in Klemme until after school is out.

Mr. Aegeter has the appearance of being a fine man, is single, and has been engaged in resturant business.

SEEK BIDS FOR ROAD SURFACE

Sealed bids will be received by the Iowa Highway commission at its office in Ames up to 9 a. m. on February 20, 1951 for road improvements in Hancock County namely:

On relocation of U. S. 18 from U. S. 69 near Garner easterly to Cerro Gordo county line: 5.488 miles of paving; certified check $12,000.

On Iowa 111 from Britt via Crystal Lake to Woden: 14.944 miles stabilized base and single course bituminous surface treatment; certified check $16,000.

The highway from Garner east to the Cerro Gordo county line is a new cutoff for highway U. S. 18 and starts where the pavement from highway 69 crosses the Milwaukee west of Garner and runs easterly on the north side of the Milwaukee railroad. Contracts for the grading and building of culverts were let previously.

Highway 111 from Britt to Woden was widened, culverts and bridges put in and a new stretch of roadway established from the Methodist Church corner at Crystal Lake north and west along the shore of the lake. This road runs directly west from there to a point a short distance south of Woden, thence north to Woden.

Delegations from Britt, Woden and Crystal Lake have been working on this improvement lately.

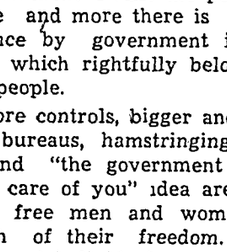
County Sportsmen Organize Izaak Walton League

LINCOLN SAID IT



This week we celebrated the birthday of one of the greatest Americans of history—Abraham Lincoln, the founder of the Republican party.

President Lincoln's philosophy of government, expressed so understandably in his Gettysburg address, when he said that "government of the people, by the people and for the people shall not perish from this earth," is needed more today than ever before.

Under the administration now in power in Washington much of that concept of free government is being constantly threatened. There is a determination to substitute a philosophy of "government OVER the people." More and more there is interference by government in affairs which rightfully belong to the people.

More controls, bigger and bigger bureaus, hamstringing taxes and "the government will take care of you" idea are robbing free men and women of much of their freedom. The rights of individuals are threatened by those who would make the government all powerful as more and more power is granted through the ruse of emergency legislation.

Lincoln once said: "The legitimate object of government is to do for a community of people whatever they need to have done, but cannot do at all, or so well do, for themselves, in their separate and individual capacities. In all that the people can individually do as well for themselves, the government ought not to interfere."

In Washington today that philosophy has been supplanted by one that proposes more government interference, more government control, more government this and more government that.

Lincoln said on another occasion, in a day when the national budget was not balanced and a national debt resulted that "Coming expenditures must be met, at the present the debt must be paid; and money cannot always be borrowed for these objects. As an individual who undertakes to live by borrowing soon finds his original means devoured by interest, and next, no one left to borrow from; so must it be with a government."

Today, in Washington, that sound business philosophy has been supplanted by the deficit spenders, those who advocate "tax and tax, spend and spend," those who have continued irresponsible fiscal policies, those who advocate that burgets cannot be balanced and there is no fear of huge national debt. But the national debt continues to rise, there is no effort to balance the budget and more and more the economy of the nation is being milked dry by excessive taxation.

We need to get back to Lincoln's concept of "government by the people" rather than by executive order and presidential decree. We need to get back to sound money policies. We need more business in government and less government in business. Perhaps never in recent history have we needed more Lincolnesque governmnet.

Drained land does not cause drouth.

PLAN TO ORGANIZE UNIT IN EACH TOWN

Britt Sportsmen Will Serve Lunch After Meeting

The Sportsmen of Hancock County are organizing a county wide Izaak Walton league and it is hoped that all men interested in the conservation of our natural resources in the county, state and nation will attend a meeting at Britt on Tuesday, February 20th. The meeting will be held at 8.00 p. m. at the Britt Memorial Hall.

It is the plan that there be a county wide organization composed of a unit in each individual town, with the meetings rotating to each community.

Nearly forty men from Hancock County attended a sectional meeting of the Iowa Division of the Izaak Walton League held in Clarion on February 5th. It was at this meeting that plans were laid for our county to have a League organized.

Hugh Gildner, District Director of the State Chapter will be present to explain the principals of the league and to guide the organization of the Hancock Chapter.

The State Chapter is furnishing a film of the Quetico-Superior National Park Wilderness Canoe trip. This area incidently is one of the areas saved from commercial interests, both timber and resorts through the efforts of the Izaak Walton League.

The Britt Sportmans Club will serve a lunch at the meeting and are to be commended on this fine show of friendliness to the sportsmen of Hancock County.

It is hoped that this will be a big meeting since men from every town in the county have indicated their desire to have a county wide organization. It was interesting to note that about fifty percent of the men showing interest in the league were farmers. And certainly all people both town and country are urged to attend the meeing. This is the best place to start a good farmer-sportsman relationship.

BY RAY EASTMAN

Harry opened the front door and gingerly stepped out.

"Watch your step, Louise," he said. His wife held out her hand. "Funny thing, these steps still have ice all over 'em, and everything else's been thawing all day. Must be because they're in the shade on the north side of the house."

They climbed into the car, and Harry started it. The car slid a little as he backed out. Ice on the driveway, too, he thought.

"Well, at least the highways will be clear," said Harry. "It's a hundred and twenty miles to Des Moines. On a beautiful day like this, we ought to make it in three, three and a half hours."

Louise smiled. "It's a long time, too, since we went to Des Moines."

Yes, it had been a long time. Harry had forgotten all about the curve that skirted the big wooded hill.

It wasn't much of a curve, but it was covered with ice. The hill and the trees kept the sun off it, just as Harry's house kept the sun off his front steps.

Harry wasn't ready for the ice on the highway, as he was for the ice on his front steps. When the car hit the ice, he hit the brakes, and the car rolled.

Harry and Louise got to Des Moines, all right. But they finished the trip in an ambulance.

SCRIPTURE: Mark 7.24—9:1. DEVOTIONAL READING: Hebrews 1:1-9.

Jesus is Christ

Lesson for February 18, 1951

IT SOUNDS odd to modern ears (or to any ear for the past 18 centuries) to say that Jesus "is" Christ. It sounds like saying Abraham is Lincoln, or Winston is Churchill. "Jesus Christ" has become long since a proper name like any other combination of name and surname. But in the early days of Christianity it took sermons to persuade people that Jesus was, indeed the Christ; and if people knew what "Christ" means, they would see that most sermons today are really aimed at convincing people of the same thing: Jesus is Christ. When Peter said to Jesus "You are the Christ," Jesus' reply shows that Peter had not only said something important, but something which up to that time had not dawned on any one else.

Only One Christ

WE shall have to think what the word "Christ" meant as Peter used the word and as Jesus understood it. The Jews of that time were looking with eager excitement for an "anointed one" (the literal meaning of Christ, or Messiah) who would put an end to all the evil of the world and usher in God's New Age. They were not quite clear how this would be done, but they were sure that only the Christ could do it.

Consider three points. First, when Peter said "You are Christ" he meant "You are unique." No Jew looked for two Christs. There is no one else in Jesus' class, there is only one of him. Every human being, to be sure, is different from all others; but Simon Peter did not mean that. What he did mean was that Jesus could not be classed as "a" teacher or "a" prophet or "a" man of God. He was the Teacher and Prophet. He was God's Man as no other man was.

We make a mistake, we get away from the original Christian faith, the faith which Jesus praised, when we put Jesus on the same level with other men, any other men. There is only one Christ.

God Was in Christ

IN the second place, when Peter called Jesus "Christ" he meant that God had anointed him. He was not a man who took a notion to do what he did; he was one whom God had appointed to be and to do as God willed. We cannot understand Jesus apart from God, for his source is God

Any one who reads the gospel of John will find this very prominent in Jesus' thinking always: "I was sent . . . My meat is to do the will of him that sent me."

Christians later than this saw that the relation between God and Jesus was even closer than that between sender and sent. Jesus is called the Son of God, he is called the Word that was with God and was God. Paul says God was in Christ.

Later generations would develop the doctrine of the Trinity as it is expressed (for instance) in the Nicene Creed Every century has its own formulas Peter in the first century does not use the language of the fourth century, still less of the 20th; but all the formulas express in various ways the conviction Peter had: that when Christ confronts us, God confronts us.

Christ Is Lord of All

A THIRD thing Peter meant when he called Jesus "Christ" and that the church means now—is that he has complete authority. All other authority, in the church or out of it, is less than his.

A word often used to express this truth is "Lord." But the word alone is not enough. It really makes less difference what words we use about Jesus than what our attitude to him is. Jesus himself once spoke sternly of people who call him "Lord, Lord," but do not do the things he says to do.

It is one thing to say, in the Creed, that we believe in "Jesus Christ, his only Son, our Lord;" it is another thing to carry that part of the creed into life. Jesus is our Lord; not the church, not Moses, not Paul, not any hero or saint of the church, but Jesus. Christians take orders from him first of all for we believe that his mind was the mind of God.

A Christian profession of faith therefore, is more than a statement of belief; it is an oath of allegiance

AROUND THE HOUSE

Paste moleskin on the bottom of heavy ornaments and flower pots to prevent scratches on table tops. Old felt hats can be cut up, and the pieces used for the same purpose.

To prevent mattresses from picking up rust marks from the springs, give the springs a coat of paint when the original paint shows signs of wearing thin.

Ivory objects, all in one piece, can be safely cleaned with soap and water. If several pieces are glued together, though, better take a piece of raw lemon, dip it in salt and rub the surface with it Let the juice dry on the ivory before you wipe it off with a damp cloth.

When a miror breaks you may have seven years' bad luck but you can also have several attractive things to put under vases and bowls if you get a glazier to cut the unbroken portions of the mirror into squares and bevel the edges.

A wet, gooey paste of laundry starch and water can be used to clean plaster of paris statuary Just smear the paste all over every part of the surface until the whole thing looks like such a mess you wish you hadn't started it in the first place. Then forget it until the starch paste is completely dry. After you think it's dry wait another half hour just to make sure, and brush the dry stuff off.

For marble objects, whip up a strong solution of sal soda and combine that with fuller's earth. Coat the marble with this paste, and let it stay at least twenty-four hours before removing it.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

An Open Mind Is Necessary

By Lawrence Gould

Does travel "broaden the mind"?

Answer: That depends on two things: the extent to which your mind is "open," and whether you travel of your own choice or because you have to. If you're willing to admit that your ideas and ways of doing things are not the only "right" ones, visiting foreign countries may be a liberal education, but if the very word "foreign" means inferior or barbarous to you, you might as well stay at home. And of course, if you are torn away from home against your will, you'll tend to see only the worst side of the country you are sent to.

Is psychotherapy a science?

Answer: Not yet, anyhow, writes Dr. I. Atkin in the American Journal of Psychotherapy. While based upon scientific research, the practice of helping people overcome emotional disturbances through an exclusive mental approach (i.e., by listening and talking to them) is still an art in which no system of fixed rules can be consistently followed, and in which the therapist's personality is as important as his training. It is this "intangible quality" that makes psychotherapy hard for "pure scientists" to accept.

Can high-pitched sounds harm your ears?

Answer: Apparently not, say a group of ear specialists in the Annals of Otology, St. Louis. The idea that sounds too high-pitched to be heard—for instance, those of the inaudible whistle sometimes used for calling dogs, whose ears are more acute than those of humans—may be dangerous to human hearing seems unfounded. As long as supersonic vibrations are airborne, with no physical contact, they have no specific effect on the sense-organs or the nervous system. It is sounds that are too loud, whatever their pitch, that do damage.

LOOKING AT RELIGION

THE WORD "CORN" WAS USED AS A GENERAL NAME FOR GRAIN OF ALL KINDS KNOWN TO THE JEWS OF THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENT DAYS. IT INCLUDED PEAS AND BEANS, BUT NEVER INDIAN CORN—MAIZE—WHICH WAS UNKNOWN TO THE HEBREWS. PALESTINE PRODUCED LARGE QUANTITIES OF GRAIN.

KEEPING HEALTHY

How to Care for Chronic Illness

By Dr. James W. Barton

NURSING HOMES, those which are carefully inspected by community health departments, fill a need in the lives of our elderly men and women and certainly relieve our general hospitals from some of the overcrowding that exists.

The fact that a graduate nurse resides in or is in charge of these nursing homes, and a physician visits them regularly, likewise takes some of the strain off general hospitals and insures reasonable care for the elderly and those chronically ill.

That nursing homes are of great help to the chronically ill, those that are never well yet have none of the specific diseases that require skilled and constant attention, is now admitted and home care under the supervision of a nearby general hospital physician gives a service that is equal or nearly equal to actual care in hospital.

What is chronic illness?

An editorial in the Journal of the American Medical Association defines it as any deviation or departure from health that affects a person's total life pattern in a significant way, because of the length of the illness and its effects, which may last for a long time after the illness proper has passed.

We can readily see that prolonged illness not only requires the medical knowledge and skill of the practicing physician but also his help in the patient's reestablishment of himself in everday life.

For a long time practitioners have met difficulties in finding proper hospital facilities for their chronically ill patients and have observed the lack of adequate visiting nurses, housekeeping and other services by which patients might be cared for, and the inadequacy of many nursing homes.

This need is being met to some extent by the Commission of Chronic Illness, founded in 1949 by the American Medical Association, American Hospital Association, American Public Health Association, and the American Public Welfare Association.

Tasty Chicken Dishes Enhanced by Proper Use of Seasonings

A FREQUENT meat appearing on menus is chicken because it's versatile and delicate flavor are a favorite with most. Even though you serve chicken frequently, you can have unlimited ways in which it's brought to the table.

High in protein, rich in iron and phosphorus and valuable for it's vitamins, chicken can be served to both adults and children. You may have it in simple fricasee form with dumplings, an old-fashioned favorite, or baked or barbecued, as something special when you entertain.

HERE'S A NEW portrait of a tried and true favorite that you can easily duplicate with this simple recipe:

Chicken Pot Pie
(Serves 6)

1 four pound fricassee chicken
½ pound salt pork
Water or stock
Salt and pepper
Dumplings

Cut chicken into convenient pieces for serving and dice the pork. Place together in a good-sized saucepan, cover with water or stock and bring to boiling point; cover closely and simmer from one to two hours depending on the age of the chicken, seasoning when about half done Thirty minutes before serving time put in dumplings and be sure to keep pan closely covered while they are cooking. Arrange meat in center of dish with dumplings around it, pouring gravy over meat.

Dumplings

1½ cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
1½ teaspoons all-phosphate baking powder
About ⅔ cup milk

Sift flour, salt and baking powder. Mix thoroughly but quickly with milk and drop by small tablespoonfuls into hot stew gravy. Cover closely and cook 12 to 15 minutes without removing lid from saucepan.

Barbecued Chicken
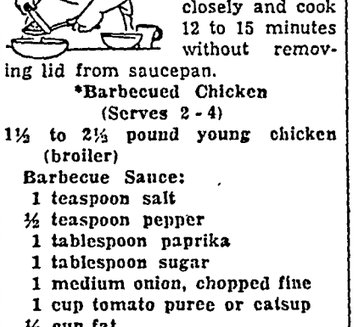
(Serves 2 - 4)

1½ to 2½ pound young chicken (broiler)

Barbecue Sauce:
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon paprika
1 tablespoon sugar
1 medium onion, chopped fine
1 cup tomato puree or catsup
⅓ cup fat
½ cup hot water
⅓ cup lemon juice
1 tablespoon worcestershire sauce

Cut chicken in half or in quarters. Arrange in a baking pan. Brush with hot Barbecue Sauce. Cover, then bake in moderate oven (350°) until about half done. Uncover, continue cooking, basting frequently with the hot Barbecue Sauce until tender and nicely browned. Total cooking time: 1 to 1½ hours depending on size and weight of chicken.

Barbecue Sauce: Blend salt, pepper, paprika, and sugar in saucepan. Add onion, tomato puree or catsup, fat and water. Heat to boiling Remove from heat. Add lemon juice and worcestershire Sauce. Use for basting during cooking, and to serve with the cooked chicken.



Chicken, mushrooms and peas go into these ramekins with a rich cream sauce. Then they're topped with triangles of rich cheese pastry and baked until golden brown to give a colorful, flavor-packed main dish.

LYNN SAYS:
Try Kitchen-Tested Ideas For Meal Appeal

Cabbage, cut fine, and cooked with sour apples and caraway seed makes a good vegetable dish served with spareribs or pork roast.

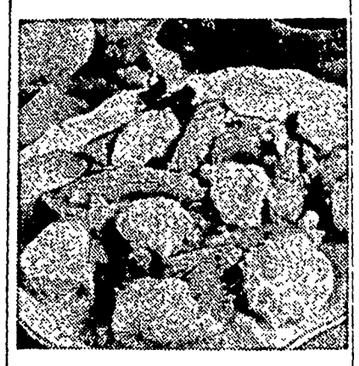
Squash takes to orange juice as a seasoning. You can mash the pulp, season with the juice and return it to the shells.

Glaze your carrots with sliced oranges, brown sugar and meat drippings. They'll have a spicy, interesting flavor.

Try adding raisins to your hot applesauce a few minutes before it finishes cooking. They'll be plump and flavorful, then serve over toast triangles.

Grapefruit makes a good meat garnish or dessert if you spoon apple mint or currant jelly over it before broiling.

Blanc mange made with a bit of coconut, then poured into small molds to chill makes a pretty dessert when unmolded and served with raspberry sauce and thin butter cookies.



Fluffy dumplings and chicken fricassee provide a heart-warming, appetite filling meal for moderate cost. Diced pork adds an interesting flavor touch to the chicken.

Baked Chicken Goulash
(Serves 8 - 10)

2 3½ pound young chickens
Flour
1½ teaspoons paprika
2 teaspoons salt
¼ cup fat or salad oil
4 cups sliced onion
½ cup hot water.

Wash chicken; dry; disjoint. Mix ½ cup flour, paprika and salt Dredge chicken with flour mixture

Brown chicken in fat or salad oil. Remove chicken; brown onion in same pan. Alternate layers of chicken and onion in casserole Add water. Cover; bake in moderate oven, (350°), 1½-2 hours, or until chicken is tender. Thicken stock with flour mixed to smooth paste with cold water.

Chicken with Mushrooms
(Serves 6)

½ cup canned grean peas
½ cup mushrooms
2 cups cooked chicken, diced
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons blanched almonds
½ cup milk or cream
½ cup chicken broth or water
Salt, pepper
Dash of ginger
1 teaspoon chopped parsley

Sliver or chop the almonds Saute mushrooms. Melt butter, blend in flour and stir in slowly the milk and broth. Cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Add all remaining ingredients. Place in ramekins or a large pudding dish and set in a pan of water. Cover with rich cheese biscuit triangles. Bake in a hot (450°) oven for 5 minutes, then at 400° for 15 minutes or until the biscuits are golden brown.

Rich Cheese Biscuits

2 cups sifted enriched flour
4 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
⅓ cup butter
¾ cup milk
1 cup grated American cheese

Sift flour, measure and sift again with salt and baking powder. Cut in butter; add grated cheese and milk, mixing gently. Roll to ¼-inch thickness and cut into triangles or other shapes desired, using floured biscuit cutter. Place on top of chicken in ramekins and bake as directed.

Chicken Creole
(Serves 6)

3½ pound chicken
Salt, pepper, paprika
¼ cup chicken fat or shortening
1 onion, sliced
1 cup uncooked rice
1 can (No. 2½) tomatoes
1 green pepper, seeds removed

Dress, clean and cut chicken into serving pieces. Season with salt, pepper and paprika. Brown onion in chicken fat, add chicken and brown lightly Cover and let simmer for 1 hour. Add remaining ingredients and place in casserole. Cover and bake in a moderate (350°) oven until tender, about 1 hour.

FISHING SEASON CLOSES FEBRUARY 15TH

The season on all protected game fish closes February 15th. The long 1950-51 season was marked by removal of length limits from all species of fish except largemouth and smallmouth bass and sand sturgeon, and removal of two-day catch limits.

Low water levels in inland streams received much blame for poor catfishing early in the season. Fall fishing for all species was good. Winter fishing through the ice won thousand of new converts. Many fine strings of yellow perch and walleyes rewarded those who braved the cold to try their luck

MADELYN LUNDY BRIDE OF GEORGE E. PACA

Miss Madelyn Lundy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Orris Lundy of Klemme, and George E. Paca, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Paca, Garner, were united in marriage January 22 at 9 a. m. in St. Wenceslaus Catholic Church, Duncan.

The Rt. Rev. Msgr. W. C. Hradecky officiated in the double ring ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her gown was of white slipper satin with a lace yoke and V-neckline set with baby seed pearls and white sequins, long sleeves came to a point over the wrists. The gown had a long train and a fingertip veil bordered with French Chatilly lace. Her oak leaf design tiara was set with seed pearls. Her only jewelry was a sweetheart locket, a gift of the bridegroom. She carried a bouquet of white carnations and white camellias with white streamers.

Gertrude Jakoubek, cousin of the bridegroom, wore a dusty rose slipper satin gown with short puffed sleeves, Peter Pan collar and matched headband. She carried a bouquet of yellow carnations, centered with white camellias. She wore matching earrings, gift of the bride.

LaVonne Steenhard was attired in a pale blue slipper satin gown with short puffed sleeves, a Peter Pan collar and matching headband. Her bouquet was dark pink carnations centered with white camellia. She wore matching earrings, gift of the bride.

The bridegroom was attended by Clarence Brcka, a cousin; and by Raymond Formanek. All wore blue suits with white carnation boutonniers.

The mother of the bride was dressed in a navy blue suit with dark accessories. She carried a corsage of pink carnations and pink camellia. The bridegroom's mother wore a rust-colored suit with black accessories. Her corsage was yellow carnation and yellow camellia. The bridegroom's grandmother wore a black dress with a white corsage.

Ushers were Leonard Paca, brother, of the bridegroom, and Don Standley, brother-in-law of the bride.

The reception dinner was held at the Duncan community hall, with 250 guests. The hall was decorated in pastel colors. A three-tier wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and bridegroom centered the bride's table. White cut flowers and light candles centered the bride's table.

In the evening a wedding dance was held at the Duncan Communtiy Hall, with Malek's accordion band furnishing music. A large crowd attended.

The bride was graduated from Klemme high school with the class of 1949 and has been employed in Garner the past year.

A 1949 graduate of Garner high school, the bridegroom attended Loras college, Dubuque. He has since been farming with his father.

KEEP LAYING HOUSE DRY SO EGGS WILL BE CLEAN

Clean eggs and lots of them usually mean the difference between profit and loss in the farm laying flock. Controlled ventilation and temperature, insulation, deep litter and good watering facilities play an important role in the production of lots of clean eggs, says Iowa State College extension poultryman, W. R. Whitefield.

Cold, damp laying houses are bad for several reasons. They are unsanitary and help to spread disease. It takes more labor to keep eggs clean. Cold laying houses chill birds and decrease egg production, Whitfield says.

Temperature control is necessary for a dry laying house. This can be done with the right kind of insulation and ventilation. Moisture can evaporate rapidly when temperature is kept uniformly at a 50-degree level.

Whitfield recommends fill-type insulation with vapor barrier on the cold side of the inner wall on the four walls and ceiling. Glossy tar paper serves well as a vapor barrier. Chopped straw, ground corncobs or wood shavings can be used for insulation.

Controlled ventilation is necessary to prevent draft in the house. Too much ventilation will make the house damp, due to the temperature drop which destroys the waterholding capacity of the air, Whitfield says.

The foul air exhaust opening should be at the ceiling level. This vent should be made adjustable so temperature at the center of the laying house can be kept at about 50 degrees.

Floor litter needs to be at least 8 inches deep. When the surface mats, more litter can be added. Frequent stirring helps to improve the condition of litter, but chickens will take care of this job unless the litter is too shallow.

Litter will be kept fresher by adding 0-20-0 fertilizer once or twice a week. This fertilizer will absorb moisture and ammonia gas thatoften pollute the air in laying houses during the winter. Whitfeld recommends 6 pounds of the fertilizer per week for 100 square feet of floor space. This fertilizer will benefit the soil when the litter is taken out of the laying house and spread on the land.

BRUCELLOSIS CAN BE HELD IN CHECK

Test Cattle, Vaccinate Calves, Sell Reactors

Brucellosis in cattle is taking a heavy toll every year in Iowa. Many people are also becoming infected.

The job of combating this disease rests on everyone and is not the job of regulatory officials alone, says Dr. John B. Herrick, extension veterinarian at Iowa State College. He has pointed out that about 500 new cases of undulant fever were diagnosed in Iowa families last year. These infections came from animals, as the disease does not spread from man to man.

Bar Infected Cattle

Brucellosis can be controlled in cattle by blood tests, removal of reactors, and a calf vaccination program.

Along with these measures care should be taken in keeping infected cattle from entering the state as feeders or replacement dairy heifers. All herd replacements should be throughly checked, and adequate barnyard sanitation practices followed.

Farmer need to be on their toes against buying diseased animals for herd replacements by insisting on a blood test before purchasing them.

Use Area Plan

Herrick emphasizes that the logical approach is the use of an area plan. This is one in which livestock owners in a certain area cooperate, have their cattle blood tested, and then remove the reactors. The use of the whole milk ring test, while not as reliable as a blood test, will aid the eradication program.

Once an area is cleaned up, the chance of infecting cattle is less because the disease will occur less frequetnly.

If you don't need it, turn it into cash with a Times want ad.

SEE MORE FED CATTLE ON MARKET THIS YEAR

The number of fed cattle that will be received at Corn Belt markets during the next three months is expected to be somewhat higher than last year, observes Francis Kutish, Iowa State College farm economist.

The number of better grade fed cattle for slaughter is also expected to be higher during February, March and April, Kutish reports.

He bases these estimates on a recent survey of the number of cattle on feed at the first of the year which showed that Corn Belt feeders then intended to market 32 percent of the cattle had on feed by April 1st.

Midwest feeders also reported that 79 percent of the cattle had been on feed less than three months by January 1. These reports indicate a continuing trend toward lightweight feeder cattle, Kutish points out.

On January 1 the proportion on feed that weighed less than 600 pounds was 38 percent, compared with 31 percent last year. At the same time, the number of cattle on feed weighing more than 900 pounds made up 26 percent of the total, compared with 27 percent last year and 34 percent 2 years ago.

Kutish adds that price ceilings are likely to reduce the number of cattle which are long-fed for sale as prime grades in fall months. Instead, more cattle probably will be topped out at low choice, since price ceilings are likely to provide narrow margins between prime and choice, in an effort to discourage putting grain supplies into high-tallow, prime grade beef.

Total number of cattle on feed in the nation is up 5 percent over a year ago, to set a new record, Kutish reports.

TIMING IS IMPORTANT IN ARTIFICIAL BREEDING

Getting the cow bred at the right time is the big problem facing users of artificial insemination. An increasing percentage of dairy herds in the state are now using artificial insemination, and proper timing seems to be causing the most difficulties.

Dr. John B. Herrick, extension veterinarian at Iowa State College, says the first important factor in getting successful results is keeping accurate records.

Individual cows vary in the length of time between heat periods and the length of the actual period. Records which show when a cow can be expected to come in heat will be valuable, as cows should be bred artificially at the close of the period.

Most cows have a regular cycle, coming in heat every 21 days and staying in heat for about 15 hours.

Herrick reports that artificial insemination used correctly is as efficient as natural service. However, cows must be disease-free and be fed balanced rations for good results.

Cows should not be bred for at least 70 days after calfing. Two or three services is not unusual then, even when natural service is used, so dairymen should not be alarmed if all of the cows do not settle on the first service.

Tonics, wheat germ oil and other medicants are of little value for the problem breeder. In case of any irregularity, a veterinarian should be called.

Physician Says Mentally Sick Cause of Wars

DETROIT, Mich.—Dr. Robert S. Drews, a Detroit psychiatrist who has just completed a three-month study of mental health in Europe, contends all the world's presidents, dictators, and kings should be stretched out on a couch and psychoanalyzed before being allowed to take office.

"The history of war and chaos is the history of mentally sick people." Dr. Drews said. He had a number of examples to prove his point.

He said the hostility, aggression, and mental instability of existing leaders in many countries has spread like a contagion to the mental make-up of people all over the world.

Remedies Suggested

He suggested these remedies for wars and dangers of war that are caused by the instability of political leaders:

1. All persons in political life should be subjected to "rigorous examinations in the structures of their personalities before being entrusted with the destinies of nations."

2. Mental hygiene must be taught in schools all over the world—as it is being taught already to some extent in the United States.

3. A universal "auxiliary language", such as Esperanto, must be adopted to make international and personal meetings easier.

4. More "interpersonal relationships" must be arranged to bring people together across national frontiers on a "me-and-you basis", instead of formal international conferences.

"What is needed now, immediately," he said, "is a dynamic program of education people to live one with another, instead of for, against, or away from another. To live for another person is emotional; to live against another is hostility; to live away from another is isolationism.

Research for Book

Dr. Drews called attention to Napoleon, Caesar, Hitler, Mussolini, and "as far as we know, Stalin, too—all of them were neurotic, mentally sick people."

He said such leaders came to power in Europe "in a history of essentially single individuals sincerely striving for conquest and supremacy. They very often were powerful, but immature, and very often neurotic in their leadership."

Dr. Drews went to Europe last June with a group of professors from Wayne University. Later he left the group to conduct individual research for material on his forthcoming book, "Mental Hygiene In The Changing World."

He and his wife visited virtually every western European nation in his search for material.

Woman Finds Old Bonds, Asks $250,000 From State

RICHMOND, Va. — Mrs. Bonny Walker, 76, of Vinton, Va., recently found in her attic two $1,000 bonds issued more than 75 years ago by the commonwealth of Virginia. She wants the state to redeem them for the $250,000 she figures they're worth—calculated at six per cent compound interest.

The commonwealth is flabbergasted—but not contemptuous. If it legally owes Mrs. Walker anything, it intends to pay.

Mrs. Walker says the bonds were issued in 1861. The date isn't very legible—it might be 1864. If the bonds were issued in 1864, they aren't worth the paper they're printed on—the 14th amendment to the U. S. constitution says southern states may not make good any obligations incurred to finance the civil war.

"All I know," Mrs. Walker wrote Gov. John S. Battle, "is that the bonds say 'Be it known that there is due from the commonwealth of Virginia unto the bearer the sum of $1,000, redeemable after January 1, 1899, with interest at 6 per cent per annum.'

"Now, it's after 1899, and I'm the bearer."

Koreans Send $50 to Girls Whose GI Dad Died in War

COLLINGDALE, Pa. — The two little girls, whose father wrote the now famous "Dear Joannie and Rosemarie" letter, have received a letter of sympathy and $50 contributed by nine Koreans.

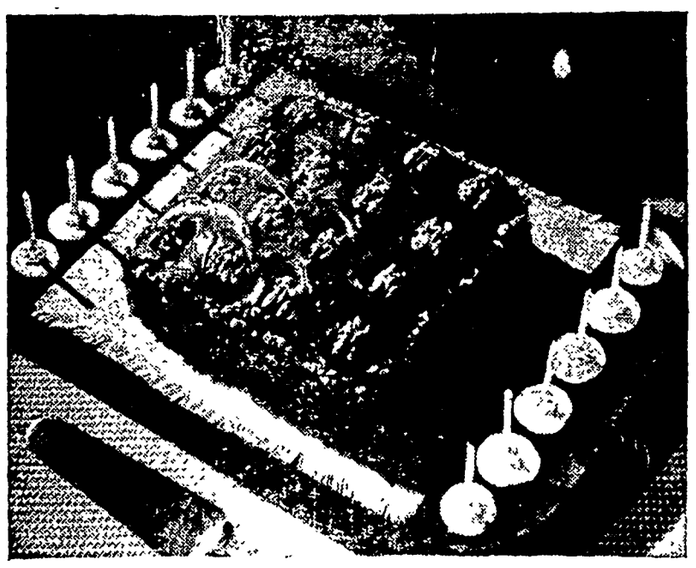
In September nine Koreans appeared at the Tokyo office of Newsweek magazine and said they wanted to let Mrs. McCormick know "there are good and decent people in Korea as well as bad ones."

Explaining that they wished the $50 to go toward the children's education, the Koreans wrote to Mrs. John McCormick:

"As your brave husband said in that letter there are many bad people who bring misery and destruction to humanity. However, we should like to tell you that there are a great many good and courageous people, of which Mr. McCormick was certainly an outstanding example. It is the effect of these good people and under his guidance that keeps the world going in spite of the evil done by bad people. This is one reason for our trust in God."

Time and Talent Determine Your

CAKE BAKING METHODS



Turning out a delicious cake like this one is a homemaker's badge of cookery skill. But shall she use a ready-mix, or follow the traditional method of mixing up all the ingredients at home? Food specialists say either method has its advantages.

Unexpected company comes, and you want to serve cake for dessert. Out comes the ready-mix recipe. Or, if you are a quick hand at cake baking, you stir one up from home ingredients, whisk it into the oven and it's ready in no time.

The question of whether to use traditional home methods of stirring up cakes or to depend on ready-mixes is really not a question at all. You can have acceptable cakes both ways. But if you're considering economy, and time involved, and the melt-in-your-mouth sort of cake you want to stake your reputation on, you'll decide when it's best to do everything yourself and when to take the short-cut ready-mix method.

Time-Saving

Jewel Graham, extension nutritionist, Iowa State College, says that using ready-mixes from the store, or making up your own ready-mixes in quanity at home, can be a time-saver on busy days. Usually the greatest saving in time comes when you don't have to do much more than add liquid to dry ingredients. If you have to go through an involved process to make the cake, even though the dry ingredients are all prepared for you, chances are you may not be saving much time.

The big saving in such mixes is usually in the simple type cake. Because it is simple to do, homemakers who aren't practiced in cake-making can expect uniform results time after time. Such cakes, Miss Graham said, may contain less sugar and fat than those you make from your own file of recipes at home. They usually have a different texture, are less velvety, and perhaps won't stay moist as long.

Regarding angel foods, here again she says it's a question of the standard of cake you want. There's nothing like fresh eggs, fine-grained sugar and soft cake flour to give you a tender, fluffy angel food. Also if you have a supply of eggs on hand at home, your saving is in using your own time-tested recipe. As for the time involved, research workers say you can make an angel food, mixing by hand, in 7 to 10 minutes.

Angel-Cake Mix

But ready-mix angel-cake recipes do give acceptable products. You'll probably find that it will take you just about as much time to make the cake, though, for angel cakes take a certain set procedure without many short cuts. Thus your decision is one of money involved and how good you are as as cake-maker.

Now about the traditional recipes, Miss Graham says we have them because they have proved themselves by consistently turning out good cakes. Ever stop to wonder why you cream the fat, then add the sugar and egg in just that order for a butter cake? It's because you get a soft, spongy-like air-infat foam and that's part of what makes a good cake.

Most common way to make a butter cake is the "conventional" method. You cream the fat, add the sugar, blend in the egg, combine and sift the dry ingredients, add them alternately with milk to the egg mixture, then add flavoring and fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites.

Next time you check cake recipes notice how the ingredients go together, Miss Graham says, rather than just noting the ingredients. You find that they follow much a common pattern.

DRAINAGE INCREASES PRODUCTIVITY OF SOIL

Drainage is one of the chief ways to increase the productive capactiy of Iowa soils to meet the expected climbing demand for food during the coming years, says D. O. Hull, agricultural engineer at Iowa State College. He notes that most farms in the state have wet draws and other spongy spots that bog down machinery each spring. Drainage will not only put more pleasure into farming, but it will bring into full production land that formerly produced only part of a crop.

Farm drainage plans for this year should start now, Hull urges, by ordering the necessary supply of tile. Kilns only produce tile until the storage yards are full. Then they turn to brick production, Hull says. By ordering tile now, farmers can help keep the Kilns in tile production, which is of greater importance to farmers.

To help farmers decide how much tile they will need, the engineer says that ordinary soils can be drained with tile lines spaced 100 feet apart. This takes 436 tile per acre.

Tight soils require closer spacing. About 80 feet between tile lines are required here, using 545 tile per acre.

An average railroad freight car holds 5,000 feet of 5-inch tile and 4,000 feet of the 6-inch size.

EGG PRICES FACE REAL TEST SOON

With Support Removed May Tumble Late On

Poultrymen face a situation in 1951 where efficiency of production will determine whether they make or break. This condition arises as a result of the removal of egg price supports this month.

Although cold weather and poor management by some producers during the winter tends to lower production, it's also true that more hens are laying eggs at this time. So total prodution does not vary a great deal, according to Leonard Eggleton, Iowa State College extension poultryman. He also expects consumption to continue this winter.

Urge Culling

Egg prices on the free market will get the real test during late winter and early spring when production shoots upward. A lot will depend on meat price then, Eggleton reasons. Consumers tend to substitute eggs for meat when meat prices get out of line.

Although the number of laying hens will drop slightly in 1951, the eggs-per-hen average has been climbing about fast enough to make up for the loss in hen numbers. If prices drop, Eggleton urges poultrymen to cull more closly and keep only the best producers. This will be necessary if profits are to be made in egg production. Over a 20-year period, poultrymen at Iowa State College have found that farmers in general do not step up culling when egg prices fall.

Keep Quality High

Eggleton mentions several more ways for poultrymen to tighten their belts for competitive production. Produce high quality eggs, he says. Then market those eggs where quality is rewarded by higher prices. Keep laying houses dry and at a temperature of about 45 to 50 degrees. Make sure that the feeding ration is properly balanced.

Poultry specialists have advised Iowans to raise early chicks so they'll have early pullet replacement for their laying flocks next fall. Good management is a must if farmers want to produce eggs profitably in 1951. Eggs and Poultry Days emphasizing and explaining that proven management practices are being held in 21 communities in 211 parts of the state, beginning January 9th.

CHICKS BOUGHT EARLY ARE MOST PROFITABLE

With the holidays behind them now, Iowa farmers are making plans for spring. One of the important phases of this planning will be the poultry program for 1951, says Leonard Eggleton, extension poultry husbandman at Iowa State College.

He urges farmers to order their chicks now from a reliable hatchery. Then they will be assured of delivery when they want them. And for top egg prices it's important to buy January, February or March chicks. They'll be ready to produce eggs early in the fall when prices usually are the highest.

Another advantage of early chicks, Eggleton says, is that most of the brooding work is finished before spring field work starts. With a possible labor shortage looming ahead, farmers will be able to better utilize their own time by moving chicken brooding a month or two ahead.

There are more advantages in having early chicks The males are ready for market before the bulk of the fryers come on. Early chicks usually have less trouble with disease, Eggleton adds. He cautions that farmers can't be assured of success just by buying good chicks It also takes good sanitation and the right kind of feed.

DRUNK DRIVING IS MAJOR CAUSE OF HIGHWAY DEATHS

Des Moines—Drunken driving figured prominently in fatal traffic accidents on Iowa's highways last year, although some improvements was shown over reports for 1949, records of the state safety department showed Wednesday.

A break-down showed that 78 of 708 persons involved in fatal accidents last year were reported as "drunk." Thirty-one were listed as "driving, ability impared."

In 1949, seventy drivers involved in fatal accidents were reported as "drunk" out of a total of 862. Forty-nine were accused of "impaired" driving ability because of intoxication.

HANCOCK COUNTY BOARD PROCEEDINGS

2ND ADJOURNED JANUARY MEETING

Garner, Iowa
January 8, 1951

The Hancock County, Iowa, board of supervisors met in session on above captioned date pursuant to adjournment with Clarence Bird, Clint Daniels ond F. J. Schoun present.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved as read.

On motion and second the following official bonds are hereby approved: Fred C. Missal, County Assessor; R. E. Nesbit, Deputy Sheriff; and George H. Buseman, Ell Township Constable.

MINUTES OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF HANCOCK COUNTY, IOWA, ACTING FOR AND ON BEHALF OF DRAINAGE DISTRICT NO 155 OF SAID COUNTY

The meeting was called to order by the Chairman, F. J. Schoun, at 1:30 p. m. on the 8th day of January, 1951, same being the day and hour previously set for the hearing upon the report of the Commissioners appointed to classify and assess benefits in said Drainage District No. 155.

All members of the Board of Supervisors were present, and the Chairman F. J. Schoun, presiding, was in the chair. Proof of publication of notice of hearing upon the report of the Commissioners to classify and asess benefits in said District being on file, the Chairman announced the purpose of the meeting and stated that this meeting was pursuant to published notice of hearing upon the report of said Commissioners and extended the opportunity to any interested land owner to be heard orally with reference to written objections filed on or prior to the date of hearing.

The County Auditor read the minutes of the previous meeting, and the notice of the hearing upon the report of the commissioners, and the chairman announced that the Board would hear anyone with reference to his or her assessment. Written objections were filed by Mabel L. Olson to the asessment against her lots on the main and Lateral No. 1 of said drainage district, and written objections filed by Frank J. Trca to his assessment on the land owned by him as set forth in the Commissioners' report and the published notice; no other written objections being filed and each of said objectors were orally heard by the Board in support of their written objections. C A. Frisbee on behalf of himself and Luella F. Frisbee, appeared and matle oral objections to the assessments against lots 20, 21, and 22, in Sunset View addition to Garner, on both the main and lateral, but filed no written objections.

And the Board after hearing the objections and having read and considered the report of the Commissioners and the two amendments thereto and being now fully advised and having fully descussed and considered the matter of objections and of the report and two amendments thereto and having previously inspected the lands and lots in said improvement, Supervisor Daniels read, offered and introduced the following.

RESOLUTION

WHEREAS, this board has heard and fully considered all of the objections of land owners who made objections within drainage district No. 155 to the report of the commissioners heretofore appointed to classify said lands and assess benefits in said district and has carefully reviewed the report of the Commissioners and made a personal inspection of the lands included within said drainage district and fully considered the report of said commissioners.

Now, Therefore, Be and It is Hereby resolved on this 8th day of January, 1951 same being the date set for the meeting for hearing upon the report of the Commissioners heretofore appointed to classify said lands and assess benefits in said district, that the assessments against the following lots be reduced as follows:

That the assessment of Mabel L. Olson on lots 27, 28, 29 and 30, all in block 47, original town of Garner, Iowa, assessed in the sum of $18.50 per lot on account of the main of said drajnage district, be reduced from $18.50 per lot to $16.00 per lot; thus reducing the total assessment against said lots of Mabel L. Olson on account of the main from $74.00 to $64.00 and be it further resolved that the assessment against said lots on account of benefits derived from lateral No. 1 be reduced from $22.00 per lot to $17.00 per lot; thus reducing the total assessments against said lots on account of benefits derived from lateral No. 1 of said drainage district No, 155 from $88.00 to $68.00; reducing the total benefits on account of both the main and lateral from $162.00 to 132.00.

Be it further resolved that the assessment against the lands of Frank J. Trca, described in said report, be reduced from $691.90 to $592.00,

Whereas, it appears to this board that there will be a surplus in the funds of said drainage district; that the total reductions on assessments herein made on account of the lands and lots of Mabel L. Olson and Frank J. Trca shall be charged against said surplus; and that the classification and the percentage factors, as set forth in the report of the Commissioners, shall in no manner be reduced or changed by these reductions.

Be it further resolved that in all other respects the report of the commissioners and the two amendments thereto be and the same are hereby adopted, affirmed and approved, and the classifications and assessments as made thereon, except as modified, changed and reduced by this resolution, be confirmed and approved; and that all objections thereto, except as modified herein, be denied and overruled; and the classifications and the percentage factors as set forth in said report shall stand as a basis for future assessments, unless and until revised as by law provided.

And, be it further resolved that the levy of assessments as set forth in said report, and as reduced by this resolution, be fixed and levied upon the lands, tracts, lots and parcels of real estate and highways and railways within said district, as provided by section 455.57 of the 1950 code of Iowa in accordance with said commissioners' report, except as modified herein; and that said levies of assessments shall be and are levied as a tax and shall bear interest at 4 per cent per annum and became due and payable atthe same time as other taxes and collected in like manner as provided by Section 455.62 of the 1950 code of Iowa and amendment thereto; and such taxes shall be a lien upon the real estate roads, streets, alleys and highways against which same are assessed as provided by 455.58 of the 1950 code of Iowa.

Provided, however, and it is further resolved that the assessments for benefits as corrected and approved by the board in this resolution, which are levied as of this date shall be payable at the office of the County Treasurer; and if any person, or corporation, or the town of Garner Iowa shall, within twenty (20) days after the levy of such assessments, pay the same in full, such person, firm or corporation, municipal or ortherwise, shall have the right so to do without interest as provided by section 455.63 of the 1950 code of Iowa.

And, be it further resolved that if the owner of any real estate against which such levy for assessment of benefits is made in excess of $20.00 shall, within thirty (30) days from this date, agree in writing endorsed upon any improvement certificate referred to in Section 455.64 of 1950 code of Iowa, that such owner or Corporation, Municipal or otherwise, shall have the right to pay his or its assessments as provided in sub-paragraphs 1 and 2 of Section 455.64 of the 1950 code of Iowa.

And, be it further resolved that any assessments levied against any tracts in an amount of less than $20.00 shall be payable within twenty (20) days after the levy thereof without interest; and if not paid within said period of time, same shall draw interest at four (4) per cent and shall be paid in the same manner as regular taxes.

And, be it further resolved that any improvement certificate issued in excess of $20.00, as hereinbefore set forth, shall be payable to bearer with interest at four (4) per cent per annum, payable in ten(10) equal annual installments as provided by Section 455.64 and Section 455.77 to Section 455.80 inclusive of the 1950 code of Iowa.

Motion to adopt said resolution was seconded by Supervisor Bird.

After discussion the chairman put the motion upon the adoption of the foregoing resolution; and upon call of the roll, the following vote was had:

Supervisor C. D. Daniels	Aye
Supervisor Clarence Bird	Aye
Supervisor F. J. Schoun	Aye

Nays - None

Whereupon the chairman declared the resolution duly adopted and directed the auditor to notify the owners of land subject to assessments of their options as herein provided, and direct the auditor to certify said levies to the county treasurer, as by law provided.

4TH ADJOURNED JANUARY MEETING

Garner, Iowa
January 29, 1951

The Hancock County, Iowa, Board of Supervisors met in session on above captioned date pursuant to adjournment with Clarence Bird, Clint Daniels and F. J. Schoun present.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved as read.

WHEREAS, Wm. Henschen was appointed Engineer as commanded in Chapter 455, Code of Iowa 1950, on July 17, 1950, to make a survey, investigation and report on the necessity and feasability on the cleanout, to grade, of Lateral No. 16 of D.D. No. 1 & 2, petitioned for by Tom O'Rourke, et al, and said Engineer did file his report on January 23, 1951, which report states that he has investigated and surveyed the lands in Lateral No. 16 of D.D. No. 1 & 2 and finds the present system of drainage inadequate and recommends that Lateral No. 16 of D.D. No. 1 &2 be cleaned out to grade, as prayed in the prayer of the petitioners and that such improvement will be conducive to public health, utility, convenience and welfare and that the benefits to be derived will be greater than the cost thereof.

BE AND IT IS THEREFORE RESOLVED by the Board of Supervisors of Hancock County, Iowa, acting for and in behalf of Lateral No. 16 of D.D No. 1 & 2 petitioned for by Tom O'Rourke, et al, that the report of the Engineer be and the same is hereby approved as a tentative plan and may be amended before final action theron and said report of the Engineer and plan shall come on for further hearing at the Courthouse in Garner, Iowa, at 1:30 P. THORNTON WINS TWIN BILL FROM KLEMME

Thornton pulled a surprise there Friday by taking both ends of a twin bill from Klemme. The Thornton girls led off with a 63-44 victory paced by the 47-point scoring of Dorothy Pihl while Nellie Greiman had 13 for Klemme. The Thornton boys, who trailed 16-13 at intermission, bounced back for a 37-33 triumph paced by the 16-point scoring of Don Winthers,

FOLLOW SAFETY RULES IN FARM SHOP WORK

Working in a farm shop during the winter can be dangerous if a few safety rules aren't followed, according to Norval Wardle, extension farm safety specialist at Iowa State College.

He says winter is a good time to check over machinery and make needed repairs. This is particularly true this year since the supply of parts is likely to be critical. However, this work should be done carefully to prevent accidents.

The best place to work is in a comfortably heated building. There is less tendency to hurry and to do careless things than in a cold place.

A common hazard in a closed building is running the motor of a car or tractor that is being repaired. Carbon monoxide may accumulate and can prove fatal. There is no way of telling whether or not this gas is present until it is too late to do anything about it. A person will be unable to move when he discovers it.

If it is necessary to run the motors, Wardle says to make sure there is plenty of ventilation by opening the doors of the building. Installing an exhaust outside will also work. This should be checked carefully to make sure it isn't leaking. Even then the motors shouldn't be run long.

Another common hazard is using gasoline in a closed building to clean machinery parts. The gasoline vapors can turn the building into a large cylinder similar to one on a gasoline motor. It will take only a small spark to ignite it.

Gas should be used only out in the open where there is plenty of air movement. Solvents which are non-combustable are available for cleaning work inside buildings.

AMERICA'S THUNDERING HERD!

MILLIONS OF HARNESSED HORSES

No wonder the production power of the United States is the envy of the world! Thanks to the businessmen who run America's electric industry, our country has millions of horsepower harnessed to the plants and factories of the nation.

Only last year, ELECTRIC COMPANIES ACROSS THE LAND ADDED POWER EQUAL TO THE WORK OF 150 MILLION MEN! Yes, Reddy Kilowatt Power is all set NOW for our great rearmament effort.

We have 5 TIMES THE ELECTRIC POWER OF RUSSIA, AND 100 TIMES THE ELECTRIC POWER OF CHINA! Private enterprise has DOUBLED THE AMOUNT OF ELECTRICITY IN THE PAST TEN YEARS . . . AND LOWERED THE COST!

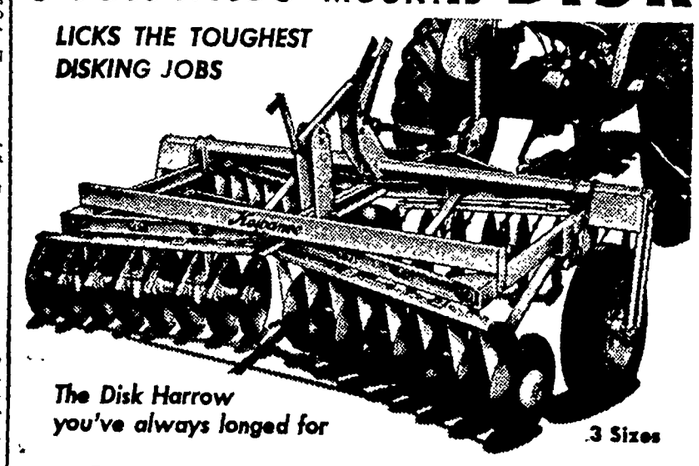
Kewanee WHEEL MOUNTED DISK
LICKS THE TOUGHEST DISKING JOBS



The Disk Harrow you've always longed for — 3 Sizes

Faster Transporting
Operation is easy, simple and "non-stop." You merely touch the hydraulic lever to raise or lower disk blades and accurately control depth of disking.

Raises over wet spots or grass waterways "on-the-go" or lifts clear for sharp U-turns at row ends or travel on the road. You go from job to job in minutes . . . no wear on disks on concrete or gravel roads. No heavy lifting into truck or trailer or unloading in the field.

A Better Disking Job
Heavy, rugged construction and fixed-angle gangs give you maximum cutting and thoro mixing of the soil from 1 inch to hub deep. Penetrates uniformly in sandy soil, loam, clay or plowed sod.

Front and rear gangs instantly adjustable to level ridges or fill dead furrows. You get deep, level, easy-to-plant seedbeds with the KEWANEE every time.

Tops for Corn Stalks
See how thoroly it slices and shreds those tough hybrid stalks, root systems and all. Watch how it pulverizes those pesky corn stumps, too . . . you can't have real borer control, nor a good seedbed if they are left intact.

Twice over gives the cleanest fields you ever saw . . . no expensive stalk shredder needed.

THERE IS DANGER OF SCAB IN SHEEP

Need To Dip Or Spray Those Found Infested

Western sheep shipped into Iowa last fall may have brought sheep scab into the state with them.

Flock owners should keep a close watch for signs of this disease and be ready to treat it if it shows up, says Earle Raun, extension entomologist at Iowa State College.

Under state law, sheep that are shipped into the state must be placed under quarantine for at least 60 days. They can be released only after being examined by a licensed veterinarian and pronounced healthy.

Shed Wool

Sheep infested with scabs appear rough and unthrifty. They begin to itch and then rub r bite themselves. Wool is shed in patches, and the skin becomes red and inflamed. Serum flows from wounds in the skin and dries in hard crusts and scales.

Raun reports that the disease is caused by very small mites which burrow into the skin. There are three different types of scab, but all are similar and controlled in the same manner. Native sheep usually aren't bothered, as regular treatments for ticks usually control the scab too.

The preferable treatment is 6-8 pounds of 25 percent wettable lindane powder or 12 to 15 pounds of 12 percent gamma isomer of benzene hexachloride in 100 gallons of water to which a 2-pound box of Dreft, Vel or Swerl has been added. This can be applied as a dip or spray although spraying is desirable as less material will be wasted. Three quarts to 1 gallon per animal will do the job.

Need Sunshiny Day

A spraying pressure of 60 to 100 pounds is adequate if a wetting agent is used. The solution should be kept in constant agitation as the lindane is a wettable powder and will settle out if allowed to stand still.

Winter isn't the best time to spray or dip sheep, but if scab is present it will pay to get rid of it. A dry, sunshiny day is desirable. Following the treatment, Raun recommends running the sheep into a dry barn or shed that is deeply bedded with straw and leaving them there until they dry.

Following treatment, a licensed veterinarian should be called to inspect the flock and certify that they are free from scab.

Good Tools Make— SEWING EASIER

A ruler, a tracing wheel and some tracing carbon—all good sewing aids—assure accuracy and make sewing easier. Notice how easy it is to transfer pattern markings to the fabric with the aid of this sewing equipment.

Sewing season ahead, and already your magazines are busting with colorful ideas on spring and summer fashions. Translating these style ideas into attractive garments for yourself or your daughters can be a pleasure and an economy. But pause a moment—what shape are your sewing tools in .

Much of the secret of skillful sewing rests with the right tools, according to Lucille Rea, extension clothing specialist, Iowa State College. And right now, she thinks, is a good time to "round up" and "round out" your sewing equipment. You won't need many tools, she says. Some of the aids you may already have at home. But it's important to have the right tool on hand when and where you need it.

Get a sharp pair of shears if you don't have it, and warn the family "hands off." Dull shears, which don't cut clearly or all the way to the end, fray the fabric edges just enough so that making accurate seam widths is difficult. Get bent-handle shears so that your fabric can lie flat on the table as you cut.

Be Accurate

Good equipment takes much of the guesswork out of sewing. It's the inaccuracy that causes most sewing problems, Miss Rea says. From the moment you take your own measurements to the time you put up your hem, you'll want to be accurate. Here are some more tools to help you.

If your old tape measure has stretched, get a new one. You'll need it to take your measurements. Buy one with accurate markings which can be read from either end. Team up an accurate ruler with your tape measure. You'll need the ruler to make pattern adjustments. (Remember: You make pattern adjustments before you cut out the pattern.) Do this first and you won't have fitting problems.

A third members of this trio is a yardstick—true to scale. You'll need it to extend the grainline marking on your pattern and to measure in at several points from the fabric selvage to this grainline marking in order to make sure your pattern is on the exact grainline.

Tracing Wheel

A tracing wheel is an excellent tool for transferring pattern markings. Use it with tracing carbon paper and you can transfer pattern markings to your fabric in a jiffy. Or, if you wish, use a sharp table knife. It can serve much the same purpose as the tracing wheel.

About tracing paper—buy a packet with at least four colors. Then select the color of carbon which will be nearest to the color of the fabric you will mark, and still show up. Don't use a dark carbon on a light fabric, for sometimes the marking shows through and is difficult to remove.

Provide yourself with a small scissors to use at the machine to clip threads. Not only is using your shears awkward, but constant cutting of threads will dull the shears.

A seam guide is a handy sewing machine attachment. You may have one already, or you can easily get one. Or put a strip of wide adhesive tape on the bed of the machine and mark it and label it with exact seam widths. A seam guide for even, accurate seams.

As for pins and needles, plan to use only slender, sharp pins and needles. Keep them handy by using a wrist pincushion made out of a square of cloth, folded diagonally and filled with wool or hair.

ANTIBIOTICS SAVE MANY RUNTY PIGS

Adding These To Feed Brings Good Results

Feeding rations containing antibiotics offers Iowa farmers new hope in solving their runt pig problems.

The runt problem has existed ever since farmers started raising hogs. The state's best managers have bumped up against it. Over the country as a whole, an average of 1 to 1½ runts turn up per litter.

Runts usually receive one of two treatments. They are either "done away with" at the start or a farmer tries to bring them along on skimmilk. Neither has proved a satisfactory method of dealing with the runt problem.

Get Good Gains

Now, tests at the Iowa Agricultural Experiment Station have demonstrated that feeding antibiotics, such as aureomycin and terramycin, can save certain runt pigs. Results of the tests were released last week by Damon Catron and Peter Cuff, in charge of the experiments.

In the tests involving 104 runts, antibiotics saved scrawny, gaunt pigs weighing less than 20 pounds at 71 to 76 days of age. The antibiotics not only saved the runts but brought them around so they made normal daily gains of 1 and three-quarters pounds, Catron and Cuff reported. Similar pigs fed a good ration including skimmilk made less than a pound of gain per day. Higher mortality and unevenness showed up in pigs which did not get antibiotics.

Two antibiotics, aureomycin and terramycin, were fed in the tests. Both improved daily gains and feed efficiency over a basal ration described by Catron and Cuff as better than that fed by the so-called average Midwest farmer.

Basal Ration Good

The basal ration was made up of ground yellow corn, 10 percent meat and bone scraps, soybean oilmeal, 5 percent dehydrated alfalfa meal, vitamin A and D-2 premix, and minerals including trace minerals. The meat and bone scraps level was equivalent to a farmer feeding a supplement containing at least 50 percent meat and bone scraps.

The pigs getting antibiotics made faster daily gains than those getting the basal ration alone or when it was supplemented either with skimmilk, B-vitamins, or vitamin B-12. The lot fed the basal plus aureomycin and vitamin B-12 made 1.37 pounds daily gain, compared with 1.33 for aureomycin alone, 1.21 for terramycin plus B-vitamins, 1.14 for terramycin alone, 0.94 for skimmilk, 0.93 for B-vitamins, 0.86 for the basal ration alone, and 0.70 for vitamin B-12.

The rations containing antibiotics produced 100 pounds of pork in less feed than any of the others with the exception of the basal ration plus B-vitamins.

At a glance, aureomycin appears to be better than terramycin. However, Catron and Cuff points out that not quite half as much terramycin was fed as aureomycin.

WATCH EARLY PIGS FOR ANEMIA SIGNS

Thumping Sides, Pale Skin Are Common Signs

Early farrowed pigs should be watched closely for signs of anemia, advises E. L. Quaife, extension swine specialist at the Iowa State College.

The disease is caused by lack of iron in the pigs' diet and usually shows up when they are 10 days to 3 weeks old.

Good thrifty pigs that are growing well will begin losing flesh when they are affected. Other symptoms are pale skin and thumping sides. Quaife reports that pigs become runty after they are affected but seldom die.

Dirt, Sulfates Cures

Successful hog producers have solved the anemia problem by putting a piece of clean, fresh sod or dirt into the pen every few days. This gives the pigs something to nose over and they pick up the needed mineral matter.

If dirt isn't available, the swine specialist suggest giving pigs a mixture of 1 pound of iron sulfate and 1 or 2 ounces of copper sulfate and ½ cup of corn syrup in ½ gallon of warm water.

Paint Teats

Small pigs will need this solution at the rate of one-third teaspoon a day for the first week after birth, ½ teaspoon for the second week, and a full teaspoon from then until the pigs are 4 or 5 weeks old. This can be given by painting it on the sows' teats and udders or with an oil can.

Encouraging the pigs to eat protein feeds and grains from a creep-feeder also will help prevent trouble from anemia according to Quaife.

LATE WINTER BEST TIME TO BUY CORN FOR FEED

Iowa farmers who will need to buy corn for spring and summer feeding will probably find late January and early February a good time to lay in their supply, says Francis Kutish, Iowa State College farm economist

There was a fifth less corn on farms in the state on January 1 than there was a year ago, and a bad spring might mean a tight cash corn situation, he explains In addition, late reports show a record number of cattle on feed January 1, and hog production is increasing, so the demand for feed is expected to go up.

Corn Belt weather was favorable for marketing activity during the middle of January, and corn prices at county points ranged from 5 to 15 cents above loan levels Many farmers with high-moisture corn have taken this opportunity to get rid of some of their corn.

Resulting heavy market presures have lowered the Chicago grain market, with futures and cash prices in mid-January down several cents from the first of the year, Kutish reports.

DAY OF PRAYER

Thousands of Small Communities To Join in Annual Day of Prayer

Thousands of small communities throughout the United States will join in the observance of the 64th annual World Day of Prayer this Friday The yearly observance in this country is sponsored by Protestant women of over 80 denominations.

Overseas, women of 91 countries will join in prayer for lasting peace and strengthening of the bonds of Christian unity The theme of this year's prayer was chosen by church women in Germany from I John 4:18, "Perfect love casts out fear."

The theme is chosen each year by a different national group, according to Mrs. Welthy Honsinger Fisher, of New York city, chairman of the World Day of Prayer committee.

Commending this year's choice, Mrs. Fisher said, "The people of the world today are fearful of each other, and their distrust can bring about the destruction that they fear. It is time all of us were reminded of One who said love can bring courage and peace."

OBSERVED on the first Friday in Lent, World Day of Prayer is marked by the ringing of church bells and the closing of many business establishments for special services in many communities. Services at hospital and in prisons, and special programs for children, are also part of the observance in many towns.

In some communities theaters project the prayer on the movie screen. Proclamations by mayors and governors and broadcasts over major networks urge support of the program.

The traditional offerings, which exceeded 255,000 last year, are divided between home and foreign missions. The home missions use the money to provide child care and other social and religious services for agricultural migrants, religious education and social services for American Indians and improvement of the Negro ministry in sharecropper areas of the south.

Funds allotted to the foreign missions are used in this country to aid foreign students and abroad to help support Christian women's colleges in the far east and India and the production and distribution of Christian literature.

This year's service asks that the offering "given out of thankful hearts . . may bless multitudes, whom, having not seen, we love."

THE FICTION CORNER

FAITHFUL SERVANT

By Maud McCurdy Welch

TIMES WERE HARD in the little town of Centerville and Sam Meadows, the town's only druggist was finding it hard to meet his bills. The shoe factory was shut down, one of the lumber mills had moved away and the other one was running half time.

3-Minute Fiction

Sam was a widower and lived economically in two rooms in the back of his store. He'd cut down on a few other things, but things kept getting worse.

Bill Bowen, one of Sam's good friends, came in one day to talk the situation over. "The trouble with you," he told Sam, "is that you're not business-like. How can you expect to run a business successfully if you don't collect?"

"When people are sick, they have to have medicine whether they can pay for it or not," Sam said reasonably.

"But, Sam, you can't carry the whole town on your shoulders. If you go on extending credit, you'll probably find yourself in a bad spot."

Bill went to the door, turned back with a word of warning, "Better think it over, Sam."

Sam sighed. He looked up at the small neon sign over the entrance doors of which he'd always been so proud.

"Meadows Drug Store • Twenty-five years of service."

Bill Bowen was right. After all a druggist has to take a stand somewhere. He has to protect himself.

Sam's next customer was Mary Neely, a tired looking little woman Sam knew what she wanted, a prescription re-filled for her brother's neuritis. "It's botherin' him awful today," she said.

"The trouble with you," Bill told Sam, "is that you're not business-like. How can you expect to run a business successfully if you don't collect?"

Mary's husband had had a good job in the shoe factory, but it had been some time since he'd had a steady job.

But Sam had made up his mind. He drew a painful breath. "Mary, you already owe me thirty-five dollars. If you could pay for this prescription maybe . . " but Sam's voice trailed off unhappily.

Mary's eyes was dazed with surprise. "I haven't any money, but . . ." she broke off. "You mean you . . . you won't let me have the medicine?"

Sam walked to the back of the store, unable to answer. Then suddenly he whirled around. Mary was gone. He hurried after her.

BILL WAS wrong. A man had to have faith. A man has to accept his responsibilities. The health of the people in this town had been entrusted to him. He couldn't fail them, whether they could pay or not.

Sam overtook Mary and said, "Come back. I'll fill the prescription. I'll also put up some Vitamin B for your brother."

"You're a good man, Sam," Mary said tearfully.

After that when people needed credit, they got it. Sam was as usual on call day or night.

Bill Bowen came to see him again. This time Sam told him that a druggist's responsibilities to his customers was as great as that of a doctor to his patients. Bill tried to argue with him, but Sam shook his head with a smile.

Bill went out and almost collided with Tom Shaver, the young cashier in the bank. Sam was filling a prescription for a shabby young man in overalls. He charged it and as the youn man started to leave, Sam gave him a doll for his little girl.

Then Sam said, 'Well, Tom, what's on your mind?"

Tom Shaver grinned. "Just wanted you to know the old town's waking up. Shoe factory opens next week, a furniture factory coming in and the mill's going to run full time. There'll be jobs for everybody and the people won't forget you, Sam." Tom went to the door, stopped under the neon sign. "I think I'm going to change that to read, "Twenty-five years of Faithful service."

Sam smiled at him. He was remembering a favorite Bible text:

"For we walk by faith, not by sight."

The above is a copy of what is probably the world's first photograph "printed" by bombardment of atomic rays. It shows the Westinghouse atom-smasher as pictured by a process developed by Dr. Kuan-Han Sun, nuclear physicist at the company's research laboratories.

ATOMIC PHOTOGRAPHY

Nuclear Physicist 'Prints' First Photograph With Atomic Energy

What is probably the world's first snapshot to be "printed" by atomic ray bombardment has been produced by a Westinghouse research scientist.

Dr. Kuan-Han Sun, Chinese-born nuclear physicist, recently displayed the unique photograph he made by bombarding film with neutrons from the University of Pittsburgh cyclotron thus making the film radio-active. When held in contact with unexposed photographic paper, a replica of the picture on the film was produced on the paper.

But the new process threatens no revolution in the photographic print business, Dr. Sun declared, adding that "it was tried purely as a research experiment with no commercial project in view. However, it may well have applications in other fields, such as in the recording of secret papers for intelligence work or business transactions."

Atoms Explode

The scientist explained that the neutron bombardment rips into the atoms in the silver coating on the film, knocking out nuclear particles and making the atoms radioactive. These in turn hurl out high-speed electrons and gamma rays, and when a piece of sensitive photographic paper is held in contact with the film, a "carbon copy" of the picture is produced.

Dr. Sun made the film by packing a sheet of film between blocks of paraffin wax. When neutrons from the cyclotron bombarded the encased film, they made it radioactive. The blocks of wax were used to slow down the neutrons to desirable speeds.

The same radioactive effect can be achieved, Dr. Sun said, by bombarding an ordinary glossy photograph, such as a snapshot. But it is easier to work with a positive sheet of film made from the original negative. In his experiment, the scientist first took a negative made of the Westinghouse atom-smasher and then converted it into a positive film for the neutron bombardment.

Dr Sun pointed out that although scientists have been recording radioactive atoms on film for many years in medical, metallurgical and other studies, this is the first time the process has been applied to pictorial photography. The main difference, he explained, is that in the conventional process the "hot" atoms are introduced at the very beginning, whereas with the new technique the atoms involved are made radioactive "on location."

Film Safe to Handle

The process conceivably could be used to record secret documents for government or business transactions, Dr. Sun said. Here the information to be recorded would be written in invisible ink mixed with a substance that would become radioactive upon bombardment with neutrons. This could be either silver, or preferably some hard-to-detect compound which "captures" neutrons at a high rate and thus transforms itself into a radioactive medium. Once this was done, the hidden message would be revealed only upon contact with photographic film or paper.

The scientist said that the intensity of atomic radiation can be made low enough for the print or film to be handled with perfect safety.

Dr. Sun said his work was only a small part of the stepped-up activity in the field of atomic research underway in the United States. He believes there is no limit to the possible uses atomic energy may be put in the future.

Mrs. Margaret Gaddis of Winona Lake, Ind., has attracted national attention in recent months in her campaign for thrift and economy among America's housewives. She says "waste is a sin against married happiness."

Rural Housewife Launches Campaign For Thrift, Economy

A housewife from a grass roots town in Indiana is attracting national attention these days because she practices and proves her preachment that domestic peace of mind and security can come through home thrift and economy.

This lady who is telling the old-fashioned story of housewife thrift and economy is Mrs. Margaret Gaddis of Winona Lake, Indiana In a recent single month she has told her story, by special invitation, on five major radio and television programs in New York and Washington. She was a guest of Nancy Craig (ABC network), Ilka Chase (CBS-TV) and Ruth Crane (TV) of the Washington Star station among others.

In these days of mounting crisis and curtailments, tension and taxes, it is a refreshing theme, one of interest to the housewives in every grass roots community in the United States, that Mrs. Gaddis preaches. She contends that "waste is a sin against married happiness.

Mrs. Gaddis' housewife crusade (for it has become that) began of necessity. Winona Lake, like many little communities in rural America, is served most of the year by a single store—a rural grocery.

Unable to shop around for furnishing and clothing replacements, she used her ingenuity and whatever was at hand, aided by "how-to-do" booklets she wrote away for. She learned so many thrift recipes, short cuts, home repair and dressmaking "tricks" that she resolved to pass them on to other housewives through a booklet of her own—"How to Save $1,000 a Year and Have Fun Doing It."

Mrs. Gaddis is a descendant of Robert Treat Paine, a signer of the Declaration of Independence. She is another example of the housewife that heads the families living in the rural communities of America.

Dr. Kuan-Han Sun, nuclear physicist at the Westinghouse research laboratories, made the world's first atomic ray pictorial photograph. The new process may find application in the recording of secret government or commercial documents.

Demonstration of U.S. Air Power Will Ease Unrest

By Wright A. Patterson

COULD ALL THE PEOPLE of this country have the privilege I had, that of seeing one of the nation's great air fields on which are based America's mighty bombing planes and of meeting many of the personnel of that field, it would remove from their minds, as it did from mine, much of the fear of the Red army.

Not only was it my privilege to see the number and size of the nation's great war birds, but I also had the opportunity of meeting and knowing, in an intimate way, many of the young men who composed their crews, the personnel that can and will provide protection for the American people from any attack a Red enemy may make.

It was the personnel of those crews that constituted the basis of my confidence in our safety, that removed the fear of any attack on the part of Stalin and his Red forces. What that acquaintance did for me it would do for the vast majority of the American people, could they have the same opportunity I had. It was an inspiring experience.

It was not that I was told in facts and figures of the ability and competence of those young pilots, co-pilots, navigators, bombardiers, radar and radio officers, and gunners, for they told me nothing of that. There was in their conversations nothing of brag.

My guess would be that any tendency to brag on the part of any one of them would have meant a quick drop from the rolls of the strategic air command. Nor did their conversations provide me with any "forbidden" information as to what they were doing or as to where they had been through the day or night. I knew nothing of such details, or was told nothing. Of such things they're supposed not to talk, and no member of any crew with whom I was in contact did talk. It was only the "big brass," of whom I saw none, who are permitted to talk.

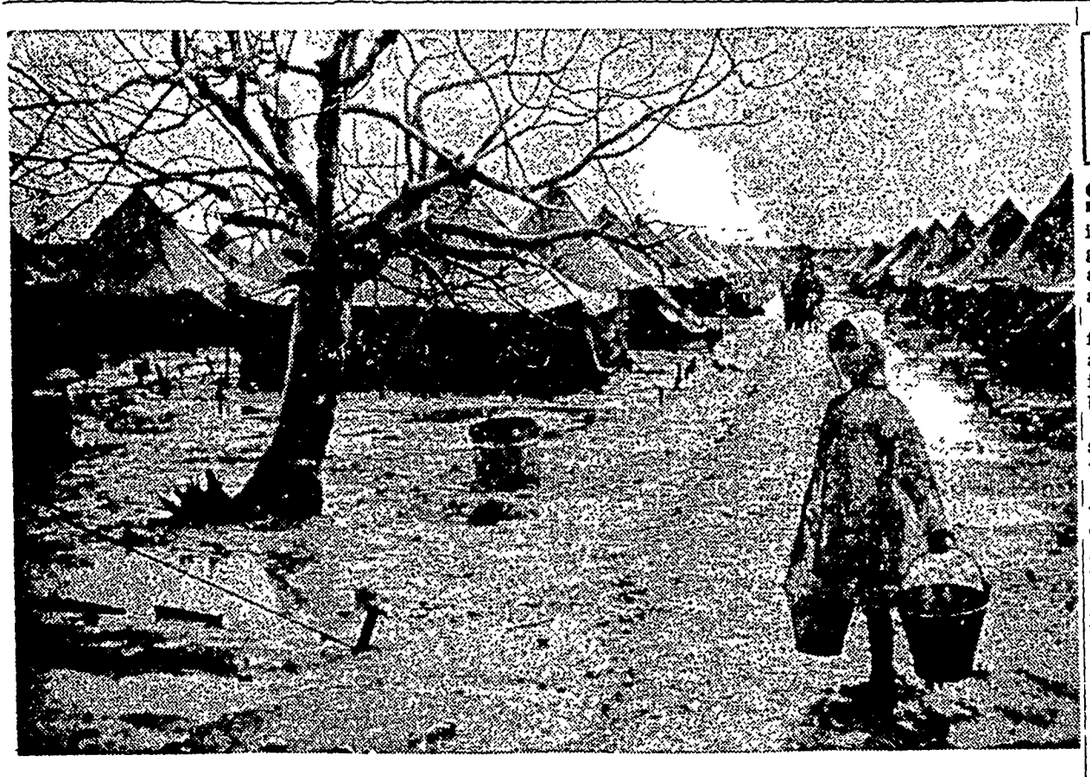
In fact it was the silence on the part of these young officers, on whom we depend for our safety, that added materially to the confidence I acquired in the ability to protect all America from any onslaughts of the Red forces. Today I am confident of their ability to do that job. Such are the men the "big brass" are depending upon for results, and their silence, on subjects on which silence was commanded, gave me added confidence in their ability to protect me, and all America.

The personnel of those crews were careful, thoughtful young men. I saw none I could consider a dare devil who would take chances of an air stunter at a county fair, or attempt a speed needed to win a hotly contested air race. Their job is to get the utmost from the mammoth machines they man, to make every gallon of gasoline count on the long flights called for to reach a target, to force their great and expensive machines—costing more than a million dollars each—to the highest possible altitude from which to drop their death laden bombs, out of reach of the fighter planes of the enemy.

Those things and the pin point dropping of their bombs on enemy targets are what they are taught, but the how of such teachings are forbidden subjects of which they did not talk, but I imbibed from mixing with them the strong impression that they had mastered their lessons, and had to do so if they were to hold their coveted places on the roster of the air command.

When the day comes the greater number of them will reach the targets to which they are assigned, and most of those who go will come back again, after dropping their bombs on that Red enemy. They are not just trained to fly, but to fly for a definite purpose, and I am confident of their ability to achieve that purpose.

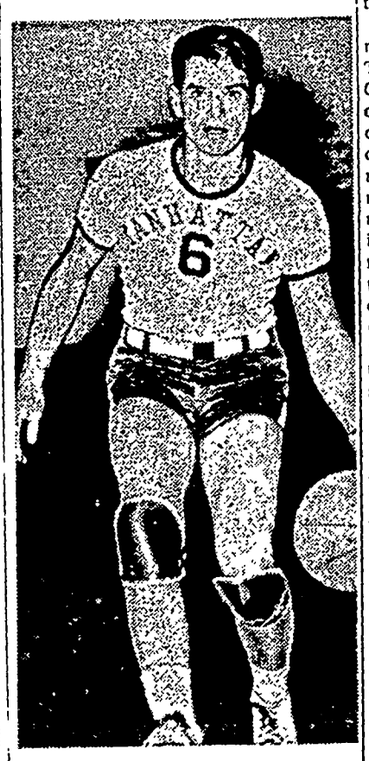
The young men I met, and knew, at that one great air base, and the many hundreds of others like them stationed at the many bases of the strategic air command, represent the force that lies between the American people and that Red enemy they have so greatly feared. It is a force that is fully worthy of our confidence. We can confidently count upon the protection we so ardently seek. As I met and mixed with them, my fears disappeared, as would yours could you have the same privilege.



IMMIGRANT CAMP AFTER DELUGE IN ISRAEL . . Among the farmers of Israel, a recent torrential rainfall was a big occasion for thanksgiving, for the rain saved the crops of the land from what was described by all the agricultural experts in Israel as a 'major catastrophe.' However, the large rain brought nothing but a large portion of hardship and misery to the tent cities that are the immigrant camps. This camp near Tel Aviv became a quagmire. About 20 per cent of the tents collapsed and almost all of them were flooded by surface water that the ditches couldn't carry away. The Israeli army rushed help to those most badly in need.

"WONJU" SIT BY MY FIRE? . . . Says one of these G.I.'s in the Wonju area of Korea to the cameraman, showing the native propensity of the American soldier to wisecrack in any situation. There isn't much to laugh about in the 25-degree-below-temperature that is driving these Americans to hover close to their pitiful heating arrangements. It is early morning, and the temperature has dropped during the night from a rather comfortable zero. Wonju had been a contention point for Communist and U.N. forces for about two weeks.

VISIONS OF WAR . . . German school children gape at American Pershing tank rolling out of the Grunewald station in Berlin, one of the 22 heavy tanks equipped with 90 mm guns which arrived to reinforce the American sixth infantry regiment. They were brought into the American zone through the Soviet zone aboard covered boxcars. There were no incidents in transit. With the British Comets already in Berlin, they provide the Allies with heavy armored artillery.



HELD IN "FIX" . . . Henry E Poppe, former Manhattan basketball star, was one of the players held with gamblers on a charge of offering a $1,000 bribe to "fix" a basketball game between Manhattan and De Paul.

STAR TAKES THE SUN . . . Star of the future, sultry-eyed Mitzi Gayner, displays some of the charms that are making her a star at one of the top ranking Hollywood studios. She is basking on a beach near Hollywood. Mitzi can be seen next in a picture about life in a sorority, "Take Care of My Little Girl," if the name isn't changed before it hits the theaters. Like many another youthful actress, Mitzi spends most of her time at the beach between jobs on pictures.

REMEMBERS NIGHTMARE . . . Rolf Cersiman arrived recently in New York with an account of his enforced job in Polish concentration camp. He says the Nazis in 1943 made him throw 600 bodies into furnaces.

KATHLEEN NORRIS
Covered Wagon

SOME AMERICAN FAMILIES are going to have a terrible time in the next few years, and they are going to make difficulties for us all, and remind us that we are in a bad way.

Other American families will face this crisis as an adventure, and make it a period of such family co-operation that it actually will be enjoyable.

It is for Mother—and in a lesser sense Dad—to decide which path the family is going to take.

If you decide for the courageous way, get things in line right now. Gather the family together and make a little speech something like this:

"We are now climbing up into a prairie schooner, popularly known as a Covered Wagon. We are going to take along only the very necessities of life. Here on this blackboard your father and I have made a note of what we owe. You will see that it is something over $300. Our first job is to pay that off.

"When that is paid, food limitations, gas limitations and power limitations will have come to America. They will not be as rigorous as those other nations — almost all other nations—have had to endure for the past 10 years. But to you they will seem severe.

Inexpensive Meals

"They will include meals that will fill you warmly and appetisingly, but that to you will not seem like meals at all. This means that such dishes as macaroni and cheese, or beans, or a thick soup, or waffles, will each form a whole supper. Once a day you will have vegetables, and perhaps a little meat, but put steaks and chops and roasts and broilers out of your minds, once and for all. Breakfast will be an inexpensive fruit, like baked apples or stewed apricots, oatmeal, and toast with butter substitute. Mid-meal cokes and chocolate bars and milk shakes are out. If you don't like one meal—let us say you do not care for stuffed cabbage, baked sweets and prune shortcake—why, then you will be all the hungrier for the next meal.

"Lights must be turned out the minute you are through with them. Towels must be used carefully. Clothes must be worn for more than one season. Long distance calls are out. If you children can find means of making pocket money, by all means do so, and take in Saturday movies or Sunday hikes. But remember that this household is doing its share in the great government effort by going through the process known to mariners as shortening the sail. There must be no complaints. Any suggestions as to further economies or more appetising meals will be welcome, but no grumbling

"And just get it into your young American heads that whatever you sacrifice or suffer you are not enduring one-tenth of what your big brothers and cousins are facing—even when they are only in army camps at home Loneliness, homesickness, the deadly monotony of drill, the lack of personal freedom —these things you are not expected to meet. And this is the best of war. The worst is the cold, the pain, the shock and fear of battle fronts; the misery of dying without one look from a loving home face; the dazed horror of coming home to be forever helpless, or in pain, or in the dark.

Poverty Abroad

"In gallant England children now speak, and will always speak, of an ordinary egg as a 'shell egg.' They have been allowed two shell eggs a month for a period of ten years. In Denmark because of fuel and power conservation, there is no hot water after four o'clock, except for hospitals. In Germany children pick up the chocolate wrappers our occupation forces drop and suck them for the taste of sweet. In China small boats crowd about our service vessels hoping up for food the grapefruit shells, the stale bread, the half-rotten potatoes that are thrown overboard.

"You'll never come to that. You'll emerge, as your country always has emerged, from this time of trial, all the stronger."

You may be grateful all your life that you had it. You may get a new sence of values, of the meaning of money and budgeting, and above all, of the beauty of home love and service and mutual dependence.

"And remember, that whether you like it or not, we have, as a nation, to face it. We can scramble through it with debts and complaints and black marketing and discomfort, or we can leave much of our old waste and extravagance and personal possessive selfishness behind and come out wiser, better than we went in.

Big Money and Resigning Coaches

By GRANTLAND RICE

AS ANOTHER NEW YEAR slid into view the universities of Minnesota, Southern California, Stanford, Ohio State and a few others were looking for new football coaches. Texas had just completed an exchange for Blair Cherry, retired.

Grantland Rice

Savage alumni pressure, the demand for a winning team, had caused most of this turmoil and just about reached the point of a scandal. It has been generally recognized that football, a great game and a magnificent sport in the raw, had become big business in late years. Big business has overshadowed the sporting side.

"Suppose we take the case of Jeff Cravath at Southern California," a well-known authority out this way said. "Cravath is a fine fellow and he wasn't a bad coach. But Southern California has a big sporting program to support. Football does most of the supporting. Losing teams at Southern California in the last two years had fallen off some $400,000 from other normal years. The fact that Cravath had won four Pacific Coast championships was forgotten. The problem had now become an economic matter. Southern California, being a private institution, couldn't afford another bad year. I mean financially. So Cravath had to go."

Football has reached the point where you must have a winning team or take a financial beating. It has been shown that it costs leading colleges from $250,000 to $275,000 a year to run a football season. A bad year in the field means a bad year or even two at the box office.

The alumni pressure on football coaches has become scandalous This pressure became so heavy this last fall that Blair Cherry of Texas, Wes Fesler of Ohio State and Marchie Schwartz of Stanford all resigned. Cherry didn't even wait for the end of the campaign. It so happens that all three of these men are excellent sportsmen and on a high level as football coaches Certainly Cherry and Fesler had two powerful teams, rated 1-2-3 in the national ranking most of the fall. There was no demand for their resignations. They all decided there must be softer ways of making a living.

The Coaching Tangle

Part of the trouble first started when coaches began to jump three- or five-year contracts for better offers. A coaching contract meant very little, but the university always got stung when a contract had to be paid up.

Now universities have tried out the system of signing coaches to 10-year contracts. It remains to be seen how this scheme will work out when better offers are made. At least the universities won't be forced by any alumni group into picking up six or seven years of a long-time contract. Southern California had to pay Jeff Cravath $30,000 to cancel the two years remaining on their agreement.

There are now close to a 100 universities that should be rated on football's big-time list. This number takes in seven or eight big conferences, plus a number of well-known institutions that don't belong to any conference.

Notre Dame is on this latter list. So is Virginia, Miami, Villanova, Santa Clara, St. Mary's, Loyola, Army and Navy. Now it seems to be a reasonable thing to say that all 100 of these universities can't have winning teams. There must be a defeat against every victory. Colleges that set up long winning streaks as a rule do so because they have softer schedules or much better material. And too often getting this material defies any so-called sanity code. This isn't always true There are exceptions. It may have been rough for them but Notre Dame's bad season and Army's defeat by Navy were very healthy for football. So were Michigan's three defeats.

Coaches complain that experts rate their teams far higher than they belong and then start panning them for bad years. There is a good deal to be said for this complaint.

A New Derby Hope

A year ago the blossoming state of California had a new derby dream. His name was Your Host, a comet-streak sprinter who was picked as the coming Derby and triple crown champion. Your Host was a fine sprinter.

Now Santa Anita has another Derby challenger. After going all out for Your Host the west coast is a trifle more subdued about its new entry—another Alibhai colt known as Gold Capitol.

I can say this—Gold Capitol can run out here. How he will run in Kentucky, Maryland or New York is another story. This new challenger is a son of Alibhai and Pocket Edition.

Although Your Host and Gold Capitol have the same sire, Alibhai, they are different types of runners.

Gold Capitol is willing to wait and do most of his running in the stretch.

Rest Is Important, Says Housewife

It has been said that there are lots and lots of ways for people to try to get some sleep at night. Some folks paint their windows black, others use ear plugs to shut out noises, while others count sheep. All of these are good and they do help some folks get their rest, but Mrs. Frank Jones, 1220 Bell, Montgomery, Alabama, has the best way to get a fine night's rest. Mrs. Jones, who didn't rest well at night before she took HADACOL, is able to say, after taking HADACOL, "I rest wonderfully now!" Mrs. Jones found that HADACOL supplied Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin and Iron in which her system was deficient.

Here is Mrs. Jones' own statement: "For a long time I had been bothered with indigestion and sour stomach. Food didn't seem to agree with me. I always had that uneasy fullness after I ate. I got to where I didn't want to eat. I had no energy. Felt like I couldn't make it during the day. I also was very nervous. I didn't rest well at night. A friend of mine told me about HADACOL. After the fourth bottle I felt wonderful. My food agreed with me —no more indigestion or sour stomach. My appetite is terrific. I now have lots of energy and my nervousness has gone. I rest wonderfully now. In fact, I feel good all the way 'round. I recommend HADACOL to everybody—it's wonderful."

If your druggist does not have HADACOL, order direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana. Send no money. Just your name and address on a penny post card. Pay postman. 1951 HEART FARMER

Iowa Heart Association

Albert Leisinger, Waverly, Iowa, veteran of World War II, is the 1951 Heart Farmer. Shown here is a part of a spring-trip latch on the barn door which permits it to be opened if hands are loaded with feed, tools or milking equipment. Leisinger was wounded when a piece of shrapnel lodged in his heart muscle. Delicate surgery, careful medical supervision and a policy of "taking it easy" have all made it possible for him gradually to return to work on the farm. He credits the research and education of such organizations as the Iowa Heart Association for helping him and many others with diseased or damaged hearts to live normal lives. This latch arrangement shown above is only one of many labor-saving devices on the Leisinger farm.

Fall At New Klemme Mill Fatal To Workman Sat.

NOEL ZUNKEL, 43 OF OGDEN KILLED INSTANTLY IN 30-FOOT DROP

Russel H. Brooks, Jr., Seriously Injured, Taken To Hospital

Noel Zunkel, 43, of Ogden, Iowa, single was instantly killed and his companion, Russel H. Brooks, Jr., was seriously injured when the two men, who had been working on a scaffold, fell about 32 feet to the frozen ground below at about 9:00 o'clock Saturday morning.

Two workmen on the inside of the building saw them fall past a window and immediately went to their aid. Zunkel was dead and Brooks was given medical aid only a few minutes after the accident and rushed to the Mercy hospital where he gained consciousness for a few minutes. Brooks suffered a skull fracture, fractured left arm, fractured ribs and internal injuries. His physician reported that Tuesday morning Brooks was in a serious condition but was showing encouraging improvement.

A brother of the dead man, Galord Zunkel came a few hours after the accident with the funeral director from Boone and the body was taken to Schroeder Funeral Home. Mr. Zunkel was a single man and lived in a trailer at the Joe Finnegan home.

Mr. Brooks is married and has a family who spend part of the time with him in Klemme. They had a trailer at the Walter Lemke home.

Independent Steel Crew

Mr. Zunkel and Mr. Brooks, together with a helper, worked independently of the T. E. Ibberson Construction Co. of Minneapolis, who have the contract for erecting the new $100,000 mill for the Klemme Cooperative Grain Co. Mr. O. E. Moe, superintendent of the project stated the men were putting on corrugated steel sheets on the side of the building when the accident happened. No one saw the men fall from the scaffold, which was suspended by heavy ropes and had a railing on the three sides, and was nailed to the side of the building. It is not known how or why the workmen fell from the scaffold.

Mr. Moe stated that he had been constructing mills for 34 years and this was the first fatal accident that had happened on any of his projects. Every precaution is taken to insure the safety of the men at work. Mr. Zunkel, who was killed, was the foreman of his steel workers crew.

Town Shocked At News Of Fatality

The people of Klemme were shocked when they heard of the terrible accident as all of the men on the construction crew are all very nice fellows, of good character, quite and friendly workmen of the highest type. The men and their families have gained a place in Klemme and all are considered as belonging to our town.

O. W. FRIEDOW WILL HOLD PUREBRED SOW SALE SATURDAY P. M.

O. W. Friedow will hold his eighteenth sale of pure bred Poland China sows and gilts at his farm northwest of Klemme Saturday afternoon at 1:00.

Friedow will put through the sale ring some 50 head of fine gilts featuring the services of Safe Model. Lucky and U. S. Standard, some of the breed's outstanding boars.

Mr. Friedow emphasizes that he will have plenty of good sows for the farm trade, and that they will be sold at prices the average farmer can well afford to pay to bring up his own herd for pork production.

REGULATIONS GOVERNING RETAIL SALES OF FARM SEEDS

Ray E. Hunsley, the County Weed Inspector, has received word from the Iowa State Department of agriculture calling attention to the law governing the retail of farm seeds

All sales of farm seeds in Iowa by individual farmers to their neighbors and at auction sales, as well as sales through regular cannels, are subject to the law's provisions.

The law requires that the farm seed container be tagged or labeled with the variety name, weed content, germination, and purity. Under some conditions, still further detail must appear on the tag or label. Penalty for failure to observe the law is punishable by a fine not to exceed $250.

Farmers having farm seed to sell their neighbors or to offer at auction should send a sample to the Seed Testing Laboratory, Department of Agriculture, Des Moines, Iowa. A report of the analysis, carrying details required for labeling or tagging, will be provided at a cost of $1.00 per sample.

Harry Schuster Family Moves To Cedar Rapids

Mrs. Harry Schuster and children left Thursday for Cedar Rapids to join Mr. Schuster who is employed there at a defense factory. Lloyd Lau hauled their furniture to Cedar Rapids in his truck Thursday.

Mr. Schuster retains his interest here in the Klemme Hardware Co. with Wm. Fuss, but has taken a leave of absence to work on radar equipment.

School Board

ANNUAL SCHOOL ELECTION WILL BE HELD MARCH 12

Two Directors And Treasurer To Be Elected On School Board

The annual School Election will be held at the Fire Station beginning at noon on Monday, March 12th, at which time 2 directors will be elected to succeed Mrs. Margaret Arnold and Everett Guth, each for a three-year term, and a treasurer to succeed A. R. Arnold for a 2-year term.

We understand all of the above are candidates for re-election on the Board. Candidates who wish to be on the ballot should file their petition with the secretary, A. J. Kudje, on or before 10 days before the election.

JUNIOR HIGH SPLITS DOUBLE HEADER

The Junior High girls threw a scare into the Corwith girls here February 14. The final result was Corwith 27, Klemme 21, but it took an overtime game to do it.

The score by quarters (Klemme first) 4-4, 5-12, 15-15, 21-21, and 21-27.

Klemme led with just 8 seconds in the game 21-19 but Kroft shot the basket that tied it up.

Bridges led Klemme with 11 points, Boland 2, Janssen 2. Wilson, Clabough and Haefner all played good defensively.

Kroft led Corwith with 17 points. The Corwith girls have not lost yet this season.

Our record is now 4 wins 6 loses. The Junior High boys romped over the Corwith boys 23-6.

Score by quarters (Klemme first) 2-2, 7-4, 13-7, and 23-6.

The scoring was done by Thieman with 7, Neuberger 6, Barz 4, Dulmes 4 and Jacobs 2.

This was our 8th win this season.

IT'S THE LAW IN IOWA...
KEEP 500 FEET BEHIND FIRE TRUCKS
GOING TO FIRE VIOLATION
KEEP YOUR DISTANCE
FIRE TRUCKS MAY STOP OR SLOW DOWN SUDDENLY!

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

Fires, thank goodness, aren't too common. So, when there is a fire, it's a pretty exciting event. We all want to get out and follow the fire trucks and watch our fireman fight the fire.

Well, that's natural. But it's too easy for spectators to become a "team" fignting the firemen.

You've probably read or heard of cases where a traffic jam or accident slowed down fire trucks on their way to a fire, or kept them from getting there at all.

That's why Iowa law requires motorists to get out of the way and stop their cars until the fire trucks go by, and why Iowa law also says vehicles must stay at least 500 feet behind fire trucks on their way to a fire.

Fire trucks, seeking the fastest way to the scene of a fire, may make unpredictable stops and turns, and 500 feet is the leeway they need to do that without danger of an accident.

Your Iowa Safety Congress suggests: "Give fire trucks room for stopping and turning . . they may want to stop your home from burning!"

Town Election This March

TOWN ELECTION WILL BE HELD MON., MARCH 26

Petitions For Candidates Must Be Filed 15 Days Before Election Date

Klemme is one of the few towns which have their town election on the un-even years. This being the year 1951 therefore will be Town Election year in Klemme.

The election will be held on Monday, March 26. The law states that candidates for office must have their petitions filed with the Town Clerk at least 15 days before the election, which would be March 10th.

Will Call Caucaus

Mayor W. C. Keraus says he will call a Town Caucus in the near future for the purpose of nominating a town ticket. Nominations may be made either by holding caucuses, or by petition.

Present members of the town governing body are: W. C. Keraus, mayor with the following as councilmen: Lloyd Sherwood, Fred Barz, Wm. Fuss, Roy Schaefer and Orville Bridges. A. R. Arnold is clerk of the board.

Should Have Second Ticket

For the sake of competition and to give the voters a choice, a second ticket should be filed, regardless of who is on the first ticket. No doubt there will be two tickets in the field.

Business Anniversary Well Attended At Bell's Produce

Saturday Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bell celebrated the Fifth Anniversary in business in Klemme, by serving hot coffee and doughnuts during the afternoon.

Folks were dropping into their store throughout the afternoon for the free lunch and to congratulate the Bells. A salesman for the Bolson Feed Company was also present to meet customers of the store.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Lemke Entertained Friends

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Lemke entertained friends at 3 tables of "500" at their home Friday evening.

KLEMME TAKES PAIR FROM ROWAN TEAMS

Klemme closed its regular season here Tuesday night by winning a pair of games from Rowan. The girls led off with a 58-41 triumph after piling up a 26-19 margin by intermission. Nellie Greiman led the victors with 35 points. The Shamrocks copped the boys game 38-26 after a slim halftime edge of 14-12. Ron Karsjens hit 15 points for Klemme and D. Freese topped Rowan with 14.

AVERY SUNBEAMS MET ON FEBRUARY 17TH

The 16 Avery Sunbeams which were present at Maxine Stille's home on February 17th decided to give $5.00 to the Youth Exchange and $5.00 to the Red Cross. This year the club is also making a layette for the Red Cross. Mary Ann Blumer gave a demonstration on correct tension. A demonstration on proper sewing equipment was given by Kay Jacobs.

Judy Brede told the Club about fabric for the individual. Mrs. Burgess led the club in an activity of color. Each member was told in some order what colors they looked best in. Marlene Blumer told the club the story of the Cradle Song by Johannas Brahns. Kay Jacobs and Ione Rosendahl helped Maxine Stille serve a delicious lunch.

Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Bachman are proud parents of a baby girl born Monday, Feb. 19th at the Mercy hospital in Mason City. She has been named Coleen Kay and tipped the scales at 7 lbs. 10 oz.

Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Stille, 219 21st S.E., Mason City, are the parents of a baby boy born to them on Tuesday, February 13, at the Mercy hospital. The happy event accounts for the broad smile put on by Quentin Stille, who is now in the grandfather class.

They have named the new baby Glen Allen. He weighed 7 lbs.

Mexico Trip

STROMERS AND KRAMERS RETURN FROM 3 WEEKS TRIP TO MEXICO

Mr. and Mrs. Vern Stromer and Mr. and Mrs. Omar Kramer returned home last week from a 5,400 mile trip that took them as far south as 200 miles beyond Mexico City, Mexico. They also toured through Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas and Oklahoma and saw a lot of sights.

They especially enjoyed the trip into Mexico and said the scenery there was very beautiful. They found Mexico City to be very modern and interesting. They said accomodations throughout Mexico were very good, that motels and hotels were clean and modern and that meals were as good or better than in the States. They had no difficulty whatever in traveling through Mexico, but Mr. Stromer indicated that it would have been more enjoyable and simple if the party could have spoken Spanish.

Coming back into the States they came via Brownsville, Texas. Mr. Stromer stated that the oranges and grapefruit trees and vegetables in the Valley were completely destroyed by the big freeze. The orchards were being cleared out with bulldozers, the trees piled and burned. He said it was a sad sight to see so much destruction caused by the freeze.

Mr. Stromer took colored movies of the trip and will have a lot of interesting pictures to show his friends.

HANCOCK RURAL YOUNG PEOPLE MET FEB. 12

The Hancock County Rural Young People held their regular monthly meeting December 12 at the Central States Building in Britt. Roll call was answered by stating one fact about Lincoln. RYP officers were urged to attend a National Leadership Training School in Des Moines February 25, 26, 27, and 28. Members were informed that the State RYP assembly would be held March 16, 17 and 18 at Ames. It was also announced that Lois Hueneman was chosen to go to Europe this June as one of the International Exchanges.

The Hancock County RYP members are planning to present a variety program, "Minstrels, Melodies, and Madness' Wednesday, March 7th at the Britt High School which will consist of a one-act play, minstrel acts, skits, musical numbers, square dancing and tap dancing. The District Officers Training School will be Thursday, February 22 at Garner REA building. Ten counties will be represented at this meeting. Slides of the American Farm Bureau trip to Texas were shown, as well as some moving pictures. Lunch was served by the recreation committee composed of Ruth Upmeyer, Edith Jensen, Mildred Goll and Lois Abele.

Klemme Girl Rates I. S. T. C. Honor Roll

A total of 285 students were listed on the fall quarter honor roll at Iowa State Teachers college released recently by Dr. M. J. Nelson, dean of faculty. The honor roll requires a grade point average of 3.25 or above, with a 4.0 an "A" and a 3.0 a "B".

Among the students recognized was Marcelle C. Josten of Klemme.

Mrs. Louisa Knoke entertained the Birthday Club at her home Friday where the ladies enjoyed visiting and playing games. It being Mrs. Knoke's birthday she received many nice gifts. Later in the day Mrs. Knoke served a nice lunch to the ladies.

Rev. Cunningham Heads County Cancer Fund Drive

REV. S. W. CUNNINGHAM

GARNER MINISTER AGAIN HEADS CANCER DRIVE

Announcement of the re-appointment of Rev. S. W. Cunningham, Pastor of the Methodist Church, of Garner, as fund raising chairman for the cancer control program in Hancock County was made today by Frank B. McTigue, state campaign chairman of the Iowa division of the American Cancer Society.

Mr. Cunningham was campaign chairman in Hancock county last year, and raised 186 per cent of the county's quota.

Mr. McTigue expressed great satisfaction in Mr. Cunningham's reappointment inasmuch as he played such an important part in helping the Iowa division in April 1950 raise more dollars over its quota than any other state division, and thus allow expansion of the division's research, education and service programs.

In accepting the appointment again Mr. Cunningham stated, "I have reassumed this community leadership to help do my part in saving lives both today and in the future. Our drive in April will be two-fold: one—the solicitation of funds to strike back at cancer through research, and two—the promotion of an educational program that may well save the lives of some of us here in Hancock County. In 1949 deaths from cancer declined in Iowa whereas throughout the nation it increased. This indicates that a successful educational campaign is being waged along with Iowa's record-breaking fund campaigns.

"In reaching our twin objectives this April, which has been designated by Congress as cancer control month, we are going to need the energetic and generous support of the people of this county in an opportunity of service that is both a duty and a privilege."

Heading up the year-round program of cancer education and service is Mrs. Arthur Ross, Garner, who is chapter chairman.

Mrs. Oxley In Klemme On Friday On Business

Mrs. Harold Oxley of Corwith has been appointed by the Health Improvement Association of Hancock and the Blue Cross and Blue Shield Hospital of Des Moines to serve as a Special Representative for Hancock County.

She will be at the Virgil Cook home in Klemme on Friday, February 23rd, from 10 a. m. to 4:00 p. m. where the present members of Bule Cross are asked to contact her to sign agreements for the Medical and Surgical Benefits. Anyone under 65 years of age and in good health and desiring of joining this non-profit prepaid service Hospital Service and medical plan may see Mrs. Oxley on Friday.

BY RAY EASTMAN

It was the school bus that the Highway Patrolman saw first, It was pulled off on the shoulder, headed toward him, and there were small, still faces looking out.

About a hundred feet farther down the highway was the car, headed the other way, parked on the shoulder. An ashen-faced man climbed out of the car as the patrolman pulled up and stopped.

"Officer," he said, voice trembling, "I feel terrible about this. I've got kids of my own, and I know . . . "

He stopped, took a breath, "But it really wasn't my fault. I saw the school bus stopping, and the lights flashing, so I slowed down. But just as I went past, this kid ran out from behind the bus, and . . well, I just couldn't miss him, that's all."

The patrolman poised his pencil. "How fast were you going then?"

"Uh," the man swallowed, "I'd say about 25. Maybe 30. Not much more. I tried to stop. What more could I do?"

"Well," the partolman spoke slowly, "you could have obeyed the law. The law says that when you meet a school bus with its flashing lights on, you must slow down to 20 miles an hour. You didn't."

"But," the driver interrupted. "I didn't know that."

"Furthermore," the patrolman explained, "the law says that when the school bus stops, you must stop, too. Whether you're meeting the bus or coming up behind it. You must stay stopped as long as the stop arm is out That's the law, and you didn't stop."

* * *

It was like a refrain, the way the driver kept saying "I didn't know." But ignorance of the law is no excuse. And no amount of ignorance can ever men a broken bone or bring back a human life.

ART WELLEMEYER AND GEO. WASHINGTON BIRTHDAYS FEBRUARY 22ND

Art Wellemeyer claims that the red calendar date of Feb. 22 is on the calendar to remind people of his birthday, as well as George Washington's.

Art's birthday was celebrated Sunday at the home of his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Burton Hanson of near Wesley, with a big dinner and family gathering. Others present were Mr. and Mrs. James Carlson and children of Klemme, and Mr. and Mrs. Donald Bacon and children of Lake Mills.

Mrs. Hanson had baked and decorated a birthday cake for the happy event, and believe it or not, but it was big enough to have 71 lighted candles on it' Art received some nice gifts with which to remember the happy occasion.

LIBERTY BUSY BEES 4-H CLUB NEWS

The measurement and alternation of a pattern was a demonstration given by Rachel Hueneman and Marion Stromer at the January meeting of the Liberty Busy Bees 4-H Club.

Roll call was answered by 11 members on "My Best Color." It was decided upon the most becoming color for each girl.

Bethel Haberkamp gave a talk on the Appearance of Shoes. The material for the layette which we are planning on making was passed out.

The Club held their annual Christmas Party in December to which the parents and their friends were invited.

Glory and Service

Lesson for February 25, 1951

THERE ARE two sides of the Christian life that don't seem to mix. One of these we can call Glory. The very word suggests something not of this world; it calls up mystic visions, inner raptures, the light of heaven. We think of saints and angels in glory, for that is where they belong But we ourselves can have a bit of it here and now.

Dr. Foreman

When Glory Comes

NOT every Christian has an experience of glory in this life. But those who do, usually find that it comes only at rare intervals, when one is alone, after long and perhaps painful prayer.

Sometimes it is an actual experience of something like great and blinding light; sometimes a hearing of voices as from another shore; sometimes a feeling of unutterable peace and joy such as nothing in this world can give. Whatever form it takes, the experience we are calling "glory" is always connected in the mind and heart with the felt presence of God. It may come in church or it may not; it may come on a river at sunset or some golden night beneath the stars.

However it comes, one longs above all things for it to remain. And while it does remain, one wishes to hear no human voice.

When Service Calls

BUT the Christian life is not all glory, by any means. If the glory-side is spiritual, the service-side is material. If the glory cannot be shared, the whole idea of service is sharing. For moments of glory there can be no date nor schedule, no predicted time and place, but acts of service must often be done by calendar and clock.

Glory may not come to every one but service is the duty of all. Yet service, like glory, may come to us from without. At a time when one least expects it, one will be called on for a service one is scarce prepared to give.

Service calls us every day; weariness and pain may at times bar us from glory, but only the last weariness and the most disabling pain will disbar us from service. Glory may be for those far advanced in the spiritual life; service is for these too, but also for the beginners.

The Weaving of Gold and Grey

NOW the trouble is that glory and service seem to get in each other's way. We actually feel like different persons, in glory and in service.

Let us say on a morning in church, when the winter sun is streaming through the windows on the communion bread and wine, and in the silence the solemn words are heard once more: "This is my body, broken for you," one may feel, in Miss Millay's words,

"This moment is the best the world can give,
The tranquil blossom on the tortured stem."

But the next day, when one is teaching a class of mischievous boys, or helping a neighbor fix a flat tire, or baby-sitting, or spading up a garden,—one does not feel like the same person. Can religion, the Christian religion, take in both glory and service?

Some Christians have thought not. Some have gone in for one, some for the other. Some live only for the high hours of worship and rapture, counting all the time between their radiant hours as "dark nights of the soul." Others leave worship to others; they are seldom to be found at communion, but they can always be counted on to help with church suppers or community chest drives.

Jesus showed us the better way. It is not a choice between glory and service; his life included both. He had his high moments, as on the Mount of Transfiguration; but they did not long remain. Presently he found himself down in the valley with disciples who did not understand him, and with demons hard to cast out.

Jesus took both sides of religion and made them one. There was glory in his service and there was service in his glory. (In the very hour of his transfiguration, did he not speak of his death?) The true Christian life, like that of Jesus, weaves the gold and the grey together, the shining gold of life's high moments, and the long-wearing grey of the years of service.

AROUND THE HOUSE

When your clothesline needs washing, coil it around a washboard or a piece of wood about that size; stand it in a tub of hot soapy water, and scrub it thoroughly with a brush. To avoid twisting and tangling, let it dry right on the board, and put it up again when it's completely dry.

One of the most delicate fabrics of all, when it comes to washing, is wool. Extremely hot water will actually destroy wool fibers, so never put woolens in anything hotter than lukewarm water Don't let them soak for any length of time; don't wring them or twist them; don't hang them up to dry Wash them quickly, squeeze the water out gently, and spread them flat for drying.

One of the best ways to keep a clothesline clean is to take it indoors when it's not being used, and that's a simple job if you screw eyes into the posts and fasten hooks on the ends of the line. Mighty handy when a sudden summer shower pops up and you want to get the line indoors in a hurry.

NO CONSTIPATION FOR 25 YEARS

"My husband introduced me to ALL-BRAN shortly after we were married. I use it in my cooking as well as for breakfast. The result: we're regular as clockwork!" Mrs. Antonina Graziano, 453 Garfield Ave., Jersey City, N. J.

One of many unsolicited letters from ALL-BRAN users.

If you suffer from constipation due to lack of dietary bulk, eat an ounce (about ½ cup) of crispy Kellogg's ALL-BRAN daily, drink plenty of water. If not satisfied after 10 days, return empty box to Kellogg's, Battle Creek, Mich. Get DOUBLE YOUR MONEY BACK!

Save $2.00 On This Home Mixed Cough Syrup

Easily Mixed. Needs No Cooking.

Cough medicines usually contain a large quantity of plain syrup—a good ingredient, but one which you can easily make at home. Mix 2 cups of granulated sugar with 1 cup of water. No cooking! Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Then get from your druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle, and fill up with your syrup. This gives you a full pint of wonderful medicine for coughs due to colds. It makes a real saving because it gives you about four times as much for your money. Never spoils, and children love it.

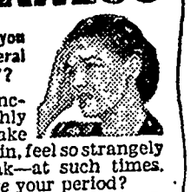
This is actually a surprisingly effective, quick-acting cough medicine. Swiftly, you feel it taking hold. It loosens phlegm, soothes irritated membranes, makes breathing easy.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, a most reliable, soothing agent for throat and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

FOR EXTRA CONVENIENCE GET NEW READY-MIXED, READY-TO-USE PINEX!

Value Your Health More Than Riches

Some folks think that fine clothes and fine, big houses are the most important things in life, but these things really don't mean too much if a person doesn't feel well enough to enjoy them. Most folks don't realize this, but Mrs. Lucy Braswell, of Route 2, Stone Mountain, Ga., realizes it very well. Mrs. Braswell takes HADACOL, and by taking HADACOL she found she is helping her system overcome deficiencies of Vitamins B_1, B_2, Niacin and Iron, which HADACOL contains.



Here is Mrs. Braswell's own statement: "I have been sick for some time with stomach disturbances. I began taking HADACOL and I have been taking it about six weeks. I am so much better and much stronger. I will continue to take HADACOL. It sure has helped me. I tell my friends about HADACOL. I can't praise HADACOL too much. I am 59 years old."

If your druggist does not have HADACOL, order direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana. Send no money. Just your name and address on a penny post card. Pay postman. State whether you want the $3.50 hospital economy size or $1.25 trial size. Remember, money cheerfully refunded unless you are 100% satisfied. —Adv

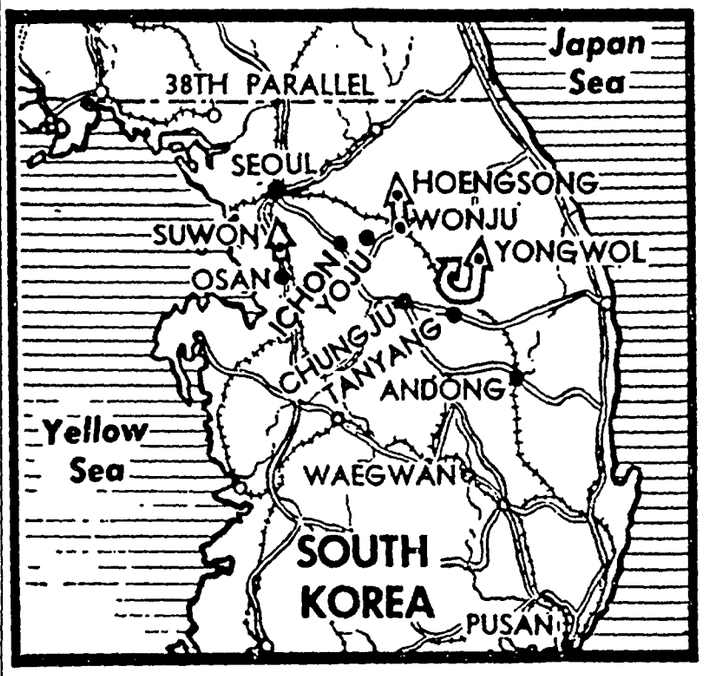
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Government Issues Stopgap Order Freezing All Wages and Prices; AEC Conducts Atomic Experiments

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



The mystery of the vanishing Chinese armies who failed to take advantage of their breakthrough into South Korea remained unsolved as U.N. forces advanced toward the 38th parallel. The advance was not an all-out push, but a probing action by U.N. forces in an effort to locate the enemy.

WAGES-PRICES:

A Stopgap Order

A stopgap order freezing wages and prices was issued by the government. Although unsatisfactory as far as the average consumer was concerned, the measure at least was a stab toward stopping the wage-price spiral that had swept across the nation in the last few months.

The main effect of the order was that it brought to a standstill hundreds of collective-bargaining negotiations in industry Prices on a number of goods and services were frozen, but there were also a number of exemptions, the most important one being the price of food.

According to administration spokesmen the price freeze would be replaced as fast as possible by specific ceiling prices, industry by industry. Such a procedure could go on forever.

The wage freeze would be wiped out as soon as a flexible wage policy could be compiled, it was announced. This "flexible policy" was considered necessary to permit lagging wages in some industries to come up to a certain standard.

The price order was complex and confusing, especially with respect to farm products and food.

First of all, there was no freeze of any food prices at the farm level.

But on the processing, wholesale, and retail levels, food prices were frozen if the farm prices of those foods were above parity. Thus, beef, veal, pork and lamb prices were frozen.

(Parity is a sliding scale designed to keep farm prices at a fixed relation to the farmer's costs. The law prohibits price ceilings below parity.)

Most farm products at the time of the wage-price freeze were below parity. Poultry and eggs were examples. If and when the farmer's price went up on those things, the wholesaler and retailer could not raise prices to increase their margins. The increase, however, would be automatically passed along all the way to the consumer.

Other things exempt from price controls included communication and publication fields—like newspapers, books, magazines, radio, television and theater admission

AEC Tests

Captain Carroll Tyler, manager of the AEC Santa Fe operations office at Los Alamos, N.M., announced test detonations at the atomic testing range near Las Vegas. Tyler gave no details of the tests. His announcement was a warning to residents of the area that such tests were scheduled.

A-BOMB:

Tests Rock Las Vegas

While most of the world waited with apprehension at the result and announcements of the first atomic explosion in this country in a number of years, residents of Las Vegas, Nevada, 40 miles from the atomic testing range, were irked about the whole business.

The atomic energy commission shrouded its experiments in silence. It was known, however, that three explosions took place. Las Vegas witnesses reported a tremendous white flash in the sky, closely followed by another flash, orange in color and not as bright.

Las Vegas residents reported windows shook, houses trembled and burglar alarms in business establishments were set off.

The last explosion was felt and seen in Boulder City, about 65 miles from the test range.

EUROPE:

Time for Co-operation

In the last few weeks, especially since General Eisenhower made his tour of Europe, there seems to have developed a feeling of mutual co-operation between the United States and our allies.

The reluctance to arm and speed up production that was evident only a few months ago disappeared. Britain has launched a production speed-up and rearmament program. And now France has announced plans to take her place beside the U.S. and Britain.

To further this co-operation, French Premier Rene Pleven arrived in Washington for conferences with President Truman. After a series of meetings it was announced Pleven and Truman were in agreement as to policy in the far east, especially in Korea and Indochina.

Most observers agreed the talks would open the way for greater co-operation among the western nations in the defense of Europe, with much greater participation on the part of France.

Controls

Price administrator Michael V. DiSalle (right) looks on as Attorney General J. Howard McGrath administers the oath of office to 13 officials who head regional and district offices of the economic stabilization organization. These men will direct the price-wage freeze laws.

KOREA:

Mystery Unsolved

The mystery of what happened to the Chinese armies that pushed United Nations forces south of the 38th parallel and seriously threatened to cut them off from Pusan remained unsolved.

An unexpected lull swept over the Korean battle front as Chinese pressure ceased. Then probing attacks northward by U.N. forces failed to make contact with the main armies of the enemy.

Latest reports told of continued movement of U.N. troops northward and only minor resistance.

The situation raised a number of questions and possibilities. For one thing, it raised the question of whether or not the Communist armies had been hurt to the extent they were unable to continue a strong attack. The possibility seemed unlikely in view of the numbers of men available to the Communists.

There were also rumors to the effect the Communists had suffered severely from cold and disease. There were other reports that the Chinese would not fight below the 38th parallel.

The mystery was still unsolved after two weeks of minor fighting. The battlefield lull also relieved the tension on the political front. The urgency of branding China the aggressor in Korea was lessened.

POLITICS:

Republican Policy

The drums of politics, which will grow louder in the next few months, were sounded by Sen. Robert Taft of Ohio when he called on Republicans to meet head on any Truman "truckling" to Communist sympathizers or any appeasement of Russia.

Taft made it plain that he thought the Republicans could defeat the Democrats in the next presidential election on the issue of foreign policy. Whether or not the campaign shapes up along these lines depends greatly on events in the next few months. On the surface it appears that Senator Taft may face some opposition along this line from within his own party.

Senator Taft's influence with Republicans is tremendous, however. He heads the senate G.O.P. policy committee and has been called the leading Republican contender for the 1952 presidential nomination.

In his own words, this seems to be the core of Taft's policy: "We must meet head on any truckling to Communist sympathizers, any appeasement of Russia which is likely to lead to more aggression, and any waste of our resources with the idea that we can buy the support of nations."

DRAFT:

Bitter Controversy

The all-powerful house armed-services committee stepped into the bitter controversy over drafting 18-year-olds for armed service duty with an order to the defense department to consider raising the top draft age from 26 to 30 as an alternative.

The move virtually put a stop to the department's plan of drafting 18-year-olds. Congress may still act on the measure, however, which the defense department reports would provide between 350,000 and 450,000 men during the first year.

Also in the draft news was the announcement by the defense department that non-veterans 19 through 25 who have married since the Korean war began June 25, 1950, should be drafted. Only single non-veterans now are being taken.

Plans also were underway to lower the draft standards. This move would provide perhaps 150,000 men now barred for physical and mental reasons.

ECONOMISTS:

Urge Stiffer Taxes

Four hundred economists, members of 30 institutions throughout the country, recently urged the government to increase taxes and tighten controls.

Their views were interesting in that they all believed that emergency fiscal and credit policies, rather than price-wage controls, constitute our primary defense against inflation.

They recommended:

1. Scrutinize carefully all government expenditures and postpone or eliminate those that are not urgent and essential.

2. Raise tax revenues even faster than defense spending grows, so as to achieve and maintain a cash surplus. Merely to balance the budget is not enough.

3. Restrict the amount of credit available to businesses and individuals for purposes not essential to the defense program.

The recommendation to achieve a cash surplus would require a tax increase of more than $16,000,000,000, the minimum required to balance the new budget.

BRITAIN:

One Bite a Day

While the housewives of this country were grumbling about high prices and hoping price controls would help the situation, British housewives were protesting a drastic new cut in that nation's fresh meat ration.

It was the third cut in three months and this time amounted to 20 per cent. It shriveled the ration for each person in Britain to about a bite a day

CASUALTY LISTS

Nation's Traffic Deaths Top 966,000

Military deaths in all American wars, including Korea, reached a total of 994,000 near the end of January. And it appears likely, should the Korean conflict continue for several more months, that the total could climb well over the 1,000,000 mark.

Americans in every walk of life, from the big cities to the home towns of the nation, shuddered at the thought. But right on the home front there is another casualty list just as startling. At the end of January the 50-year toll of traffic deaths in this country topped 966,000, or 28,000 fewer than the aggregate of all war deaths up to the present time.

In addition, between 29,500,000 and 30,000,000 have been injured since 1900.

Big Fellows

Superman of comic-strip fame has plenty of competition in American folklore, which is filled with tall tales of mighty men. Among them is Big Paul Bunyan, hero of the American lumberjacks Bunyan is described as being so enormous as a baby, his mother had to use "the wheels off of a wheelbarrow as buttons for his jacket."

Suez and Wheat

The Suez Canal owes its construction to wheat. It was built so that the journey of wheat from India to England would be greatly reduced, the American Bakers Association reported.

Barefoot Cobbler

John Greenleaf Whittier, who became famous for his poem, "The Barefoot Boy," once worked as a shoemaker's apprentice! The young Quaker poet put himself through school by making shoes and slippers for the New England ladies.

Bakery Workers

More than 450,000 persons are directly employed in the baking industry, more than in any other phase of the food industry.

Baking Parties

In rural Greece, loaves of bread for engagement parties are kneaded in public with friends and relatives tossing coins into the dough so that the engaged couple can afford a large wedding

Cereal Consumption

The average American obtains between 28 and 30 per cent of both the food energy and protein of his diet by direct consumption of cereal products.

Lost Billfold

Peri Lee and Janet Esser of Guttenberg lost a bill-fold recently. While searching for it, they found a bill-fold belonging to another Guttenberg resident and returned it. They're still hoping some one will do as much for them.

GIRL'S 4-H LEADERS LEARN NEW TECHNIQUE IN SEWING

The Hancock 4-H Girl's leaders are attending the training schools this month on new techniques in clothing construction. The leaders have attended two training schools this month and are attending two more this week.

The leaders are making cotton dresses for spring. They are using the unit method of sewing which is recommended by the extension clothing specialists of Iowa State College.

Stay lining and grainline were emphasized in the lesson. Laying the pattern on the grainline cutting and pressing with the grain of the material helps keep it from stretching. Stayline each piece of the dress with the grain to keep it from stretching. These along with other helps in sewing were included in the lesson.

The 4-H leaders will use these helps in sewing in teaching the 4-H girls in Hancock County easier ways of sewing during their 4-H meetings this year.

The girls are planning their spring and summer wardrobes now. Also with their sewing they are looking forward to their local and county Better Grooming Contest in May and June and to their Style Review Contest in August.

POACHED EGG, CHEESE MAKE GOOD LENTEN DISH

Here's an idea for one of those Lenten dinners, and it's a happy alternate for the meat and poultry now absent from your table. Vary it for the number of people you have to feed. Jewel Graham, foods and nutrition specialist at Iowa State College, calls it . . .

Poached Egg Surprise

This takes 1 cup of white sauce pepped up with 2 tablespoons of chopped green pepper; 4 eggs, 4 slices of toast and soft, sharp cheese such as processed aged cheddar.

Spread the toast thickly with cheese. Poach eggs until firm, place one on each slice of toast and pour hot white sauce over it. Serve right away. Miss Graham tells us this is especially good served with green beans, and a salad of crisp, raw vegetables, with fruit and chocolate cake for desert.

CIVIL DEFENSE

Millard F. Caldwell Faces Task Of Building U. S. Civil Defense

(This is the first of a series of five articles on civil defense as written by Walter A. Shead, Western Newspaper Union's Washington correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. — A tall, lean, square-jawed, broad-shouldered man sits in a temporary office in one of the many converted government buildings—a short two blocks from the White House—whose name is destined to become well known to millions of Americans.

He is Millard F. Caldwell, former governor of Florida, who has been handed the tremendous responsibility of the nation's civil defense and who will head up a volunteer army of civilian Americans which will total some 20,000,000 men and women in every state of the union.

His immediate job is to weld together a small force of approximately 3,000 paid employees, approximately 1,000 of whom will be administrative workers here in Washington, the rest to become field officers in various states and strategic areas.

At the same time he must start from scratch to train these people, who will in turn train his 20-million-man army, in the new field of civilian defense.

Governor Caldwell must come up with the answers to these questions: What can I do to protect myself and my neighbors if an atomic bomb is dropped in or near my home? What about a hydrogen bomb? What protection do I have in case a bacteriological bomb or balloon is loosed in my community? What defense is there against radiological warfare, or the dropping of insect pests or plant diseases to destroy crops and animals?

Governor Caldwell believes that it is entirely within the realm of possibility that the American people face one or all of these horrible methods of modern warfare if the nation should get into a full-scale war with Russia. The extent would depend only upon the enemy's ability to pierce our air defenses, our sea defenses and just how far the Russians were determined to go.

So a well-trained civilian army is as essential to the nation's defense as a well-trained and equipped military force, it is just as essential, and possibly more so in saving the lives of American civilians.

THERE ARE DEFENSES to these atomic bombs, to attacks against health and crops and animals. But every citizen must be as well educated in these defenses, as acutely aware of the danger, and as alertly conscious of just what action to take as he is of any chore of his daily life, for it is possible we shall be living with these dangers for many years to come, if we live.

So the job of the civilian defense administration is to educate the people, to organize defenses, to set up this volunteer army, to see that state legislatures pass such enabling legislation and appropriations as are necessary, and to train men and women in scores of facts incidental to a catastrophe such as certainly will happen if a bomb is dropped in their midst.

These include, not only protection against the bomb itself to minimize loss of life and injury, but efficient first aid, fire fighting, evacuation, health facilities, water supply, medical attention, food supplies, social services, warning signals, and an efficient organization for any contingency, which spreads from the cities into the small towns and rural sections of every area in the nation.

The help of every organization in the nation and of every individual bill be enlisted not only to join in the civil defense, but to help make the masses of the people bomb-conscious, to prevent fear and hysteria so that a major catastrophe may be averted.

The government has been for months making detailed studies of the bombing of European cities in World War II, of the effects of the atomic bombs at Nagasaki and Hiroshimo. They have worked out pattern and effects and defenses. The Puublic Health Service and the American Red Cross have worked out detailed plans for health protection; the bureau of animal husbandy and the bureau of plant industry of the department of agriculture have a plan of action for defense against release of gases, pests and plant disease aimed at animal and crop destruction.

However the effective civilian defense program cannot work on a basis of "let George do it." Every citizen, every organization must constitute himself or itself a committee to learn first-hand just what each con do in the emergency should an enemy plane, bearing death or injury for thousands, pierce the nation's military defenses.

(The second of this series of articles will appear next week.)

THE FICTION CORNER

THE JACKPOT

By Ona Freeman Lathrop

THE night was a murky one. Only the stark bulbs sending their light through the steaming windows of Joe's Diner relieved the darkness. Bill Owen lounged against the door wondering whether to go in. He fingered the lone nickel in his pocket. It would get him a cup of coffee anyway.

3-Minute Fiction

"You here again?" Joe kidded. "What'll it be—porterhouse?"

Bill grinned. "Hand me a menu. I might want breast of guinea."

Then he noticed the girl. She stood by the pinball machine watching the metal balls roll down as a fellow played. There was something about her that made Bill feel uneasy inside. The rain had pelted her hair into thin honey-colored wisps around her small face. She hugged her old polo coat about her. There was a searching look in her grey eyes as she scanned each face. They made him think of somebody.

That was it! She reminded him of the way his kid sister, Kathy might have looked. Kathy had that same kind of hair and that same expectant look on her face, even at twelve when he left home. Kathy was probably quite a girl by now! It made him wince to think of home.

He watched this one fingering the change in her cheap purse. It was only chicken-feed, but she selected a nickel carefully and put it in the slot. Somehow her eyes were too bright as she followed the dancing balls down the incline. It looked as if a lot depended upon whether or not she won.

"You here again?" Joe kidded. "What'll it be—porterhouse?"

Bill slid off the stool and went over. No kid should look like that. He fished out his nickel.

"Here, kid. It's about due. Let me show you how."

He whanged the lever down and gave the machine a little whack at the side. The nickels poured out. As he filled her hands with them, she gasped, "But they're yours."

"Na-ah! G'wan and take 'em, and then go across the street and get yourself a room at Ma Johnson's. It's no night for dames to be out alone," he added gruffly. She hurried out.

An old softie, eh? He could have had a bed himself and a blueplate special. Fool!

"Cup o' java, Joe. On the cuff. I'll be in the chips again soon."

Joe grinned. "Yeah? Not if you play Sandy Claus to all the dames. That one's been hanging about all evening giving every guy that came in the eye. Looking for some one, she said."

THE door slammed and Bill looked around. Here she was back again. She was coming straight toward him. Well, he was through. She needn't try any more tricks.

She slid onto the stool beside him. "Listen, mister, what's your name?" she asked breathlessly.

"J. Pierpont Morgan. What's your's—Barbara Hutton?"

"No, seriously. You remind me of some one. I didn't notice at first—I was so set on winning at the pinball. Could you be Bill Owen?"

"Yeah, I could. Why?" He eyed her curiously.

"Because I've been hunting you. I've covered every joint like this, hoping I wouldn't find you in such a place, but knowing I would. You always had the crazy idea you could get rich the easy way, ever since you hit the jackpot the first time you played when you were a kid. Well, where did it get you?" She was out of breath now.

"Hey, how do you know so much?" he demanded.

"I'm Kathy, your sister Kathy. Oh, Bill, Mon's sick and she's been asking for you. You've got to come home with me."

"Yeah? You are Kathy then! And they'd want me to come home—even this way? Na-ah!" He flicked at his ragged cuff.

"Sure. They knew you weren't making good, or you'd have been back. They just want you to come home—to make Mom better."

Her big grey eyes were welling with tears and her hair hung down wispier than ever, but she was Kathy and his kid days and home all rolled into one. He slipped off the stool and took her arm. He'd been playing out of luck, but at last he'd hit the jackpot.

"Come on, then," he said. "What are we waiting for?"

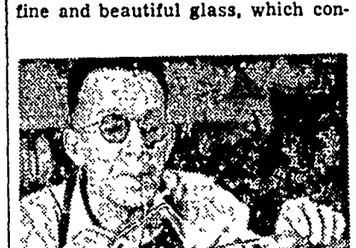
AN ANCIENT CRAFT

Old Art of Glass Blowing Plays Vital Part in Modern Industry

It takes a deft touch, a skilled hand, controlled lung power—and imagination—to apply the ancient art of glass blowing to the demands of today's modern petroleum laboratories. The skill of the blower in making special glass equipment may mean the difference between success and failure of an important research experiment, and the craftsman must be as versatile as his material.

The glass experts of the Shell Oil company shown in the columns below are making a complicated model distillation column in the company's laboratory at Emeryville, California. Glass is used because it is relatively inexpensive, non-reactive to most chemicals, usually non-conductive to electricity, is easily shaped and, perhaps most important, it permits observation of chemical processes inside closed vessels.

The glass column as pictured in this story will be used to test and perfect oil refining processes on a laboratory scale. Next step will be to build a large "pilot plant" version, using actual construction materials. After this has proved itself to the satisfaction of scientists, the design will be incorporated into a real full-scale distillation column,



Drain tubes are cut to the proper length and slotted to regulate overflow level. Only highly trained craftsmen can handle such equipment.

The end of a solid tube of glass is flared. This is the first step in making a tiny bubble tray used in a distillation column.

many stories in height. And it all started with a piece of blown glass—thousands of years ago.

The first use to which glass was put was artistic. It was made to serve man's unending quest for beauty. Thebes (in Egypt) was a center of glass craftsmanship more than 3000 years B C. Theban fabricators first turned out charms, amulets, and beads—objects of no practical use but in high demand for their decorative and supposed supernatural powers. Through accident or design, this early glass was colored. In face, the effort to make glass colorless and transparent was one of the hardest struggles of the glass maker, and has been entirely successful only within modern times.

When Augustus Caesar conquered Egypt (26 B. C.), he ordered that part of the tribute be paid in Egyptian glass articles. This seemed hard on the Egyptians for a time, but the affair took an unexpected turn. Wealthy Romans, seeing the Emperor's beautiful objects, flooded the Egyptian makers with orders for glassware, and the Egyptians grew rich. Within a few years the Romans themselves were making glass.

The Romans were lavish in the production of their glass During the first century A. D. they produced much marvelously complicated work as the millefiori (thousand flowers) design in glass bowls seemingly lined with multi-colored daisies.

Knowledge of glass making spread from the Mediterranean area through the barbarous world of the north. The Romans, who carried the craft to a high state of perfection, introduced it into Gaul and it traveled thence to Britain, where remains of ancient glass works may still be seen.

Venice, destined to reached the peak of fame in glass manufacture, began practicing the art not long after the founding of the city in 420 A. D. By the end of the thirteenth century, Greek artists in Venice were producing fabulously fine and beautiful glass, which contributed vastly to the city's prosperity through exports.

As early as the sixth century, a description of a French banquet specifies that the fowls were served on glass dishes. Later, Fugger, the great merchant, banker, and industrialist of Augsburg, gave to the Emperor Charles V a vessel of molten, spun, cast and twisted glass—at the same time kindly burned up the Emperor's unpaid note for a tidy sum which Fugger had lent him.

We think of woven glass textiles as something comparatively new, yet materials woven of silk and glass were known centuries ago, and ladies made dresses of them. They also adorned their headdress with spun glass aigrettes, and a certain prince made a sensation by displaying curls fashioned of glass. The jeweled glass mirror of Nearly completed the inner column goes into a larger glass jacket and the two pieces sealed together.

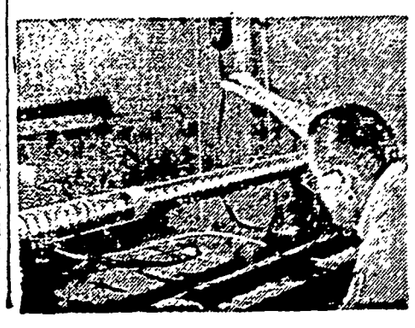
Queen Marie de Medici was included in item No. 102 in the catalog of crown jewels compiled by the French revolutionary government in 1791. It was valued at $30,000 gold.

The early history of glass was glorious — but socially exclusive and expensive.

And each country, as it learned the art of glass making, seemed to give it a new twist. Today, although there are many manufacturers turning out beautiful glass, much of it goes into laboratory equipment, telescope and microscope lenses, and lenses for eye glasses.

The practical has replaced the artistic in glass making.



After bubble trays are fashioned, drain tubes are installed through their centers by an expert craftsman.

The finished product is silvered to prevent radiation losses. Air from the space between the inner tube and the jacket is evacuated—and a distillation column has been fashioned, thanks to an art thousands of years old and a modern touch.

GRASSROOTS

World Is Becoming Fed Up With Peace Leagues

By Wright A. Patterson

IN THE PAST QUARTER of a century or less, the people of the world have suffered three major disappointments The first was the failure of the League of Nations, of which President Woodrow Wilson was the instigator following World War I, but which the U.S. senate refused to accept, and we never became a member of that world organization.

The people of the world hailed the league as a means of preventing all future wars, but it did not. It had only talk, no provision for positive action. It failed completely when Italy instituted armed aggression against Ethiopia, and the defeat of that small nation was the rock on which the League of Nations was wrecked.

The second disappointment was the loudly acclaimed Atlantic charter which, in reality, was never anything more than a hoax, a product of a dream of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, following a conference of himself and Winston Churchill aboard a battleship in the Atlantic. Shortly after the announcement of the formulation of the Atlantic Charter, Churchill issued a statement, saying he did not accept the head of his British majesty's government for the purpose of liquidating his majesty's empire.

The charter was presumed to guarantee the people of each nation to choose the form of government a majority in each wanted and to guarantee the national boundaries of each against any aggression on the part of the larger and stronger nations.

Hope of what the Charter would accomplish was not entirely dissipated until President Roosevelt at the Yalta conference gave to Stalin the President's approval to the taking back the three Baltic provinces that had fought for and won their independence That was done as appeasement for Russia, and was in direct violation of the promises of the much vaunted Atlantic Charter.

People of the small nations had not questioned the President's word when he announced the Atlantic Charter, and its provisions had announced the American President as a great friend of small nations They did not know that the charter was merely a dream, and to find it had no factual reality proved a sad awakening and a great disappointment. To them it lowered their appreciation of the United States.

The third major disappointment is the failure of the United Nations to be anything other than an international debating society, of which each member has only the wish to protect its own selfish business interests.

When it was organized in San Francisco less than six years ago, it was hailed by the people of all nations, with the possible exception of Russia, as marking the end of wars. They believed because they wanted to believe, despite the fate that had marked the League of Nations and the hoax that had been perpetrated as the Atlantic Charter. It was to stop aggression on the part of large nations against small ones.

When the North Korean Communists invaded South Korea, the United Nations promptly asked President Truman to stop that invasion and to name General MacArthur a supreme commander of the United Nations forces. At first, it was American troops and American money that was opposing aggression. Later a few member nations contributed in a small way.

When the aggressor became Red China with its 700 million people and a business customer in a big way of several nations and when the United States was demanding that other nations contribute their full part in supporting the defense of South Korea, the debate began. After more than a month of talk it is still going on.

The principles involved mean nothing. The one thing being considered is the amount of business each nation stands to lose. It is on the rock of selfish interests that the United Nations has run aground.

The United Nations has proven no more substantial as a war preventative than did the League of Nations. It is only a debating society in which principles are forgotten when selfish business interests are endangered.

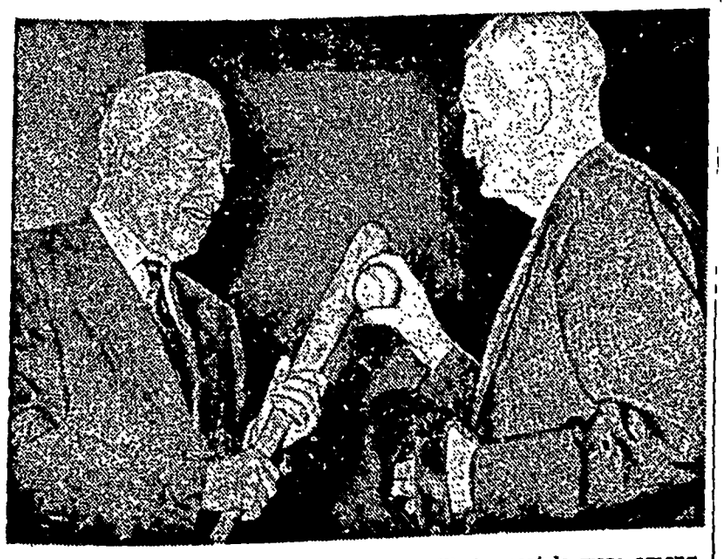
HELICOPTER RESCUE FROM KOREAN BEACH . . . An American helicopter beats its way from an east Korean beach enroute to U.S.S. Manchester on one trip of a dramatic rescue in which 120 Thailand sailors and officers and nine Americans were taken to haven aboard ship from a Communist trap. Personnel were from the beached Thailand navy corvettier "Prasae." Chief aviation pilot D. W. Thorin, Chambers, Neb., is at the controls. Milk can contains hot soup brought in by the helicopter to sustain the men awaiting a return trip by the aircraft. Many such incidents are occurring during the fighting in Korea.

TRIPPED BY DIAMOND-LOADED WEDGIES . . . Belgian Mrs. Eta Hofmann is questioned by U.S. Assistant Attorney George W. Percy (center) and U.S. Attorney Parker after she was arrested for allegedly attempting to smuggle $500,000 worth of diamonds into the U.S. in her platform wedgies. She was arrested as she stepped from a Dutch airliner at a New York airport. Mrs. Hofmann said the shoes were given her by a man in Antwerp, Belgium, with the understanding they would be taken from her by an accomplice when she arrived in New York. A man had been picked up by officials the previous day with $280,000 worth of diamonds in the hollow heels of his shoes.

DUTCH SOLDIERS DISPLAY WOODEN SHOES . . . During a lull in the Korean fighting in the Chungju area, Cpl. Bruce Williams, Geneva, N.Y. (center), compares his winter shoes with Cpl. Ted Warmerdam (left), Vogelzang, Holland, and Sgt. Kees Kruyf, Rotterdam, Holland. Both Dutch soldiers are from a battalion attached to United Nations forces in Korea and are sporting their wooden shoes which they brought with them from Holland.

STREET SCENE . . . In tribute to Los Angeles, Ballerina Betty Byrd scorns the settings of the stage and takes her dancing feet into the city streets to epitomize the spirit of Los Angeles in dance impressions of its landmarks.



BASEBALL'S GREATS . . . Two of baseball's immortals were among the guests at the annual "ribs and roasts" dinner of the Cleveland baseball writers at which Larry Doby, Indian outfielder, was named "man of the year in baseball." They are Tris Speaker (with bat) and Denton (Cy) Young. Speaker compiled a lifetime batting average of .344, and Young recorded 511 major league pitching victories, including three no-hit shutouts.

DIVISION COMMANDER . . . Maj. Gen. Clark Ruffner has taken command of the second infantry division in the Wonju area in Korea. He relieved Maj. Gen. Robert McClure as commander of this division.

KATHLEEN NORRIS
Petty Grudges

"MY WIFE does a lot to make us all happy, but she's so darned unhappy herself," writes a husband from a Colorado farm "Daisy is 37," his letter goes on, "and she is devoted to me and our five kids. But I honestly don't think she has another friend in the world

"She suspects everyone, distrusts everyone, and criticizes everyone. She has bad quarrels with practically every woman in our town. This one said something mean about her when they were in high school; that one didn't come to see her when she had her first baby, and the third rented the house she and I looked at when we wanted to live in town one winter. Someone else borrowed a book and never returned it, and still another criticized Daisy for giving our girls permanents while they were in grade school. One of her oldest friends hasn't spoken to Daisy for years because she sent Daisy a Christmas present, and Daisy found a card sent to this friend from another woman, inside. Daisy never forgave her.

Has Never Forgiven

"Her family and mine would be glad to make much of our children, especially the girls, who are now 16 and 14. But my wife has never forgiven my mother for something Ma said to a friend when I was first married, to the effect that she didn't believe Daisy wanted children With my sisters Daisy says he has nothing in common And with her own only relative, a married brother, she has not been on speaking terms since his wife gave a party on the night we were giving a party.

". . . has bad quarrels . . ."

"Now, the tragedy is," George Ingalls' letter continues, "that Daisy really hasn't any idea things are this way She is so devoted a wife and mother she can't see that she is cutting our girls off from all the pleasures natural to their ages by ruling that they never can enter certain houses and that she doesn't want them to be friendly with this family and that.

"This means constant arguments and disappointments for the girls Their mother tells them that they will have plenty of friends and good times as the years go on, but that she simply will not forgive old slights and prejudices One of my sisters has boys a few years older than my girls; she is generous, resents nothing and forgives everything, and she wants our Sheila and Donna to join their cousins for all sorts of good times My wife forbids it. We could have fine parties of our own out here on the farm, for ours is a grand old house and there is a good deal to amuse kids, but the same reasons hold here, too

"Can you suggest some argument or course that will solve this problem and give my girls a chance to live somewhat freer lives? They are both loving, natural girls who laugh off their mother's worries and suspicions But they naturally can't accept invitations against her will And gradually it has been dawning on them that it is not in one case or two, but that her dislikes embrace practically our entire social group What can I do?"

Wrong Moral Training

Your wife, George, didn't have the right moral training when she was young She may have had schooling, dancing, riding, tennis, languages. But she hasn't been taught to forgive She hasn't been told to be humble, to put herself and her little petty pride and vanity and sensitiveness aside; to wipe the slate gloriously clean of old hurts and grudges every little while and start fresh

No, she has nursed her precious little grudges, injuries, her slights and snubs, the forgetfulness of her friends, their innocent mistakes or hasty comments. If your mother said Daisy didn't want children, 16 years ago, the mere fact of having five lovely children doesn't heal the hurt in Daisy's pitiful little narrow heart. She has reveled in her ineffectual little revenges, which have hurt only herself, and you and her children, and never have reached their real target at all

Of the good times she has missed, the happy summer camping and the holiday parties, the pride she might have felt in showing her children to old neighbors and friends, Daisy will never know She is too deeply wrapped in her own righteous indignation.

Hers is a very extreme case of a common trouble. Lots of women nurse one or two grievances all their lives; rarely does anyone make quite so thorough a job of it as Daisy does What they all needed was a good mother or father.

New Fighters Are Question Marks

By GRANTLAND RICE

THE 230-POUND REALTOR, working hard at his new profession, was still willing to talk about his old. The name is Jack Dempsey, now a hustling real estate operator up and down the west coast.

Grantland Rice

The 56-year-old Manassa Mauler, still no pushover for anybody, looks with a rather morbid eye on the fight game of 1951.

"I see where Joe Louis fought a much improved fight against Beshore," Jack said. "At 210 pounds Louis was nearer his old weight, but he is still too old and slow to ever reach championship form, in my opinion. It will be a miracle if he can handle those old reflexes, which really wreck you. I mean where you see an opening and are just a split-second too late in punching. Or you see a glove coming and are just a split-second late in ducking. It works bad both ways—that reflex action. I don't believe Louis can get back in shape to beat Ezzard Charles, who is younger, faster and today a better boxer. Yes, I know Louis can hit. He can hit and hurt. But he got Beshore because Beshore waded in and asked for it. Hitting a moving target is something different.

"We've got to wait around to see how a lot of things will come out, Jack said "For example, they seem to me to be hurrying Bob Murphy and Rex Layne. Young Murphy, a good puncher, looked hot in the east But remember a fighter out here named Stevens outpointed Murphy and later knocked him out And at the time Stevens didn't look too hot. Rex Layne from Utah is another He whipped Joe Walcott, which doesn't prove too much I know he has won 27 out of his 28 pro bouts but the fighters he met were not too good I'm not knocking Murphy, Layne, Stevens or anyone else I'm simply saying they haven't proved much so far against any real class. There's no use building up a young fighter too high

"If Joe Louis, after the way he looked in two fights against Walcott and the one against Charles can reach the top again, it will be an all-time record He was such a fine champion in his prime that he may make it. But I doubt it, knowing how tough it is to fight your way back"

Fighting Back

"After my second fight with Gene Tunney," the Mauler continued, 'I decided later to find out just how good I was I was younger than Louis is today. I first got in condition with road work and rope skipping, bag punching and the other training aids a fighter uses. I took on the softer ones first. Big fellows who were not too fast to keep out of the way—who made bigger targets. I really got in shape. But I soon found things were not working too well. I could still punch. I could still hurt you. But I was also getting hit with punches I should have ducked I was also missing openings I shouldn't have missed.

"When you are in your prime, at your best—eye and fist and brain work together. You see an opening and you punch at the same time the time you've thrown the punch the other guy is out of range or has the punch blocked. It was always easier to fight a big, slow-moving fighter than a smaller, faster fellow who was so much harder to hit It was much easier to hit Firpo or Willard than it was to hit Greb, Tunney or Gibbons."

It might be recalled that Dempsey fought 35 rounds with Tunney and Gibbons with only one knockdown recorded. He knocked down Willard and Firpo a total of 16 times in the first round. Quite a difference.

Jack is still a wrestling, fast-moving, far-traveling citizen who can't stay too long in any one spot The extreme care he uses in bringing up his two attractive daughters is beyond any copying. He has set a record, if any such records are in the books.

He isn't too sour on the modern fight game, but he is far from being bullish. "It has taken a terrific dip in the last few years," he says. "It needs much more help than it is getting."

Two Aces

The time to render judgment on a case comes when all the evidence is in The evidence in football ended after the All-Star game in Los Angeles and furnished full proof that Paul Brown is football's leading coach and Otto Graham football's individual star Bob Waterfield was just about as good a passer But Graham was not only a fine passer but also an able ball carrier in times of stress

Graham and Brown, of the Brown football family, compile about the best combination of player and coach that football has known. This combination doesn't bank on any one game. It banks on five tough, rugged seasons against the best pro outfits in the game where no one has yet stopped this pair from reaching its top objective.

The amazing Brown had devised the winning plays and Graham knew when to call them and how to use his right arm and both feet in carrying things out.

Interruptions

Lesson for March 4, 1951

PEOPLE KEEP making your life shorter every day. For time is the stuff of which life is made, and you never do have a full 24 hours a day After taking out what has to be spent in sleep, eating and so on, and taking out what has to be spent on your job, whatever it is, there still ought to be a few hours to call your own. But if you are like most people, you live from one interruption to another. If it isn't the telephone it's the door-bell. The more important you are, the more you are likely to be interrupted. Once there was a teacher who became president of the college where he had taught. In later years he mourned the change "It seems to me," he said, "I never get a consecutive half-hour any more to think about anything. No day is ever what I planned. Life has become one long series of interruptions."

Dr. Foreman

Unscheduled Stops

THE LIFE of the Master himself, to judge from what we read in the Gospels, was a long series of interruptions. The tenth chapter of Mark is a good example Jesus himself at this time had one great thing in mind: the Cross. He was going up to Jerusalem not to talk to beggars or to listen to lawyers' arguments or to hold interviews with puzzled young people He was going to die.

A man on his death-road might be spared interruptions. He could not be blamed if he said to interrupters one and all: "Sorry, I can't be bothered. See my assistants if there is anything you want done."

But Jesus did not say anything of the kind. He did not fume over the unscheduled stops on his life's highway. He took time to clear up misunderstandings; he took time for little children when even his best friends thought he ought not to be disturbed; he took time to answer the question of the rich young man; he did not brush off James and John when they came to him with their ill-considered petition; he even took time to take care of a beggar's need.

Ministries by the Wayside

JESUS DID not always take the initiative in every situation, though indeed he controlled every situation. When the Pharisees asked him about marriage he did not say, "Let's not talk about marriage; let me suggest the topic of salvation instead." When the young man ran up to him, Jesus did not ask: "Did you have an appointment for an interview?" Jesus not only did not resent other people's initiative. He never seems to have resented an interruption in his life.

Does this example of Jesus mean that we ought not to plan our days ahead of time, or that we ought never to try to "budget" our time? Must we never plan any project, but always wait till other people suggest what we are to do?

Not at all. The example of Jesus means that if and when interruptions occur, if we share his spirit we shall not be irritated by them or resent them. For what Jesus did, always, was to make use of the interruption. Each one was turned into a "Wayside Ministry." Indeed, a large part—some would say the larger part—of Jesus' life was made up of just such by-the-way ministries.

Life's By-the-Ways

HOW MANY of Jesus' teachings we would never have had, if no one had interrupted him or asked him questions! How many of his miracles would never have been done if he had refused to perform any but those he planned and scheduled himself! It is what we do "by the way" that makes up life's service, for the most part.

In Jesus' story of the Good Samaritan (no doubt an incident from real life) we are not told what were the original errands of the priest, the Levite and the Samaritan. Very likely the first two were on time for their appointments.

But the priest and the Levite missed a wonderful chance, just because the poor beaten traveler was not, so to speak, on their agenda. The Samaritan was delayed, and maybe bothered, by what he did for the man in trouble. But what he was willing to do by the way, something he had not planned for at all, won him the immortality of the Master's praise.

AROUND THE HOUSE

When you need extra closet and drawer space, let an old attic trunk take care of it for you. Clean the trunk with steel wool, soap and water, spruce it up with two coats of enamel to match the color scheme of the bedroom, garnish with decal transfers from the five-and-ten, and find a place for the trunk in the room that needs the closet space It's particularly handy for storing the baby's woolens and extra blankets and such; saves a lot of running up to the attic for things.

If you're wearing shorts around the kitchen, especially during canning season, protect yourself from flying and spattering hot stuff by pinning a turkish towel to your waist so it will hang down in front of your bare legs.

A variation of the old colonial custom of spicing bedsheets can be worked in your linen closet and linen drawers by purchasing quantities of toilet soap in advance of your needs and storing it unwrapped among the linens White flower-scented soaps go well in the lord and master's shirts and handkerchiefs; green pine scented cakes are suggested for bed linens and towels

To prevent grease from sputtering excessively, sprinkle a little salt or flour in the pan before the grease is added If it's too late for such a preventive measure, turn a colander upside down over the frying pan. This will stop the flying grease, but will still allow air to come in contact with what's cooking.

In storing clothes of any kind, name your own brand of moth preventive. As for type, contact sprays which are actually sprayed right into the cloth seem to prove most effective However, regardless of what you choose, it'll be of little use unless the clothes are first dry-cleaned. Dry-cleaning solvents are positive death to any moth larvae roosting in the cloth

Sliced fingers can be prevented when you pare vegetables if you slap a piece of adhesive tape on your thumb before you start.

When fat flares up on the stove quickly throw a handful of salt on it. If no salt is handy, clap a magazine or newspaper over the flame. Or, use an empty pot as a snuffer. In any case do not throw water on the flames It's not likely to extinguish the fire, and there's a good chance it will splash some of the flaming grease onto you.

Onions are probably the most dangerous vegetable to slice thin because they have a way of slipping out of the knife's way and leaving your fingers there to take the rap. Avoid this by setting the onion on a flat metal grater while you slice it. The grater won't allow the onion to slip out from under at the crucial moment.

Gentle Hint

Clerk: "To what do you attribute your early start in life, sir?"

Executive: "Nothing but a good old-fashioned alarm clock, young fellow—and I might say that a few people in this office might profitably invest in one."

"This New Dry Yeast gives me a prize-winning product every time"

17 Awards Won by Sioux Falls Cook At South Dakota Fairs

Seems as if every time little David Denbow's mother goes to the Fair, she comes back with more ribbons. And this year, prize cook Mrs. Denbow entered two Fairs—took eleven prizes at the State Fair and six at the Sioux Empire Fair.

Like so many prize-winning cooks, Mrs. Denbow has plenty of praise for Fleischmann's Yeast. "And I especially like Fleischmann's New Improved Active Dry Yeast," she says, "it's so easy to use and so fast working. It gives me prize-winning results."

Do you know — the world's most delicious treats are made with yeast! The delectable flavor and nourishing goodness of yeast-raised goodies make them everyone's favorite! When you bake at home, do it with yeast —the best yeast. Fleischmann's New Improved Active Dry Yeast is easier, faster, gives better results. Just add to warm water, stir well—it's ready to use! WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

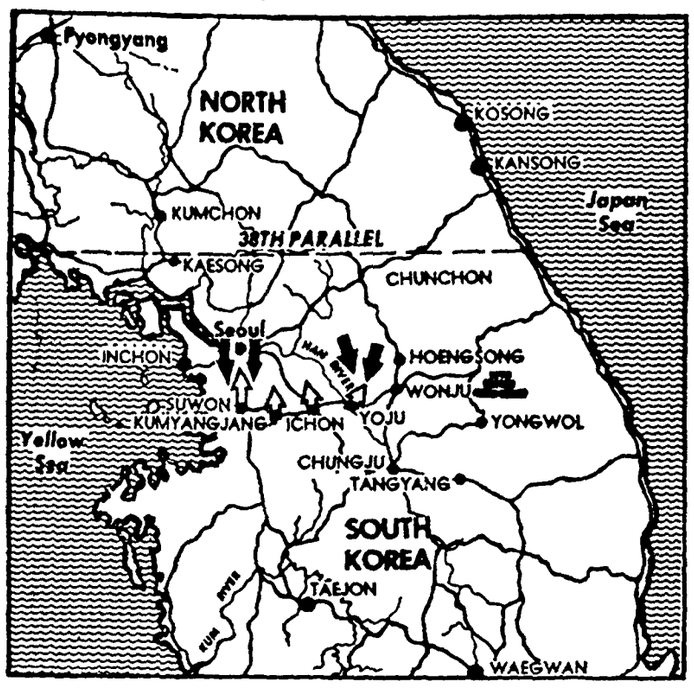
Eisenhower Reports Europe Will Defend Self Against Communism; Price Control Weaknesses Named

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



United Nations forces continued a slow advance northward against North Korean and Chinese forces with units of U.N. troops within a short distance of Seoul. Most of the activity was in the west below the capital of South Korea. There were reports of disease among Communist troops and numerous casualties.

EUROPE:

The Picture Clears

Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, a man who commands the respect of more Americans today than any other, cleared the fog from the European picture in his recent report to congress on his whirlwind tour of the democratic nations.

Since the United States made it clear that the defense of western Europe was of first importance and that we intended to build a united front against communism, the average American has been beset with doubts and fears. The outstanding doubt, fed by the constant bickering and disagreements of national leaders, was that western Europe did not have the will and determination to build a defense; that perhaps the greatest share of the burden would fall upon the United States.

Eisenhower, however, cleared the picture. He told the lawmakers again and again there has been a great rejuvenation of spirit in Soviet-shadowed Europe. To some his report sounded like a new battle cry for freedom.

There was another note of hope in his message. American troops are needed abroad, but American arms are needed more. America's allies in the North Atlantic treaty are ready to take their part and "we are going to build for ourselves a secure wall of peace."

It was understandable that the success of Eisenhower's tour can be attributed largely to the faith western Europe has in the general as a man and a leader.

CONTROLS:

Disagreeable Second Look

It was generally agreed that the great majority of the American people were in favor of wage and price controls. After a second look at the ones recently enacted, the average American was not too happy. In fact, a good many of them were shocked and angry.

The main worry of the people in the home towns of the nation was the price of food A second look at the new price law revealed that many foods could jump five to 200 per cent in price without running afoul of the law.

Potatoes, for instance, could advance 80 per cent before reaching the "magic figure." Butter and milk could go 10 per cent higher, chickens 25 per cent, eggs 21 per cent, turkeys 12 per cent, oranges 200 per cent, lemons 30 per cent, and apples 30 per cent. Prices could even go higher on bread and baked goods.

On top of this the government began to ease its wage freeze in some industries, notably the coal industry.

The people on main street were beginning to ask themselves if the legislators were playing them for suckers. They were reminding themselves that in a democracy what is good for one group is good for another.

The answer to the wage-price situation is not simple. But a quick re-examination of the situation is mandatory.

Commander

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, European supreme commander, reporting to the nation on his three-week defense tour of Europe, told the American people "we are going to build for ourselves a secure wall of peace." The general's report renewed American confidence that the free nations can eventually defeat any Communist attack.

TAXES:

An Ambitious Program

The size of Secretary of the Treasury Snyder's proposed tax program to pay for the defense program caused gasps of surprise from businessmen throughout the nation.

Snyder called the program "rather rugged" and added it was the government's first step in a plan to get at least 16.5 billion dollars more revenue. The plan called for 20 per cent more income taxes from the little fellow, increases in corporate income taxes, and greatly increased levies on new automobiles, liquor, beer, cigarettes, radios, refrigerators, and many other consumer items.

To put it mildly, it was an ambitious tax program. It did not appear that congress would act quickly in the matter, although the administration requested speed. Also, the most optimistic administration planners did not think the program would be adopted without considerable revision and possible slashes.

Of the total, $3.6 billion would be contributed by individual income tax payers. As an example of how the new tax would work in the lower income groups, a married person with two dependents and a net income of $3,000 now pays $120 federal tax, or 4 per cent of his income. The proposed rates would increase his tax liability to $144, or 4.8 per cent of his income.

It sounds small when you speak of a rate rise from 4 to 4.8 per cent. But if you look at the tax figures alone, a jump from $120 to $144 is a 20 per cent increase and presents another picture.

Among other proposed taxes, automobiles would be subject to 20 per cent instead of 10, radios, television sets, and various other electrical household appliances would be taxed 25 per cent instead of 10.

BUDGET:

Battle Lines Form

When the question of money, whether it be the budget or taxation, is raised in congress there always develops a bitter battle. Now the lines are being formed in the 82nd congress over President Truman's $71.6 billion budget and his $16.5 billion tax program.

When the President's budget was first announced there was some opposition, but not the kind that indicated major conflict among the legislators. The situation changed radically, however, when the chief executive proposed a quick $10 billion tax bill to be followed by another $6.5 billion bill within a short time.

As soon as the tax program was announced, the legislators began their demands for cuts in the budget. The demands were not being made along party lines. Democrats joined the Republicans.

The conflict centered around aid to education, health insurance and the Brannan plan. To these, critics say slashes could be made in nondefense public works and army civil-function projects such as flood control, and in the regular civilian government agencies.

Before any budget and tax program is adopted the public can expect a bitter battle in congress. But no matter how much the legislators dislike the idea, it was also apparent that a tremendous budget must be adopted and some kind of pay-as-you-go method found to finance it.

KOREA:

U.N. Drives Northward

United Nations forces in Korea continued a slow and cautious drive northward toward the 38th parallel. The drive developed after limited probing attacks failed to find Communist troops in great concentration.

There were indications of increased Red resistance as U.N. forces neared Seoul, but in what strength was not revealed.

There was considerable optimism over the U.N. advance, but no one could say what would happen if and when the 38th parallel was reached. Rumors persisted that the UN armies would not go beyond that point.

The lack of stiff Communist resistance and counter-attacks was a mystery that caused considerable worry among U.N. commanders. It gave credence to reports that Communist armies had suffered heavy casualties from disease and cold.

The U.S. defense department reported 136,000 North Koreans captured in fighting since the war began. The department claimed 9,000 Communist casualties since the present U.N. offensive started.

LABOR:

A Complete Overhaul

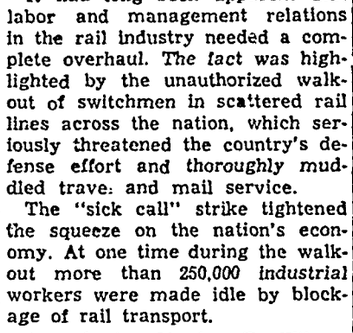
It had long been apparent that labor and management relations in the rail industry needed a complete overhaul. The fact was highlighted by the unauthorized walkout of switchmen in scattered rail lines across the nation, which seriously threatened the country's defense effort and thoroughly muddled travel and mail service.

The "sick call" strike tightened the squeeze on the nation's economy. At one time during the walkout more than 250,000 industrial workers were made idle by blockage of rail transport.

Appeals by Charles E. Wilson, federal mobilization director, and W. P. Kennedy, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, sent thousands back to work, but did not eliminate the possibility of future labor disputes in the industry.

An all-important fact remained, a complete and final settlement of all questions between labor and management in the rail industry was mandatory if the nation's vital defense effort is to go forward during the next few years. It has dragged out too long.

U.N. Victory



Foreign minister of the Republic of Korea, Col. Ben. C. Limb, (left) and American delegate to the United Nations, Warren Austin, congratulate each other after the United Nations labelled Red China guilty of aggression in Korea.

ARMY:

Infantry to Europe

The army was reported planning to send the fourth infantry division to Germany to reinforce the new Atlantic pact army and the air force to assign more jet fighter-bombers to Europe.

The move was expected to be made as soon as congress approved an anticipated resolution voicing support for Truman's much-assailed plan to assign more U.S. ground forces to Europe.

WORLD RELIEF

Church Group Launches Relief Plan

Nineteen major Protestant and Orthodox church groups, representing virtually all of the Protestantism in America, recently formed the National Council of Churches of Christ in America.

Two weeks ago the newly formed council inaugurated its first major service project—a nationwide appeal for funds for overseas relief, reconstruction and service to refugees and displaced persons through the world. The project began Sunday, February 11, but the period of emphasis will be through Easter Sunday, March 25.

Funds collected will be used for the relief of the 50 to 70 million persons who are war refugees today, and for the re-location of some 30 million displaced persons of World War II.

Lenten Casseroles

CASSEROLES ARE an excellent solution to Lenten menus, especially when they're hearty and nourishing. Fish, eggs and cheese, all good protein foods, form a base for these substantial dishes, while sauces and vegetables are added to some of them for extra appeal, color or calories.

Prove to yourself and to the family that Lenten fare can be interesting with some of these new recipes.

SPAGHETTI and noodles play an important part in these two recipes to give you a wonderfully filling meal out of a casserole:

Eggs Tetrazzini
(Serves 4)

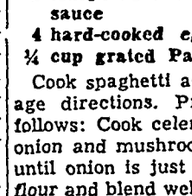
- 4 - 6 ounces spaghetti
- ½ cup diced celery
- 2 tablespoons chopped green pepper or parsley
- 1 tablespoon finely chopped onion
- 1 4-ounce can mushrooms, drained
- ¼ cup butter
- 1 tablespoon flour
- ¾ cup milk
- ¼ pound sharp cheese, finely diced
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 2 teaspoons worcestershire sauce
- 4 hard-cooked eggs
- ¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese

Cook spaghetti according to package directions. Prepare sauce as follows: Cook celery, green pepper, onion and mushrooms in the butter until onion is just transparent. Add flour and blend well. Add milk all at once, cook stirring constantly until uniformly thickened. Blend in cheese, salt, worcestershire sauce. Stir until cheese is melted. Set aside several center slices of egg for garnish. Chop remaining eggs and add to the sauce. Heat to serving temperature.

Tuna-Noodle Casserole
(Serves 4-6)

- 4 ounces medium or broad noodles
- 1 No. 2 can peas
- 1 7-ounce can tuna
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons prepared mustard
- ½ cup liquid drained from peas
- 1 tall can evaporated milk (1-⅔ cups)

Cook noodles in boiling salted water until tender, about 10 minutes. Drain the noodles. Melt butter in a saucepan. Stir in the flour and salt. Gradually add the liquid drained from peas and cook until thickened, stirring to keep smooth. Stir in the mustard, then gradually add the milk. Continue cooking over low heat until thickened. Arrange noodles, peas and tuna, which has been broken into bite-sized pieces, in layers in a well greased 1½ quart casserole. Pour sauce over all and bake in a moderate oven (350°) for 20-25 minutes.



Clam and Eggplant Casserole
(Serves 5-6)

- 1 eggplant
- 1 can whole or minced clams
- 1 cup grated cheese
- Butter
- 1 8-ounce can tomato sauce
- Salt and pepper

Peel eggplant. Cut into inch cubes and fry in butter until clear. Place layer of eggplant in buttered baking dish. Top with layer of clams. Sprinkle each layer clams with salt, pepper and grated cheese. When dish is full, pour canned tomato sauce over all. Bake in hot oven (400°) for 30 minutes.

American Pizza
(Serves 6)

- 2 cups sifted flour
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ cup butter
- 1 cup milk (scant)
- 1 can condensed tomato soup or 1 can tomato puree
- 1 cup cubed American cheese (about ¼ pound)
- 2 tablespoons finely diced green pepper
- 1 tablespoon minced parsley
- 2 tablespoons grated onion
- 1 clove garlic, finely cut

Prepare a drop biscuit dough from the first 5 ingredients; spread dough in bottom of a buttered 8x2-inch baking dish. Pour mixture of tomato soup or puree, cheese, pepper, parsley, onion and garlic over dough. Bake in moderately hot oven (400°) for 20 to 25 minutes.

Baked Potatoes with Cheese-onion Sauce
(Serves 6)

- 6 medium potatoes
- ¼ cup butter
- ¼ cup flour
- 2 cups milk
- 1 teaspoon salt
- Dash cayenne
- ½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- Few drops Tabasco sauce
- 1½ cups grated processed strong cheese
- 1 bunch green onions (about 18) including tops, chopped

Bake potatoes in moderately hot oven (400°) for 40-60 minutes. Make crosswise gashes in top of each, turn back flaps and fluff up pulp. Pour about ⅓ cup hot cheese-onion sauce over each and serve remainder in bowl. Top with a little chopped green onion. If served with steak or roast, the meat juice, poured on potato before sauce is put on, gives extra flavor. For sauce combine butter, flour and milk as for white sauce.

Scrambled Eggs with Shrimps
(Serves 4)

- 4 tablespoons butter
- 1 small onion, chopped
- 1 mushroom, sliced
- ½ cup sliced, cooked shrimps
- 2 tomatoes, skinned, sliced
- 4 eggs
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- 2 tablespoons cream
- 4 slices buttered toast
- 2 tablespoons grated cheese

Melt the butter in a heavy pan, add the onion and mushroom, and simmer 4 to 5 minutes. Add the shrimps and tomatoes. Shake over fire 2 minutes. Add eggs mixed with salt, pepper and cream. Stir over low fire until creamy.

LYNN SAYS:
Practice Economy With These Tips

Bulk pork sausage offers an easy dinner solution when served with a sweet potato casserole. Make patties from sausage and place on pineapple slices spread with mustard. Bake until done, about 30 minutes in a moderate oven, basting with pineapple syrup.

Top sauerkraut in a casserole with frankfurters, then grated cheese and mashed potatoes for an economical, hearty main dish.

The last cubes of pot roast can be placed in a casserole of noddles and held together with rich, brown gravy. Add leftover peas and carrots for color if you have them.

Slivers of pork roast offer a good meal when they're fried with cooked rice and mushrooms. Scramble eggs in the mixture of rice, mushrooms and pork, if you want to extend it.

What could be better than a club sandwich of lettuce, tomato and bacon? Serve with thin American cheese sauce, and you'll have a meal.

And that is a big warehouse in anybody's town.

It was surprising to me to see so few people employed in such a large plant. Everything runs automatically and one man can take care of quite a few machines.

Up here in Iowa the farmers have many cooperatives, such as elevators and creameries especially. Down in the Valley we also ran onto a lot of cooperatives that handled fruit and vegetables for the farmers, through the packing plants, juicers, etc.

The towns in the Valley all seem to be up and coming. They seem to have an unusually large number of fine new buildings, stores and business places of all kinds. That would reflect that there is a lot of money made in that section of the country. But it was my impression that an "outsider" would do well to spend a year down there before getting into farming or a business, to give one plenty of time to look around and "get the lay of the land."

At times it seemed like three were more Iowa cars down there than there were Texas cars. Lots of Iowans spend the winter in one of the delightful Valley towns. There are also hundreds of other Iowans who own land down there, either orchards or vegetable fields, and they go down there in the winter. I ran across several Iowans in the Valley who run a business or farm there in the winter.

As for myself, I yet do not know whether or not I would like to spend a whole winter there. In the first place it is near sea-level there and the low altitude is not too agreeable with me. I like higher altitude and cooler weather. In that respect New Mexico appealed more to my liking.

The Valley is very dusty and every morning there would be a layer of dust on everything. The dust is very fine and quite brown. All this dust probably comes from the vegetable fields and orchards. It would drive an Iowa house-wife "nuts" to clean up her house every day. Texas people do not seem to mind it.

All orchards and vegetable fields in the Valley are irrigated, the water being taken from the Rio Grande River. Outside of a few mere sprinkles, there had not been a rain in the Valley since last June. The Rio Grande River is very low and water is more or less rationed in that farmers are not getting as much irrigation water as they would like to have.

A person can just about wade across the river any place. In fact, many Mexicans do cross the river at night. If the river is high, they swim across. These illegal entrants are called "Wet-Backs." You can hire them for about 75 cents a day. Other Mexican labor can be procured for about $2 per day.

There is a continual "war" between the "Wet-Backs" and U. S. Government officials. The "Wet-Backs" come over at night and many are rounded up and sent back the next day. This goes on and on. But the fruit and vegetable growers won't squak as they are getting some cheap labor.

Next week I will try to have another story that may interest some of the readers of The Times.

Minutes of Proceedings and of Resolution of the Board of Supervisors of Hancock County, Iowa, Acting for and on Behalf of Drainage District No. 153 of said County

The meeting was called to order by Chairman F J Schoun at 1:30 p. m on January 22, 1951, same being the day and hour previously set for an adjourned hearing upon the report of the Commissioners and upon the proposed increase of assessments and change in classifications in accordance with resolution adopted by this Board on January 3, 1951

All members of the Board of Supervisors were present, and the Chairman, F. J Schoun, presiding, was in the chair Proof of service of notice of hearing of the change in classification and proposed increase of assessments served by the Sheriff of Hancock County, Iowa, on Chris Otto Peterson; Roy W. Rogeness; Swen O Rogeness; F J Schoun, Clint D. Daniels, and Clarence Bird as members of the Board of Supervisors of Hancock County Iowa, on behalf of Hancock County, Iowa county road between Sections 22-27 in Crystal Township, Hancock County, Iowa and Maynard Schoneman, County Auditor of Hancock County, Iowa, is on file showing service of such notice by the Sheriff of Hancock County, Iowa, upon the persons above named, to which was attached copy of the resolution of January 3, 1951

The Chairman announced the purpose of the meeting and stated that this meeting was an adjourned meeting of the meeting of said Board of January 3, 1951, and extended opportunity to any interested land owner whose proposed assessment and classification were changed or increased, to be heard, and pursuant thereto the following were heard orally:

Chris Otto Peterson, by his son, H. Peterson;

Roy W. Rogeness and Swen O. Rogeness, Roy W. Rogeness being orally heard on his own behalf and on behalf of Swen O. Rogeness, and

Swen O. Rogeness further being heard by Sanford Rogeness, son of Swen O. Rogeness, and

Roy W. Rogeness and Swen O. Rogeness being represented by Curtis G. Riehm, Attorney, who was heard with reference to their objections; and Chris Otto Peterson, Roy W. Rogeness, and Swen O. Rogeness having filed written objections, which were read and considered by the Board. And after the reading of said written objections and hearing the oral objections made in support thereof, and the Board having found that due and proper notice was given of the hearing, and that the Board had full and complete jurisdiction and having fully considered the objections, both written and oral, and having carefully reviewed the report of the Commissioners and the proposed change as provided in the resolution of January 3, 1951 and giving full and complete consideration to such objections and to the report of the Commissioners, and it having been called to the attention of the Board that a typographical error was made by the Engineer with reference to the three acres of Chris Otto Peterson in the Northeast One-Fourth (NE¼) of the Northwest One-Fourth (NW¼) of Section Twenty-seven (27), in said Crystal Township, and that such acreage should be two acres instead of three acres, and it appearing that the county road in said Crystal Township between Sections Twenty-eight (28) and Twenty-nine (29) was not assessed for benefits on account of said improvement, and that said county road will receive benefits therefrom between the sections above numbered on account of Lateral C, and the Board of Supervisors acting for and on behalf of Hancock County Road No. 101 between Sections 28 and 29 having waived notice of hearing upon any proposed increase in the assessment and classification thereof, Supervisor Daniels read, offered and introduced the following Resolution, seconded by Supervisor Bird, and after discussion the Chairman put the motion upon the adoption of said Resolution as follows:

RESOLUTION

And now on this 22nd day of January, 1951, same being an adjourned hearing of the meeting of January 3, 1951, this Board having given further consideration to the change in classification and increase of assessments and reduction of assessments and classification adopted tentatively by its resolution on January 3, 1951, and having heard oral objections to such proposed change, and having read and duly considered the written objections thereto; and

WHEREAS, this Board has heard and fully considered all of the objections made against said proposed change, and having heard statements of land owners in support thereof, and having carefully reviewed and considered the report of the commissioners, and having previously made a personal inspections of the lands included within said drainage district and fully considered the report, the resolution of January 3, 1951, the objections, both ora and written;

Now, Therefore, Be and It Is Hereby Resoved on this 22nd day of January, 1951, same being an adjourned meeting of the January 3, 1951 hearing;

1. That the typographical error appearing on Page 2 of the Resolution of January 3, 1951, wherein certain changes were made as to three acres in the Northeast One-Fourth (NE¼) of the Northwest One-Fourth (NW¼) of Section Twenty-seven (27), in Crystal Township, belonging to Chris Otto Peterson, be corrected by striking the figure "3" and inserting therein the figure "2", and that no change in either the assessment or classification thereof shall be made.

2 Be It Further Resolved that there be and is hereby assessed against County Road No. 101 of Hancock County, Iowa, the sum of $200.00 between Sections 28 and 29, in said Crystal Township, for and on account of Lateral C, and that all the lands served by or assessed for benefits on account of said Lateral C be credited with said amount in proportion to the classification and assessment theretofore made by the Commissioners, except as modified in the Resolution of January 3, 1951 and January 22, 1951, and said county road between Sections 28 and 29 is hereby classified as follows, to-wit:
and the assessment made against the same is $200.00,

3. Be it further resolved that the classification and the assessments made thereon shall be as made by the Commissioners as shown by their return as amended, filed in the office of the Auditor on the 2nd day of January, 1951, and as tentatively set forth in the Resolution of this Board on January 3, 1951, and as changed, modified or amended by this Resolution, be and the same are hereby ratified, approved and adopted, and the report of said Commissioners confirmed and adopted, except as modified, changed and increased by the Resolution of January 3, 1951 and this Resolution, and the classification and assessment against the lands more particularly described in the Resolution of January 3, 1951, except as changed in this Resolution, are approved, confirmed and adopted and declared to be the final determination of this Board with respect thereto.

4. Bt It Further Resolved that with respect to Lateral C the assessment upon the County Road No. 101 hereinbefore levied in this Resolution, that such amount shall be credited against Lateral C to the end that all of the lands served by said Lateral C will receive its proportionate share of such credit of $200.00 in proportion to the classification and assessment made against each tract as shown by the report of the Commissioners and of the Resolution of January 3, 1951 and of this Resolution

5. Be It Further Resolved that the classification and assessment as made in the report of the Commissioners, and as amended or modified by the Resolution of January 3, 1951 and this Resolution, shall stand as a basis for future assessments, unless revised as by law provided.

6 And, Be It Further Resolved that the levy of assessments as set forth in said report and as modified or amended as herein stated be fixed and levied upon the lands, tracts, lots, parcels of real estate highways and roads within said district, as provided by Section 455.57 of the 1950 Code of Iowa in accordance with said Commissioners' report, except as modified and changed as herein stated, and that said levies and assessments shall be and are hereby levied as a tax and shall bear interest at 4 per cent per annum from this 22nd day of January, 1951 and become due and payable at the same time as other taxes and collected in like manner, as provided by Section 455.62 of the 1950 Code of Iowa and amendments thereto, and such taxes shall be a lien on the real estate, roads and highways against which same are assessed, as provided by Section 455.58 of the 1950 Code of Iowa, provided, however, and it is further resolved that the assessments for benefits as corrected and approved by the Board in this Resolution and the Resolution of January 3, 1951, which are levied as of this date, shall be payable at the office of the County Treasurer, and if any person, firm or corporation shall within twenty (20) days after the levy of such assessment pay the same in full, he or it shall have the right so to do without interest as provided by Section 455.63 of the 1950 Code of Iowa

7 And, Be It Further Resolved that if the owner of any real estate against which said levy for assessment of benefits is made in excess of $20.00 shall within thirty (30) days from the date of such levy agree in writing endorsed upon any improvement certificate or in a separate agreement that in consideration of having the right to pay his assessment in installments, he will not make any objection as to the legality of his assessment for benefits for the levy of taxes against his property, then such owner shall have the options as provided in Paragraphs 1 and 2 of Section 455.64 of the 1950 Code of Iowa.

8 And, Be It Further Resolved that any assessment levied against any tract in an amount of less than $20.00 shall be payable within twenty (20) days after the levy thereof without interest, and if not paid within said period of time, same shall draw interest at four (4) per cent.

9 And, Be It Further Resolved that any owner of real estate assessed in excess of $20.00 may pay the same by issuance of improvement certificate or certificates payable to bearer with interest at four (4) per cent per annum payable in ten (10) equal installments, as provided by Iowa Code, Section 455.64 (1950) and Section 455 77, provided such owners of land shall execute such improvement certificate or certificates and waivers within thirty (30) days from this date.

The chairman put the motion upon the adoption of the foregoing resolution, and after discussion upon call of the roll by the aduitor the vote was as follows: Supervisor C. D. Daniels, yea, Supervisor Clarence Bird, yea, Supervisor F. J. Schoun, yea. Nays, none; absent, none. Whereupon the chairman declared the resolution duly adopted and directed the auditor to notify the owners of land subject to assessment of their options as herein provided and directed said auditor to certify said levies to the county treasurer as by law provided

WHEREAS, Wm. Henschen, engineer, Walter Kahl, and W. J. Rasmuson were heretofore appointed commissioners to view and reclassify the lands in Drainage District No. 5, and to designate separately the tax per cent each tract shall pay on the main ditch and lateral ditches for future repairs, all in accordance with Section 455 72, Code of Iowa, 1950, and

WHEREAS, said commissioners did qualily as by law directed and did file their report on January 19, 1951, which report sets out in detail the classification against each tract and parcel of land and highway and railroad in the district as provided by law

Be and It Is Therefore Resolved by the Board of Supervisors of Hancock County, Iowa, acting for and in behalf of Drainage District No. 5, Hancock County, Iowa, that the report of the commissioners heretofore appointed to reclassify lands in the watershed of D D. No. 5, Hancock County, Iowa, is tentatively approved and a hearing thereon will be held at the Courthouse in Garner, Iowa, on the 26th day of March at the hour of 1:30 p m at which time taxpayers in said district will appear and show cause why said reclassification designated shall not be accepted against the lands in the watershed of D D. No. 5, Hancock County, Iowa.

All objections to such reclassification of assessment of benefits shall be filed in writing in the office of the county auditor in Garner, Iowa at or before the hour set for hearing thereon. The county auditor be and he is hereby directed to cause notice of such hearing to be published in the Garner Leader and Signal, a newspaper of general circulation published at Garner Iowa, together with the description of the real estate and the designated reclassification, each tract, parcel of land, highways and railways in the district is charged with.

The foregoing resolution was offered and read by Supervisor Bird who moved its adoption, was seconded by Supervisor Daniels, whereupon the chairman, F. J. Schoun, placed the motion of its adoption and upon roll call, the vote thereon is Clarence Bird, Clint Daniels and F. J. Schoun, ayes. Nays, none. Whereupon the chairman declared the resolution duly adopted.

WHEREAS on proposed road No. 540, petitioned for by Ray S. Baker, et al, the petition and bond have heretofore been approved, the commissioner having been appointed and his report having been approved on November 27, 1950 and date of hearing set for January 29, 1951 at noon and the proof of publication being on file and notice having been served on all interested persons, and

WHEREAS, Ray S. Baker, the petitioner, now has requested the dismissal of said petition and hearing and has agreed to pay all costs pertaining to same

Now Be It Hereby Resolved that said proposed Road No. 540, petition and hearing is hereby terminated and all further action dismissed, and all costs taxed to the petitioner, Ray S. Baker.

The foregoing resolution was offered and read by Supervisor Daniels who moved its adoption, was seconded by Supervisor Bird, whereupon the chairman, F. J. Schoun, placed the motion of its adoption and upon roll call the vote thereon is Clint Daniels, Clarence Bird and F. J. Schoun, ayes. Nays, none. Whereupon the chairman declared the resolution duly adopted.

On motion and second the Board adjourned to January 29, 1951 at 9 o'clock a. m.

Invitation Extended

The Mary Circle wishes to extend an invitation to all persons who have not been personally contacted, to attend the family Lenten Church Night on March 4th.

Stop and Think

Did you ever count the extra cost of the things on an OLIVER TRACTOR for which you pay for as extra equipment on other makes, and sometimes cannot get them at any price? Our continuous power-takeoff is driven by a shaft splined into the center of the engine flywheel and is not affected by the clutch pedal. Nobody needs to tell you how that helps on a combine.

This is just one feature. See your OLIVER DEALER and get the whole story.

CIVIL DEFENSE

Home Towns Must Aid Refugees If Cities Are Hit With A-Bombs

(This is the second of a series of five articles on civil defense by Walter A. Shead, Western Newspaper Union's Washington correspondent.)

By WALTER A. SHEAD

WASHINGTON, D.C. — If you were one of those directly beneath the explosion of an atomic bomb, there is practically no hope of your survival. Even if you lived anywhere within a half-mile of the center of the explosion your chances of living to tell the tale would be about one in ten. From a half-mile to a mile away you have about a 50-50 chance and farther away than that your chances are pretty good that you will be able to help your less fortunate neighbors.

And of course within these areas your chances of injury are even greater. But your chances of recovery from radioactivity or other injuries are good.

And if you have a few minutes warning of an impending air raid, these chances are vastly improved. What you should do, even if you have only a few seconds warning? The first thing to remember is to fall flat on your face. If you have time to pick a spot to fall, choose first to flatten out against a cellar wall, or even an inside wall, or beneath a sturdy table or bench. Or if you are outside, drop beside the base of a building, or fall into a ditch or gutter. And when you fall, cover your face in the crook of your arm, and cover any exposed skin with whatever is handy and hold it for several seconds after the explosion to prevent flash burns.

To you folks in the home towns of the nation and in the rural areas there is little danger of a direct atomic bomb overhead, for the enemy would most certainly aim at one or more of some sixteen strategic target areas in large cities and industrial areas. But your neighbors in your nearest large city might suffer as follows: A surprise daylight attack on an average city would produce about 120,000 casualties. Of this total, approximately 40,000 would be killed outright or die the first day. An additional 20,000 would die in the following 5 or 6 weeks. Of the 80,000 remainder about 48,000 might be suffering from burns, 40,000 from mechanical injuries and 16,000 from radiation injuries. This total of over 100 per cent arises from the fact that a large number of casualties would be suffering from two or more types of injuries. To top this staggering total, there follows the complex and difficult job of evacuation, either after the bomb drop, or of course, if there is warning, preferably before the drop.

AND HERE IS WHERE folks in strictly rural communities and the small towns of the country can play a tremendously important role in their state's civil defense set-up. If your town and your county is chosen as an evacuation site, plans may be made before-hand to care for several thousand or even a million or more evcauees from a stricken city in the following order: (1) school age children; (2) children under 6 years, accompanied by mothers or escorts; (3) pregnant women; (4) the aged, infirm; (5) inmates of institutions, hospitals, homes and state or county institutions; and (6) all others except those serving in essential capacities such as industry.

Your town or your county must be organized to care for these people to help provide transportation, health service, sanitation, police, fire protection, water supply, food, housing, hospitalization, morgue services, and a dozen other essentials, including welfare service.

Your state civilian defense administration and his entire staff running down into the cities, towns and counties, should be trained to meet every contingency of such a catastrophe. This requires weeks and months of organizational work and intense planning and entails the draft or volunteer of thousands of individuals, both men and women, who should be trained and educated, simply, as Governor Millard Caldwell, director of the National Civilian Defense Administration said: to save their own lives and to assist in saving the lives of their neighbors.

Here are a few musts in preparing your house after an air-raid warning: Don't let trash pile up; shut doors, windows and pull down blinds; throw your electric switch; if you burn coal, close draft doors; keep a flash-light handy; don't light a match; have a radio, first-aid equipment and a supply of canned goods; don't eat open food; don't rush outside after a bombing; drink only bottled water or other bottled liquid; don't start rumors and use the telephone only for emergency.

There is little danger of radioactive clouds after the first two minutes after the bomb burst. Underground and under-water bursts, however, may pollute the air for some time unless a wind carries it off, so if possible stay away from "down-wind" in these cases. If it is raining, keep from getting wet if possible.

Remember this — the theory of civil defense rests upon the principle of self-protection by the individual, extended to include mutual self-protection by groups and communities. All men and women who make up the civil defense work will belong to a national team—The United States Civil Defense Corps. Find out how you can join in your community.

(The third of this series of articles will appear next week.)

Star Dust
STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

"COUNTER-SPY", now heard on Thursdays at 9:30 p.m., EST, on NBC, is the first of the major network programs to combine, on a permanent basis, lively entertainment with on-the-hour reports of the latest measures for national defense. In keeping with the recent national emergency edict, Phillips H. Lord, the program's creator, made immediate plans to mold the half-hour drama toward a vigorous awakening of the public to defense problems. Don MacLaughlin continues to star as "David Harding", chief of the U.S. counter-spies. The new series will keep the public aware of the work of U.S. agents in foreign countries and also here.

Smiley Burnette, co-starred with Charles Starret in Columbia westerns, has taped a series of radio recordings of all 140 of the songs he has composed for them; he will also record dozens he used with Gene Autry.

THE FICTION CORNER

SWEET, EASY MONEY

By Richard H. Wilkinson

3-Minute Fiction

WHEN a man's flat on his face—financially speaking. I mean—he'll take any kind of a job. That's my excuse for playing nursemaid to Julia Upton. Bodyguard—that's what Moe Langdon, her producer called me. You see, there'd been a kidnapping scare and Julia was right at the top of the heap that year — a tempting morsel for abductors, and Moe figured she needed looking after. Also, he figured the publicity wouldn't do her any harm.

"After all," he grinned, "you were all-American fullback, and when the public reads that you're riding herd over little Julia—"

"A swell friend you are!" I snapped. "My pal!" I stopped. He was still grinning, the grin that meant it was hopeless for me to argue. "How much will you pay?"

"Two hundred bucks a week—and what sweet, easy money."

He was right, it was sweet, easy money—providing a man didn't have any pride. I earned every dime of that 200 bucks. I wasn't used to being ordered around by a little chit of a redhead.

"Tomorrow morning," she'd say, "we're going horseback riding. Be at the house at 9." Or: "Tonight the Keanes are giving a party."

I guess my attitude must have shown how I felt. At any rate, Julia began taking a delight in putting me on the spot—making me pose for pictures, making me attend afternoon teas where I'd be the only man present—stuff like that.

There came a time three weeks later when Julia wanted to go for a drive in the country. We drove toward Santa Barbara, were half way there when it flashed across my mind that she was due at the studio for a rehearsal at 3 o'clock, and at this rate she wouldn't be there.

"Tomorrow morning," she'd say, "we're going horseback riding. Be at the house at 9 o'clock."

I told her she'd better turn around and head back. She said she was tired of rehearsals and said how did I expect to make her if she didn't want to go?

"Like this," I said, and switched off the ignition and pulled up the brake. She was furious. She wouldn't get out of the driver's seat. So I lifted her up in my arms, and it was such a swell opportunity I kissed her.

She swore at me—real cuss words—and because I knew this would end my sweet, easy money job I kissed her again, then plumped her down in the seat and got behind the wheel . . . .

I DIDN'T bother to contact Moe. Instead I moved from my one room home into an apartment, and the next day set out to find myself a job.

I had expected the papers would be full of my discharge from Julia's employ, but they weren't. Not a word.

And this got me to thinking that maybe she wasn't quite as bad as I thought. As a matter of fact, I got to thinking other things too—mostly about Julia.

Two weeks later Moe Langdon called me up.

"Listen, you dub, Julia's been kidnapped and it's your fault. They want $50,000. It's got to be delivered to a rendezvous . . . ."

There was a guy waiting at the top of the pass when I got there.

He grinned at me when I gave him the dough. "Where's" Julia?" I said. He jerked a thumb over his shoulder. "Two miles back, in a cabin. Follow the trail."

I ran all the way to the cabin. Julia was inside, bound and gagged. I didn't know the extent of my relief, and apparently Julia didn't know hers.

"I could have had you fired from your old job," she said, "just the way I made Moe Langdon hire you for my bodyguard. But I didn't want to. I wanted you to—to satiate your old pride."

"Wait a minute," I said. "How about this kidnapping business?"

"It was your own fault," she said. "You—you were so stubborn. You wouldn't call me up. I had to do something."

"Then it was a gag?"

She didn't say anything, just stared at me. Well, I thought, what's the use? I'm destined to look after this kid the rest of my life, and I might as well like it.

GRASSROOTS

United States Must Not Condone U. N. Practices

By Wright A. Patterson

WHEN WE ADDED our name to the roster of the United Nations it was our belief the organization was founded on principles that would make for world betterment and aid materially in the outlawing of war. Incidents and events in connection with the unprovoked aggression, first of North Korea, and then of Red China, have placed us in the position of holding the bear by the tail, with no assistance.

We were asked to start the chastisement of North Korea with the reasonable expectation of support, both in men, munitions and cash in proportionate numbers and amounts. With the exception of some "token" contributions on the part of a few nations, both men and munitions, we have been left to "hold the bag" against both North Korea, and now the hordes of Red China.

While our troops have been fighting a disastrous retreat before far superior numbers, while we have suffered more than 50,000 casualties in killed, wounded and missing, while many thousands of the innocent people of South Korea have died from the attacks of the Red invaders, and the cold of a hard winter, their homes and property destroyed jointly by the North Korean and the Red Chinese armies, America asked that Red China be declared an aggressor, on the basis of known and indisputable facts.

During the long days, weeks and months while United Nation's delegates debated those undebatable facts of aggression, our troops retreated before the attacks of that Red Chinese army. The question before the United Nations delegates was not the fact of aggression. That was a known fact, and, as such, was not debatable. The question the delegates were to consider was to charge Red China with the act of aggression and brand her as an aggressor.

Every possible loophole was taken to prevent such a charge being taken, to protect Red China because she was a customer of the nationals of many nations and would possibly resent such action on the part of the delegates from nations from which Red China was buying commodities. It was selfish interests against principles.

The United States did not subscribe to an organizatioin of that character, nor can it, with honor, continue a membership in such an organization. By a joint resolution, the senate and house should make our position clear to all the world. In that joint resolution it should severely condemn the actions, or lack of action, of the United Nations, instruct our delegates in both the council and the general assembly to present the condemnation in those bodies, and then walk out, never to return. Congress should take back the United Nations building in New York city for which the American people paid the cost of erection and should in definite terms request the United Nations organization to leave our shores.

Unless we do something of that kind we cannot hope to retain, or regain, the respect and confidence of the peoples of the far east, whose interests have been so ruthlessly disregarded that the business interests of their nationals might not be affected. We cannot afford to provide a "hearth and home" for an organization that so easily and ruthlessly violates its principles and disregards its obligations. To continue membership in such an organization is but to give our approval to its actions.

For the sake of our national honor, and to keep faith with the peoples of the far east, we should as emphatically as possible disavow the action of the United Nations on the aggression of Red China.

General Eisenhower has today much the same job he had during World War II, that of soldier and commander of allied armies; that of organizer of men and materials, and that of diplomat. In World War II he made one serious mistake in the field of diplomacy. He accepted, without protest, instructions from his home government in Washington to hold back the armies of General Patton and those of General Montgomery that the Russians might have the advantage of entering Berlin first.

Lee Fritts, who runs the Fritts farm at Great Meadows, N.J., with his father and brother, prepares to give each cow her ration of brewers wet grains which they have used so successfully for the past 10 years.

DAIRY FEEDING

New Jersey Dairyman Confusing Experts With Own Feeding Plan

A dairyman near Newark, N.J., is confusing the experts and saving money in the bargain by his own system of feeding which features brewers grains.

This by-product of beer making has long been recognized by dairy farmers as an excellent source of fats and especially protein. But practically all dairymen who include either wet or dry brewers grains in their cows' diet, consider it as just a supplementary part of the feed, forming not more than one-third of the total.

Not so Ernest Fritts of Great Meadows, N.J., who for the past 10 years has been using wet brewers grains as the major item of feed.

Mr. Fritts and his two sons jointly operate two farms of 300 acres, of which 160 are tillable, in a small town about two hours drive from Newark. His commercial herd of 60 head is mixed Jerseys, Holsteins, Ayrshires and Guernseys.

Has his unorthodox feeding program paid off?

Mr. Fritts and his sons are enthusiastic on the point.

"Any farmer will tell you that when the butterfat in your milk averages 4.1 per cent as ours does, that you are giving your cows the right feed," says Mr. Fritts. "Our 60 head average between 25 and 30 cans a day, depending on how many dry cows are on hand, a good figure for a mixed herd. In fact, our red cows produce as much as the Holsteins and we are certain it is because of the brewers grains.

"This part of New Jersey is in an area where milk prices fluctuate badly. Our problem is to get maximum production and we think that brewers grains is the answer."

High in Protein

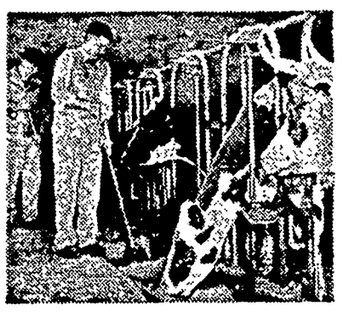
Brewers grains are recoverable from the brewing process in a ratio of about one pound for every three originally used. Total production last year, of which the greatest part was used for feed, amounted to nearly 9¼ million pounds. This by-product, according to authorities, contains about twice as much protein as the original barley and is also high in available nitrogen.

The usual procedure in dairy feeding is to give cows plenty of roughage. Mr. Fritts and his sons differ on this too. The brewers grains on their farm constitute maximum feed; hay is minimum. For example, daily roughage allotment for their 60 cows is four Holland bales of alfalfa-brome, a good legume which they grow themselves.

There are no set rules for feeding the cows on the Fritts' farm. Each cow is given a heaping bushel of brewers grains at the 4 a.m. and 1 p.m. feeding. They are milked at about 4:15 a.m. and at 3:45 p.m. At the time of the afternoon feeding they are given a hay ration.

"We sometimes hear that it is not good policy to milk cows while they are eating," says Mr. Fritts. "However there is nothing in our experience to show that it cuts milk production. Also we have been told that milk from a cow which has had a brewers grain ration, is apt to "taste." That certainly never happened to us.

"Another advantage of our brewery grain diet," says Mr. Fritts, "is its economy. We find it much cheaper than other grains. Right now we have two silos, a 14 x 40 and a 16 x 40 full of corn silage. We have another 25 tons of corn ears on hand plus that much more in the fields. We're going to cash crop it rather than give it to the cows."



Mixing brewers grains with molasses and water makes the feed more palatable to dairy cows. Above Lee Fritts (front) and his father sweep the grain into the feed trough.

Adds Molasses to Grain

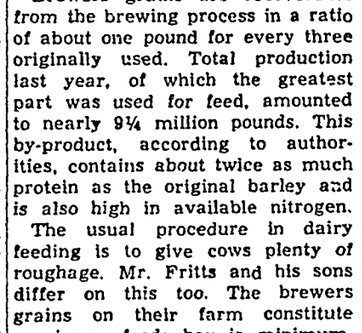
In order to make brewers grains more palatable, Mr. Fritts adds salt and molasses. Only last October a 600 lb. barrel of molasses cost them seven dollars; now the price has jumped to $23 a barrel. So to save money they dilute the molasses with water and can get by with two barrels a week; last fall they used a barrel a day, undiluted. But the cows' production has remained high as ever.

Their cows are kept in stalls all year around and are never out of yoke, except for breeding purposes. Mr. Fritts says that most of his breeding cows have given good milk production for six to seven years. And his non-breeding cows remain good milkers for an average of two years and better.

Mr Fritts also feels that another advantage of brewers grains as a feed is the excellent prices he gets for his cows after they are through as milkers. The cows which are ready for slaughter average 1300-1500 lbs.

On the Fritts farm the brewers grains used are the wet variety. Twice a week the farm truck is driven to Newark, 60 miles away, to pick up a load of ten tons. At the farm the grains are stored in a bin or "well." Although the load is practically dry when it is dumped at the farm, a drainage pump at the bottom of the well draws off excess water.

The Fritts have tried a number of other feeding experiments, among them hormone feeding. The new experiment, however, did not prove satisfactory and it was dropped. The Fritts found it too expensive and felt that it overstimulated their cows. Until some new dairy feeding method is perfected they will continue to use their old standby—brewers wet grains.



Brewers wet grains keep well in a tightly enclosed bin or store room. Unique feature of the store room on the Fritts farm is the pump (left hand corner) which constantly draws off excess water.

A heaping shovelfull of brewers wet grains per cow, twice a day, is the feeding routine at the Fritts dairy farm. Lee Fritts, who runs the farm with his father and brother, dumps the grain, valuable for its protein content, into the feeding trough.

Son-In-Law's Advice Pays

Frank W. Woche, 531 Apache Street, Houston, Texas, can't say enough for HADACOL. A retired steamfitter and plumber, he says that he's really enjoying life these days—for up until a few months ago he was run-down, and just couldn't seem to eat. Then his son-in-law suggested he start taking HADACOL, and after the first small bottle he picked up energy, and increased his appetite. He's now taken four large bottles, and says that he just wouldn't be without HADACOL. Mr. Woche found that HADACOL helped his system to overcome deficiencies of Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin and Iron.

Here is Mr. Woche's own statement: "I was so run-down and my son-in-law suggested I take HADACOL. I had lost lots of weight and was tired all the time. After the first small bottle I started feeling better right away. I have now taken four more large bottles and wouldn't be without HADACOL. HADACOL has done so much for me. It's wonderful and all of my friends saw how bad I was looking and now tell me how much better I look. I can't say enough for HADACOL."

If your druggist does not have HADACOL, order direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana. Send no money. Just your name and address on a penny post card. Pay postman. State whether you want the $3.50 hospital economy size or $1.25 trial size. Remember, money cheerfully refunded unless you are 100% satisfied. —Adv.

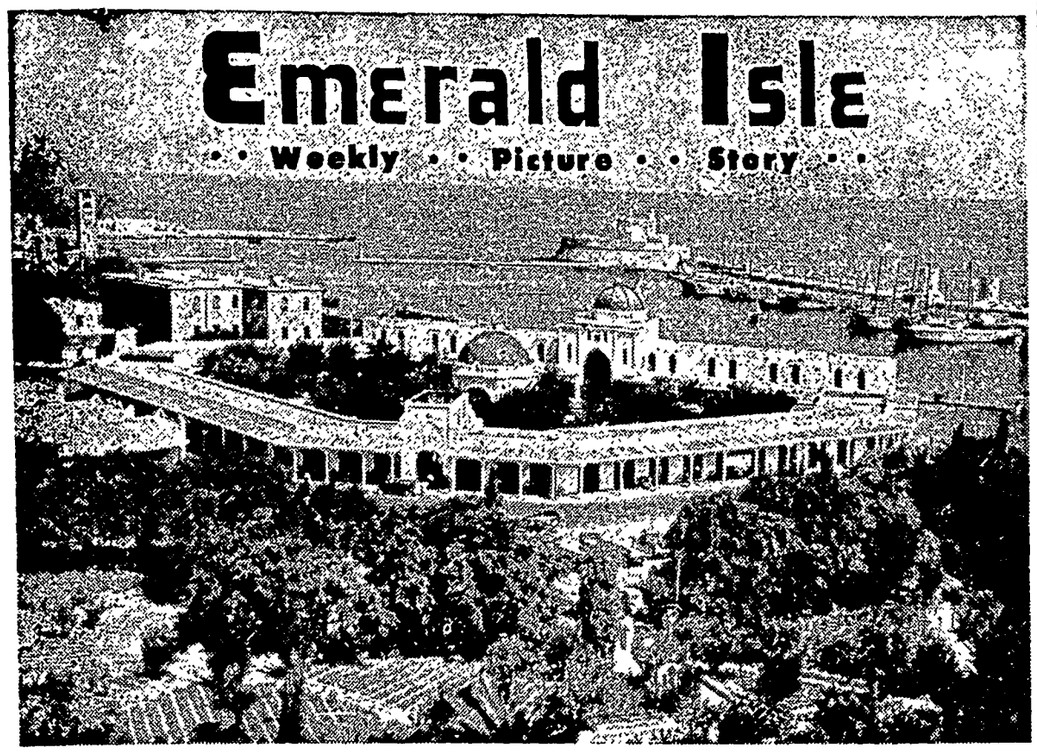
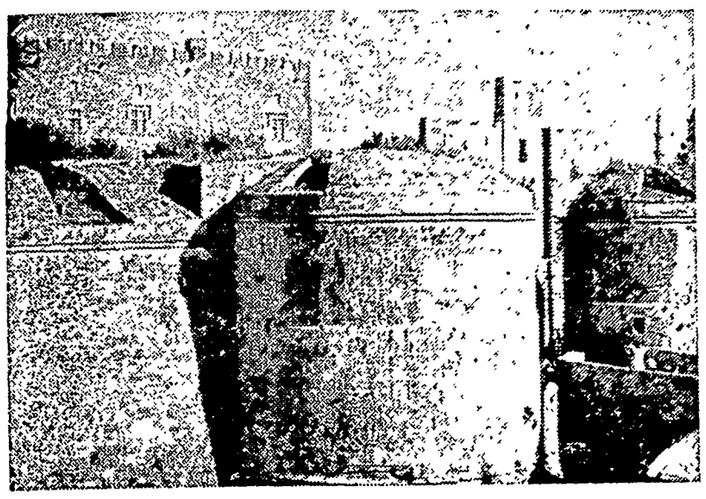
Emerald Isle

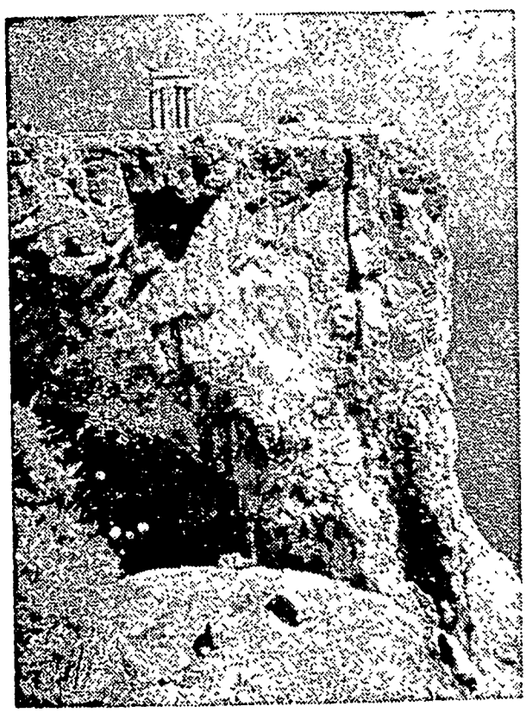
• • Weekly • • Picture • • Story • •





● Back under Greek rule after 600 years of foreign domination, Rhodes, called the "emerald isle" by the Greeks, is once again becoming the tourist attraction spot in that part of the world. Founded by Greek emigrants around 1500 B. C., the island has been under Roman, Byzantine, Turkish and Italian rule. Since World War II the Greeks have cultivated to the fullest the island's natural attractions. A bit of its beauty is seen in the above picture of Rhodes City, at the entrance of which once stood the gigantic statue of the sun god, Helios, then one of the wonders of the world.

● The six miles of crenelated walls, ramparts, moats and bastions (above) which surround the medieval city have remained intact to this day. These mighty, 36-foot-thick walls successfully withstood the repeated onslaught of the Turks during four sieges within a hundred years and give to the city a dominantly gothic atmosphere so attractive to tourists.



● The above picture shows the few remaining ruins of Lindos and its harbor in the background. Lindos was one of the three cities Greek emigrants founded when they moved to the island. The armies of Europe made Rhodes their headquarters for their crusades from 1309 to 1523.

● In the Iliad, chronicler Homer tells of the founding of three great cities on Rhodes which attracted the attention of the ancient world—Lindos, Camiros and Ialyse. In the picture above are ruins of the Acropolis of Lindos. In modern times, between World War I and World War II, Mussolini persecuted the population but preserved many such ruins. Barely 50 miles long and 25 miles wide, Rhodes is a swimmer's paradise, with many beautiful and uncrowded beaches as pictured at the right.

● Withstanding the ravages of time, the colonnade (above) overlooks the valley which holds the ruins of Camiros, the second ancient Rhodian city which was built on the western shore of the island.

Ex-Champs Criticize Present Crop

By GRANTLAND RICE

THE FAR-AWAY PAST moves up with today in laying down a heavy barrage on the boxing game of 1950 and 1951.

Jack Dempsey, among others, has been outspoken in his criticism There is another old-timer out here at Burbank who was a pretty fair heavyweight in his day and time. He is now 76 years old and he has already beaten one tough rap from being paralyzed His name is James J Jeffries, and he won the heavyweight championship from Bob Fitzsimmons just 52 years ago

Grantland Rice

Jeff picked up this crown in his 11th professional fight, an astonishing performance when you figure the deep value of experience in boxing. But Jim Jeffries was probably the finest athlete that ever won and held the title. He was over 6 feet tall and he weighed around 212 pounds at his best fighting weight. But he could run the 100 in 10 seconds and he could high jump close to 6 feet.

There are many who still think that the Jeffries of 1903 was the greatest heavyweight of them all. His unfortunate return to the ring—fat, partly bald and out of condition, removed part of his earlier greatness, just as Joe Louis is slowly shucking off his earlier fame by his later performances

Jeffries, like Dempsey, can't see the present crop of fighters "They are not willing to train or learn," he said. "They don't know what hard work means—I mean such things as five or ten miles on the road every day, long before a fight Jim Corbett trained and worked over eight hours a day, before he fought me at Coney Island. Few of these fellows today get in the shape needed to make a fighter."

I saw Jeffries work out around 1903. At that time there was no other fighter in the world close enough to make a contest. He was big, fast, strong—a high class boxer and a hard puncher. But above all you couldn't stop him with an ax. He was far improved over his showing with Sharkey and his first fight with Corbett. Gentleman Jim told me years ago in their second meeting that Jeffries was the better boxer.

The old fellow still has Jeffries Barn with its amateur fights, its wrestling and its training center at Burbank. But it's a far call to his Fitzsimmons fight in 1899. A trifle better than half a century And that's a long time in the fight game. Ask any fighter

There are still more ex-heavyweight champions left than ex-presidents. For one thing boxers get started in their 20's. Presidents are usually 50 or 60. It takes longer to make a President than it does a champion.

The list today from ex-champions shows Jim Jeffries, Tommy Burns, Jess Willard, Jack Dempsey, Gene Tunney, Jack Sharkey, Max Schmeling, Primo Carnera, Max Baer, Jim Braddock and Joe Louis.

This makes a total of 11 survivors. Since the reign of John Lawrence Sullivan which lasted until 1892, only Jim Corbett, Bob Fitzsimmons and Jack Johnson have passed from this hectic earthy show. All together, including John L. Sullivan, there have been 16 heavyweight champions of the world. Ezzard Charles is the last on the list.

Who is the best of the lot? Suppose we arrange them in order—

Jack Dempsey must be set on top as the best offensive fighter of them all.

Jack Johnson heads the list as the greatest defensive ringman.

Jim Corbett was all odds the best boxer.

Gene Tunney was the best trained.

Jeffries and Dempsey were the hardest to hurt.

Both Fitzsimmons and Louis were a strong mixture of good boxing and hard hitting. Jim Braddock rated high in the matter of ring courage You can't say too much about the others Max Baer could have been a great champion if he had liked his game. Max didn't. These sixteen champions form a strange human medley.

The Lemon Grove

Baseball's best pitcher over the last three years is now working his system into shape swinging at a golf ball and traveling many miles a day over various Los Angeles courses. You may recall the fact that Lemon is baseball's only big league pitcher able to win 20 or more games the last three seasons. Lemon blew himself to 23 games last season but with any luck he might easily have reached 30.

In addition to being a star pitcher Lemon is also one of baseball's better long-distance hitters. He could also be one of baseball's better outfielders.

"Ted Williams tells me you are the toughest pitcher he has to face," a golfer said to Lemon recently.

"That goes for me, too," Joe Di Maggio said. It might be added here that Joe Di Maggio agrees with Lemon about golf as a training game. "A ballplayer needs his legs as much as he needs anything else," Di Maggio said.

Correction

In the write-up of the fatal accident at the elevator last week the Times stated the man killed, Noel Zunkel, was foreman of the steel crew.

Russel H. Brooks, Jr., who was critically injured, was the foreman and had been foreman for about three years.

Mr. Brooks is still in a critical condition at the hospital, but is now conscious part of the time and is gradually getting better.

Mrs. Brooks had their trailer house moved to Mason City so that she can be with her husband each day.

Thorogood SHOES

SOON—GOOD SHOES WILL BE HARD TO GET!

Much of the best leather is already going into shoes for our fighting forces, but we are able to supply shoes for some time to come—shoes that will become increasingly valuable as quality leathers are curtailed for civilian production. We feel that fact should be made known to the Public.

We still have ample stock of rubber footwear—better check your needs and if you can foretell your needs for 1951 better buy your needs for the 51 season also.

Two Tickets Filed For Coming Town Election

CANDIDATES MAY FILE FOR OFFICE UNTIL SAT. NIGHT

Some Changes Are Expected To Be Made On Tickets Filed

Two complete tickets for the coming Town Election here on Monday, March 26th, have been filed with the Clerk, A. R. Arnold.

The first ticket to be filed was a petition circulated headed with V. A. Cook for Mayor and the following Councilmen: Henry Buseman, Roy Schaefer, Fred Barz, Martin Barz, and Fred Kluckhohn. C. G. Waterman was named for Treasurer.

Caucus Nominates Ticket

A Town Caucus, called by Mayor W. C. Keraus was held at the Fire Station Thursday evening with some twenty citizens attending. W. C. Keraus was named chairman of the meeting and Elwood Geary, secretary.

After several ballots had been taken W. F. Pavey was named as candidate for Mayor, and the following were named as Councilmen: Fred J. Arnold, Frank Schulz, Dr. D. P. Anderson, Clifford Montgomery, and Orville Bridges. Allen Barz was nominated as Treasurer.

The Caucus went on record extending a vote of thanks and appreciation of the service rendered the Town by Mayor Keraus and his Councilmen, as well as other officers of the Town.

Changes May Be Made

It has been rumored around that some of the men who were nominated may withdraw from the ticket. The ticket by the Caucus has a committee empowered to fill vacancies. The names placed on the ballot by petition which may withdraw will have to be re-petitioned to fill a vacancy. In either case, Saturday, March 17th is the last filing day.

All officers are for a two-year term.

JUNIOR HIGH COUNTY TOURNAMENT HELD AT BRITT

The Junior High boys basketball team traveled to Britt Saturday morning for their county tournament.

Our opponents, Hayfield, did not show up because of the bad weather, so Coach Juhl's team gave him a birthday present of a forfeit, placing them in the second round against Corwith.

Other results of the tournament were as follows:

Garner 44 - Crystal Lake 40
Corwith 37 - Britt 22
Klemme 2 - Hayfield, forfeit
Garner 2 - Goodell, forfeit
Kanawha also won over Woden.

Saturday, March 10, will put Klemme against Corwith at 9:00 and Kanawha versus Garner at 10:00. The finals will be played at 1:00 the same day.

The best of luck to Coach Juhl's "Rockets."

Klemme Woman's Society Will Hold Meeting

The Study Group of the Klemme Woman's Society will meet on Thursday afternoon at 2 at the home of Mrs. C. A. Arnold with Miss Minnie Lenz as assisting hostess. The Devotional leader will be Miss Leona Lau and Mr. Egeland will present the lesson.

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

The medical corpsman in battle-riddled Korea has a job to do—a job he knows and does well, as thousands of Purple Heart medal-winners will testify.

The soldier in Korea knows his job pretty well, too, after eight months of rugged fighting.

The corpsman perfected his first aid and the soldier learned his tactics under fire . . a hard school, but one in which you learn fast, or not at all.

We here at home haven't had to enroll in such a school. At least, not yet. But imagine what it'd be like to need medical attention, and have none near—to be caught in an air raid or attack and have no idea what to do for protection and self-preservation.

The opportunity to learn what to do in both cases is available to you, right now, and your Iowa Safety Congress strongly urges you to take advantage of that opportunity.

You can enroll now in American Red Cross first aid training, and you can volunteer for Civil Defense training. Right now, contact your nearest American Red Cross chapter and your county Civil Defence Council chairman.

Remember—in peace or in war, "The training you master can ward off disaster!"

MANUFACTURED OVER 30,000 POUNDS MORE BUTTER IN 1950

Bob Hinman And Ed. Thieman Named New Board Members

Despite the bad weather and slippery roads, there was a fairly good crowd present at the Annual meeting of the Klemme Cooperative Creamery Co. held at the Grade School building. The meeting had been called previously but was postponed because of the weather.

Ernest Smith, State Inspector, was the main speaker. He complimented the local creamery for the progress they had made, the fine increase in production and for paying prices that were above the average in North Iowa.

Good Increase Shown

Manager Kenneth Medin and his helpers at the plant are to be complimented for the increase during the past year, both in production and in business. More than 30,000 pounds more butter was made the past year and business increased by over $20,000.00 The total income was $230,231.58.

Bob Hinman and Ed. Thieman were elected as new Board members. Dwight Helps and John Kaduce, Jr. were retiring directors. All of the old board were re-elected and are:

Alvin Goll ---------- President
F. W. Klinge -- Vice-President
Elmer Beier --------- Secretary

Directors

Melvin Buseman - Mitchell Bock
Cecil Katter - Clarence Lenz
Bob Hinman - Ed. Thieman

K. D. Medin is manager and is assisted at the plant by Karl Huenemann, Harvey Barkema, Eugene Beier, Quintin Stille and Geo. Buseman. Geo. Buseman began work March 1st to take the place of Eugene Beier, who moved up a notch to take over Mervin Barkema's work. Mervin resigned to go on the farm.

SHAMROCKS OUT OF BASKET BALL THIS YEAR

Many Families Move Mar. 1

MARCH FIRST SAW MOVING ABOUT IN COMMUNITY

Farmers And Towns Folks Have Moved To New Homes The Past Week

There is always more or less moving from one location to another come March 1st, and this year was no exception, but there was perhaps less moving than in formal years, in this community.

The Gerald Swyter family, who farmed the Carpenter place south of Klemme on Highway 69, moved to a farm on a Britt route. Mr. and Mrs. Karl Loeffler, Gregg and Vance, of near Belmond moved to the farm vacated by the Swyster family. Mr. and Mrs. Carl Ersman of near Rowan, moved into the tenant house on the same farm, vacated by the Farls family. The Loefflers are well known in this community as Mrs. Loeffler is the former Phyllis Swanson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Swanson.

The David Hackett family moved into the Riverside school south of Klemme. Mr. Hackett will be employed by Ed. Blanchett on the farm southeast of Klemme.

Avron Kreitlow and family, who have lived in Dr. Anderson's house across the street north of the Echard Zeidler residence in northwest Klemme, have moved to the Albert Eske farm which they purchased last fall. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kaduce, who have lived in the Dan Kaduce house, have moved to the house vacated by the Kreitlows.

Art Schlawin and family, formly of this community but who have been farming in the Garner community have moved to the old Christie farm on Highway 69 north of Goodell. This farm was purchased by Henry Buseman about a year ago. Chas. Velau farmed there last year.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hopkey held a farm sale and have retired from their farm southeast of Klemme and moved into Meservey where they purchased a home. Hanford Floy and family of Thornton moved to Carl Hopkey's farm.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Klinge retired from their farm northwest of Klemme and moved into the Art Wellemeyer residence in south Klemme which they purchased. Their son, Wayne and wife will farm the home place.

Frank Hougland and family who have been living at the Eric Meyer farm home on the C. A. Larsen farm west of Klemme have moved to a farm near Nevada.

Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Priebe have quit farming on the Julius Priebe farm southwest of Klemme and are moving to Klemme. They have purchased a house which they have moved to a lot south of the Martin Barz residence. Mr. and Mrs. Mervin Barkema, who lived in Tom Blank's house in southwest Klemme, moved to the Priebe farm to begin farming for themselves. Mr. and Mrs. Garland Brinkman, who have been living in the apartment in the Wiles building, moved to the Blank house vacated by the Barkemas.

Reno Harms and family, who have been on the Harry Carpenter farm west of Goodell, have moved to the Ray Veldhouse farm northwest of Klemme. Harms and Veldhouse will farm in partnership. Harms was employed on the Veldhouse farm for several years until last year when he worked for Mr. Carpenter.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Kuhlers, who have been farming near Clear Lake moved to the Albert Etchen farm southwest of Klemme. Mrs. Kuhlers is a daughter of the Etchens. Mr. and Mrs. Etchen moved to town into the house which they purchased, the former G. W. Kluckhohn house in South Klemme.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Schoenwetter expect to move back to their farm in Liberty township from their home in Klemme. The Schoenwetter have had their farm home re-finished.

Charles Christie and family have moved from the country into the Bill Johnson house in Northwest Klemme, which was vacated by the Cappon family. Charles Christie will continue to farm with his father west of town.

Mr. and Mrs. Lew Griffen retired from farm life and moved into their new home which they built in Klemme. Their son-in-law, Fred Olthoff and family are farming the home place northwest of Klemme.

Ventura-Clear Lake Hiway

NO. 18 FOLLOWS THE NORTH SIDE OF MILWAUKEE LINE

State Engineer Says Work Is 1951 Project

The relocation of highway 18 from Clear Lake to Ventura to follow the north side of the Milwaukee railroad right of way is a 1951 project, it was revealed Friday.

"Relocation, grading, bridging and culverts from the Hancock county line through the city of Clear Lake to connect with the present U. S. No. 18 near the east edge of the city of Clear Lake" are included in the 1951 primary road construction program approved by state highway commission.

"Surveys for this portion of U.S. No. 18 have been completed," according to F. R. White, chief engineer of the Iowa state highway commission.

Working On Plans

Considerable work already has been done on the plans, he stated, but he could not state definitely when the work would be put under contract.

Purchasing of the right of way for the highway already has begun, according to Raymond Zack, district engineer at Mason City for the highway commission.

Contracts for the grading, bridges and culverts on the relocation from Garner to the county line were let last fall. The contract for the paving of this portion was let last week to the Fred Carlson Company, Decorah, for $373,515.87.

Takes 11 Homes

The new highway will adjoin the Milwaukee right of way all the way from the east edge of Clear Lake to the overpass west of Garner, said Glen Doty, assistant to Zack. The centerlines of the railroad and highway will be exactly 120 feet apart that entire distance, he said.

The relocation will take away 2 homes at Ventura and 9 at Clear Lake, Doty reported. One hole and a tee of the Clear Lake golf course also will be affected.

JOAN LOWENBERG, PFC. JANSSEN WED

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lowenberg of Goodell announce the marriage of their daughter, Joan, to Pfc. Merle Janssen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Will Janssen of south of Klemme on Highway 69. The Rev. R. A. Ormsby read the double ring ceremony in the presence of the immediate families in the Catholic rectory at Belmond February 19th.

They were attended by the bride's sister, Lois, and bridegroom's brother, Roy.

The bride is a graduate of the Goodell high school and Hamilton's School of Commerce at Mason City. He is a graduate of the Belmond school and worked at the parental farm until entering the service.

Following the ceremony, a dinner was served in the Dempsey tea room. The next day the couple accompanied by his parents and his sister, Mrs. Paul Given, and sons of Appleton, Wis., went to Gilidden, the Janssens' former home where the couple was honored with a shower in the home of the bridegroom's uncle, C. A. Kriegle.

Following a few days wedding trip the bridegroom left for Seattle, Wash., with the armed forces and the bride returned to her work as clerk in Wright county auditor's office in Clarion.

ENTERTAINED WEDDING GUESTS AT SUPPER SAT.

Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Hummel entertained the following to a buffet style supper in their home Saturday evening:

Miss Emily Lou Johnson, Mr. Carl Swearingen, Miss Margaret Klein, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Swearingen and family, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Bryan, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Swearingen and Floyd Huston, all of Marshalltown; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Johnson and daughter of Renwick; Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Heivilin and family, Mrs. Winnifred Price, George Johnson and Ruth Bickford of Mason City.

WAYNE KLINGE OF KLEMME IS MARRIED TO MARTHA MENNENGA FEB. 19

Miss Martha Jo Anne Menenga, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Mennenga of Belmond and Wayne Klinge, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Klinge of Klemme were united in marriage at the home of the bride Monday afternoon, February 19, 1951.

The Rev. O. G. Papen of the Immanuel Reformed Church at Belmond officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. The couple was attended by Mr. and Mrs. David Sappenfield, brother-in-law and sister of the bride.

The bridal gown, sewn by the brides sister, was princess style and of white satin, with sleeves and yoke of imported lace. Her shoulder length veil was white nylon net and she carried a white orchid encircled by red roses. Her jewlery was a triple strand of pearls, a gift of the bridegroom.

The brides attendant wore a gown of pink and carried a gardenia encircled by red roses.

A wedding luncheon was served to the immediate families and close friends who had witnessed the ceremony.

The bride chose February 19 as her wedding day in honor of the 56th wedding anniversary of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Mennenga who were present.

After a trip through the southern states, the newlyweds will be at home on a farm southeast of Britt.

THE STATE CONSERVATION COMMISSION ANNOUNCES '51 FISHING SEASON

The State Conservation Commission has announced the 1951 fishing season with three minor changes in the regulations.

The season on non-nesting fishes including walleye pike, perch, silver or white bass, yellow bass, and northern pike will open May 15th the same date as last year. The season on nesting fishes including large and smallmouth bass, warmouth bass, sunfish, bluegills, and rock bass, will open May 30, one day earlier than last year. The earlier opening is to allow anglers to catch this species on Decoration Day.

As in 1950 there is no length limit on any species of fish expet largemouth and smallmouth bass on which 10 inches is the maximum length. There is a weight limit on sand sturgeon which must be 1 pound or over.

The catfish season will close November 30 instead of Feb. 15. The Commission explained that the winter closing of catfish is to aid in enforcement. Catfish do not bite well during the wintertime and the regulation was made necessary because of illegal winter catfish spearing.

Northern and Walleye pike were placed on the continuous open season list on the bondary streams.

Catfish, except bullheads will be the first season to open on April 15th. Trout follow May 1st.

There is a continuous open season on crappie, bullheads, sheepshead, redhorse, gar, suckers, gizzard shad, mooneye, goldeye, carp, buffalo, quillback, carpsuckers, dogfish, eel, burbots and chubs.

CIVIL DEFENSE

Knowledge of Biological Warfare Is Vital Link in Civil Defense

(This is the third of a series of articles on civil defense by Walter A. Shead, Western Newspaper Union's Washington correspondent.)

By WALTER A. SHEAD

WASHINGTON, D.C. — With an enemy which places no value whatever upon the lives of individuals, which has no moral scruples as we know them, an atomic bomb is not the only peril faced by the American people in an all-out war with Russia.

Biological warfare against people and against animals is one of these perils. This sort of warfare which can spread a wide variety of disease including a number of viruses, rickettisae, bacetria, fungi, protozoa and soluble toxins, may be waged from within by sabotage, or from without by enemy planes and can be disseminated through a variety of media, chief of which are food, air and water. These infectious diseases taken in by humans through inhalation, absorption through the skin or by food, could be disseminated by aerial bombs and other munitions, by release of infective aerosols from planes or from ground devices, taking advantage of favorable winds, or by release in ventilating systems of large auditoriums. Particularly effective is contamination of water sources.

In addition to humans, biological warfare against animals can be effective since meat, dairy and poultry products are an important source of diet for both military and civilian personnel. Production of wool and leather, might be curtailed and important biologicals and pharmaceuticals such as adrenalin, liver extract and insulin, entirely dependent upon animal glands and organs, could be cut off.

Such animal diseases as foot-and-mouth disease, rinderpest, fowl pest and foreign types of Newcastle disease appear to have greater possibilities for damage in this country.

Then there is biological warfare against crops in the spread of insect pests and plant diseases which constitute a threat to our food supply. It would be comparatively easy for low flying planes to spread such crop and animal diseases across the vast stretches of the country's great plains where wheat, oats and the meat animals are raised and where population is comparatively meager. The department of agriculture knows about many of these foreign pests such as Japanese beetle, European corn borer, Mediterranean fruit fly, citrus canker and other pests. Our most successful method of keeping down losses is development of strains resistant to specific diseases, which takes time. But it is likely that new organisms which present crop varieties cannot resist, may be introduced, even in peace time, and herbicidal chemicals might be disseminated openly over these vast crop areas where hostile planes might gain access.

OF COURSE CONSTANT vigilance, before-hand knowledge how to detect the effect of biological warfare on both humans and animals, the proper method of fighting the effects, and how state, towns, cities, and counties can be organized to fight these perils is a function of the civil defense administration. Probably one of the most insidious and dangerous methods of chemical warfare is the dissemination of so-called nerve gases, developed in Germany during World War II. These nerve gases are more toxic than any previously known war gases and are nearly colorless and odorless. They are liquids which yield toxic vapors when they evaporate and are laid down near the ground. These gases cut off breathing and blood circulation. Action is prompt and lethal and inhalation for a few seconds may cause death. Exposure to mild traces of the vapor causes bronchial restriction with difficulty in breathing, coughing and a water discharge of the nose. A slightly greater exposure induces painful constriction of eye muscles, terrific pain back of the eye-balls. Larger doses cause rapid and severe broncho-spasms, preventing both inhalation and exhalation. The victim becomes confused and cyanotic, may have nausea and vomiting and falls unconscious. The blood pressure falls, heart beat is slowed and may or may not start again.

The U.S. public health service has worked out treatments for all these inhuman forms of modern warfare in the biological and chemical field. The point is in learning how to combat it; what treatments to give in emergencies and in the long pull for recovery; to pile up stocks of the right kind of medicines, particularly atrophine and tridione, plenty of gas masks, protective clothing; how to prevent contamination, hospitalization and a dozen other necessities in case of such an attack.

Doctors and veterinarians must take special courses in how to combat the effects and this professional manpower must come from the private ranks. Therefore full cooperation of the various state, county and local medical and related professional groups is essential. Be ready to volunteer.

(Next week's article will discuss national, state, and regional training centers in the civil defense program.)

Star Dust

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

ON MARCH 4 "Theatre Guild on the Air" plans to do a full hour-and-a-half hour broadcast of "Hamlet", which will certainly be heard by the largest single audience that has ever heard it since Shakespeare wrote the play centuries ago. It will come from the stage of the Belasco Theatre in New York and will be heard over the full NBC network. Stars will be Dorothy McGuire of the movies and Pamela Brown and John Gielgud of the theatre, both now appearing in one of the season's hits, "The Lady's Not for Burning". "Hamlet" was modernized for GI's during the war, and the broadcast will follow along that line.

Irene Vernon, whose latest picture is "Sound of Fury" (a Robert Stillman production for United Artists), is one of the four judges who will hand out 15 savings bonds to the winners of the Num-Zit baby beauty contest. It's open to infants from 6½ months to 2½ years old, from March 1 to June 1. Entry blanks available at all drugstores.

BEWILDERED BOY

By Willard Olvan Persing

MY HANDS came up shoulder high. I didn't think the kid would use the gun intentionly, but scared and cold as he was his hand shook so much that I was more than a little worried. I wasn't going to startle him into waking any of the townspeople. They would find out plenty soon enough that I had been caught flat-footed by this teen-age badman.

3-Minute Fiction

Otto was standing behind the counter, his hands resting easily on its scarred top. I couldn't figure it, but he was half smiling at the wild-eyed, boyish face that was half covered with a dirty white handkerchief.

"Sure, Son," Otto was saying, "I'll give you the money, after I fix you a bite to eat."

The kid's eyes lit up for a moment, then he frowned and said, "You're trying to trick me into taking off the mask."

Otto shook his head slowly. "I'll put some sandwiches in a sack so you can take them with you." He turned his back on the kid and went to work at the sandwich board.

They seemed to have forgotten me, so I started edging around behind the youngster. I figured that was why Otto was stalling, but I had moved only a few inches when he stopped me.

"Take it easy, Joe, you're apt to ruin his appetite."

At these words from Otto, the kid spun around. I was staring at Otto, trying to figure out what in the world he had in mind. There wasn't any writing on the back of Otto's neck, and it was too deep for me, so I hooked a stool with my toe and pulled it out where I could sit down and still see what was going on.

"This the first time you've tried this?" Otto was asking the kid with the dirty handkerchief over his face.

Otto turned around with a hamburger in his hand. He reached across the counter and handed it to me. "Maybe this will keep you out of mischief for a while," he said, grinning at my bewilderment.

After all, he was the one getting robbed, so I decided I might as well go along with whatever he was trying to do. All I stood to lose was maybe my job.

"This the first time you've tried this?", Otto was asking the kid.

The kid's head nodded quickly, then he frowned and said, "What difference does it make? Hurry up with those hamburgers."

I was checking the kid's description again to see if there was anything I had missed. He had brown eyes and was waving a Luger pistol at us. His hair, if any, was hidden under an old cap pulled down over his ears. I was still trying to figure out how much slack there was in the bulky overalls when Otto dumped the cash drawer out on top of the counter.

He counted the money into a paper sack and placed it a couple of feet from the sack of hamburgers. "Thirty dollars," he said to the kid, "not much pay for the chance you're taking."

The kid reached cut and scooped the two sacks togeher, using both hands. His right hand with the Luger came to rest a few inches from Otto's stomach. Otto slammed a huge hand down over the kid's hand and gun, clamping them to the counter.

I started to yell at Otto, if that gun went off, he wouldn't have a chance.

"Take it easy, both of you," he told me and the squirming kid. "That gun isn't loaded." To me he said, "I'm surprised you couldn't tell by looking at the extractor."

I didn't have any answer for that. "That thirty dollars is your next two weeks wages," Otto told the kid, "and you can have all you want to eat." He slipped the gun out of the kid's fist and placed it out of sight under the counter.

The kid was still scared. "Aren't you going to tell the cops?"

Otto grinned and pointed at me. "That's them, Son."

The kid paled and wilted That took all the fight out of him.

I stared at the kid for a minute, then stood up and headed for the door. "Time to make my rounds," I said, "Otto, you should hire some young fellow to help out in here, you're getting too old to do it all yourself."

Let's Hope Economists Figured Income Accurately

By Wright A. Patterson

WHAT PERCENTAGE of each dollar we earn during the next fiscal year, beginning July 1, 1951, does the President ask congress to take away from us as federal taxes to pay for rearmament and the expenses of the government? That is an important question to each American.

The President asks for a tax that will produce a total of $71 billion. That is the highest total amount the nation has ever been asked to pay, but the President estimates that the total earnings of Americans for the next fiscal year will be not less than $240 billion, and of that amount we will pay out of each dollar we earn 25.9 cents. As a tax, that is mild compared with what we were charged in 1945, when the government took 52.42 out of each of our earned dollars, and at that we were a long, long way from paying the war cost of that year, and added more than 70 billions to our national debt.

Now the President is insisting that we pay the cost of rearmament as we go, and not increase the national indebtedness, and he figures a tax of 25.9, or less than 30 cents out of each earned dollar will accomplish that result.

What the total may be depends entirely on the total of the national income, the earnings of Americans as individuals, corporations, stockholders or bond holders, farmers. If the President is right in his estimate of a national income of $240 billion that 25.9 cents out of each dollar will produce the $71 billion he says must be raised. It all depends on what we, collectively, earn during the next fiscal year.

The President presented to congress a statement of what percentage of each earned dollar had been paid to the government as taxes in other years: in 1939 we paid as taxes 12.8 cents out of each earned dollar; in 1945 it was 52.42; in 1948 it was 16; in 1949, 17.9; in 1950, 18.3; in 1951, 18.7.

Except for the year 1949, the tax rate on each earned dollar has not fluctuated as radically as we have thought, but the number of dollars we have earned, the total of the national annual income has fluctuated greatly if the President's figures are correct, and his figure for the next fiscal year is estimated at the high point of $240 billion. Let us hope we make it, and if we do we can easily afford to pay the 25.9 out of each of those dollars, keep the nation out of the red, and still pay the rearmament bills.

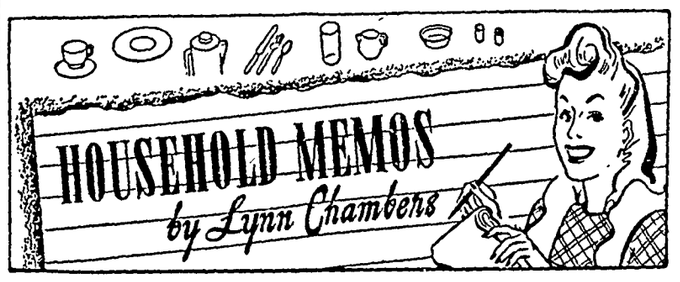
The President gave to congress some idea as to who would pay the additional taxes. He would collect 35 per cent of it from individuals, that is, from workers, farmers, professional people and merchants, twenty-seven per cent from corporations, 11 per cent from additional excise taxes, and four per cent from customs. He did not say, but he undoubtedly knows, that the 27 per cent collected from corporations, will be paid by the customers. The corporations will add that 27 per cent to the price of their products, and the purchaser of their products will do the paying.

The President also offered a chart showing for what he proposed to spend the $71,000,000,000 (tax dollars) he was demanding. Fifty eight cents of each dollar would go to rearmament; 17 cents to the normal expense of the government; 10 cents to meet our international obligations; eight cents for interest on our national debt; seven cents to the veterans administration.

It can all work out that way, provided congress passes the needed tax legislation and the President's advisers are sufficiently good at their economics to not overestimate the national income for the year beginning next July 1. If that estimated national income is more dollars than we Americans receive, the President will not have as many dollars to spend as he wants.

The President has intimated that in addition to the $71 billion he wants for next year, he may ask congress for another $2,700,000,000 with which to balance the expenditures for this year, so as not to have to add that to the national debt. If those economists have over-guessed the amount of our annual earnings, we may have another tax increase in 1952

The above is the tax picture the President painted.



Fish Demand Careful Cooking to Preserve Delicate Full Flavor

MANY PEOPLE WHO really like fish have accustomed themselves to the disagreeable odors that often go with its cookery; many more people would be very fond of fish if it didn't fill the house with odors during its preparation.

How few homemakers realize that the cooking of fish entails no unpleasant smell! Here is a delicate food that is tender and tasty. When cooked only to the point of doneness, at proper temperature, its only odor is as savory as that of nicely cooked chicken or beefsteak!

Many of the broiled fish recipes call for high temperature, but for only a short time. If cooked just so, fish can be downright delicious Do give it a chance.

* * *

YOU NEED DO little to fish to make it pleasing. It's tender and juicy, easy to prepare, delightful for meal variety. It can be seasoned or served with sauce, but in every way, it's good.

Creole Salmon
(Serves 4)

- 1 pound can pink salmon
- 1 egg
- 1 green pepper, finely diced
- 1 small onion, finely sliced
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon green pepper
- 1 teaspoon chili powder
- 1 cup canned tomatoes
- 1 cup bread crumbs
- 3 sprigs parsley, diced finely
- 2 tablespoons butter

Mix salmon and egg in saucepan. Add chopped green pepper and onion, seasonings, tomatoes and half the crumbs. Simmer for 10 minutes. Add minced parsley, cook 5 minutes longer. Turn into greased casserole, or individual baking dishes, sprinkle with remaining bread crumbs and bake in hot oven (400°) until crumbs are brown. Serve while hot.

Spanish Style Fish
(Serves 4-6)

- 4 cod steaks
- 2 egg yolks
- Flour
- ½ cup oil
- 3 tablespoons honey
- 3 tablespoons lemon juice
- ⅛ teaspoon allspice

Cut steaks into serving pieces. Add 2 tablespoons water to egg yolks and beat slightly. Dip fish into egg yolks and then into flour; brown quickly on both sides in hot oil. Add honey, lemon juice and allspice and simmer fish until all liquid is absorbed, about 5 minutes, turning once.

Baked Fillet of Fish
(Serves 6)

- 6-8 fillets of lean fish (sole, haddock, bluefish)
- 2 tablespoons butter or salad oil.
- 2 teaspoons chopped onion or 1 clove garlic, very finely minced
- 1 bay leaf, broken very fine
- 2 tomatoes, skinned, thickly sliced
- 1 green pepper, sliced
- Juice 1 lemon
- Salt, pepper

Melt butter. Add onion (or garlic) minced, with bay leaf, stir over low heat until soft. Arrange tomato slices with over-lapping slices of green peppers to cover bottom of large shallow baking dish. Sprinkle the sauted onion or garlic over top. Add salt and pepper. Arrange the fish fillets on this "bed" of tomatoes and peppers. Sprinkle with lemon juice, salt and pepper. Cover with waxed paper; bake in moderate oven (350°) 20-30 minutes. Pour over this Mustard Hollandaise Sauce. Brown under broiler. Serve at once.

Mustard Hollandaise Sauce

- 3 egg yolks
- 3 teaspoons dry mustard
- 1 teaspoon tarragon vinegar
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- Cayenne pepper
- 2 tablespoons cream
- 6 tablespoons butter

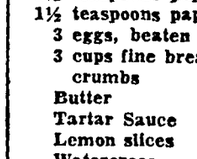
Mix in medium small bowl (o top of double boiler) the egg yolks mustard, tarragon vinegar, salt cayenne pepper, cream. Place over hot water (not boiling) and beat until mixture begins to thicken. Add butter, bit by bit, stirring continuously until sauce is rich and creamy. Remove from over water. If too thick, thin with a little additional cream.



Broiled Rock Lobster Tails
(Serves 4)

- 4 small rock lobster tails
- ½ cup melted butter
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 3 tablespoons chopped parsley
- Salt and pepper

Crack heavy back shell of lobster tails lengthwise to make tail lie flat. Turn lobster over and remove thin under shell with scissors. Combine butter, lemon juice, parsley, salt and pepper. Preheat oven and broiling pan at 400°. Place lobster tails on back on pan, brush with butter and set pan about 4 inches from heat. Basting frequently with butter, broil about 15 minutes or until lobster tails are well browned. Serve hot or cold with lemon wedges and mayonnaise.

Rock Lobster Fries
(Serves 6)

- 2½ pounds boiled rock lobster tails
- 1½ cups flour
- 2 tablespoons salt
- 1½ teaspoons pepper
- 1½ teaspoons paprika
- 3 eggs, beaten
- 3 cups fine bread or cracker crumbs
- Butter
- Tartar Sauce
- Lemon slices
- Watercress

Remove cooked meat from lobster tails; cut into egg-sized chunks. Roll lightly in a mixture of flour and seasonings. Dip floured pieces in beaten eggs. Roll in fine bread or cracker crumbs. Melt enough butter to fill ¼ inch depth in skillet. Saute lobster until nicely browned on all sides. Serve with tartar sauce, garnish with lemon slices and watercress.

Tartar Sauce
(Makes 1½ cups)

- 1 cup mayonnaise
- 1 tablespoon chopped onion or chives
- 2 tablespoons chopped olives
- 1 tablespoon chopped sweet pickle
- 1 tablespoon chopped sour pickle
- 1 tablespoon chopped pimiento
- 1 tablespoon capers

Mix all ingredients, blending well.

Broiled lobster tails are a favorite with many for a good fish dinner. They will broil quickly, and are done when they turn a deep, rich pink. Serve them with lemon wedges and mayonnaise.

LYNN SAYS:
Add Fanciful Touches To Everyday Foods

Add some finely chopped spinach to pancake batter and make spinach pancakes. Serve with pot roast or as a vegetable. This is guaranteed to make spinach a favorite even amongst those hard to convert.

Chopped liver seasoned and mixed with bread crumbs and egg makes a first rate main dish especially when the patties are wrapped in bacon and cooked with tomato sauce.

Leftover pieces of fish are just the thing to add to a crisp green salad, served with a lemon-French dressing that's really tart.

When serving sauce with fish, take a bit of time preparing attractive lemon cups for serving the sauce accompaniment. Halves of lemon, scooped out and scalloped at edges are lovely.

Frankfurter scallop is easily made with sliced frankfurters and scalloped potatoes. Add about one tablespoon of prepared mustard to each cup of white sauce used.

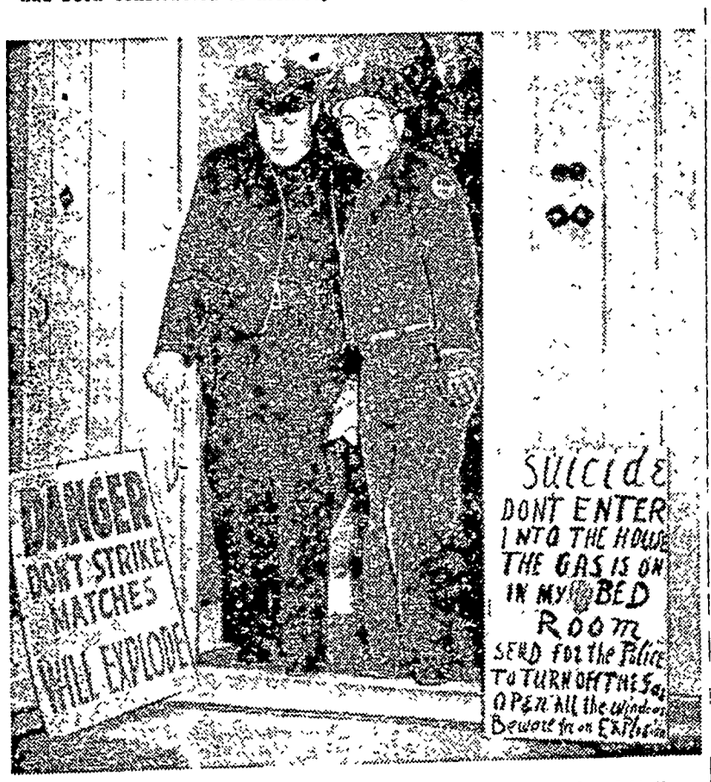
FROZEN BODIES OF KOREAN CIVILIANS . . . As the United Nations forces advance northward along the trail of the Red army's retreat, they come upon the remains of thousands of helpless victims who have been left behind by the North Koreans and Chinese Communists to perish in the sub-zero weather. Here the frozen bodies of a father and son lie as they were found by an American graves registration unit 100 yards off the road a mile south of Osan. In cases where victims can be identified as husband and wife, they are buried in the same grave. Mothers and children are always buried together.

The four chaplains, a Catholic, two Protestants, and a Jew, gave their lives in an attempt to save G.I.'s aboard the vessel. President Truman was on hand to dedicate the chapel to the four chaplains. The chapel that has been constructed in memory of these religious heroes stands in Philadelphia.



CAREFUL SUICIDE . . . Los Angeles police carry the body of Nathan Goldberg, 71, from the apartment where the elderly man committed suicide. Signs warn visitors not to strike matches and advise them to call the police upon discovery of his body.

PUNISHED FOR LYING . . . Former commerce department official, William Remington (left), shakes hands with his attorney, William Chanler, after he was sentenced to five years and fined $2,000 for perjury. He was accused of lying when he denied ever being a Red. The courts thought otherwise, thus the perjury charge. The punishment was not given him for his alleged Communism but for denying that he ever was affiliated with the Communist party.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Gov. Dewey Breaks With Top GOP Leaders on Arms Aid to Europe; Farm Aid Needed to Kill Rackets

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

DEWEY:

Breaks With Top Men

The hints at a serious riff in policy within the Republican party during the past few months took on definite form when Gov. Thomas E. Dewey took sharp issue with such top G.O.P. leaders as Taft of Ohio, Wherry of Nebraska, and former president Herbert Hoover over the defense of Europe.

In one of the bluntest statements ever made by Dewey, the New York governor said it would be "utmost of folly" to depend upon sea and air power to protect the U.S. against Communist aggression. He added, "Anyone who thinks you can defend the United States or any substantial part of the world with any two out of three branches of the armed forces, is ignoring every lesson of history."

He then urged faster mobilization and sending more American troops to Europe immediately. He said he felt the deployment of troops was no business of Congress.

This viewpoint is the exact opposite of Taft, Wherry and Hoover who have repeatedly demanded no more American troops be sent to Europe without prior approval of congress. They have also urged placing our faith in defense on overwhelming sea and air power.

Thus develops the serious riff within the Republican party that could have far-reaching results within the coming year. Politically it could mean that Dewey is dead as a possible G.O.P. standard bearer in 1952.

On the other hand, if Dewey's thinking is the expression of the majority of the Republican party, it could mean Taft, Wherry and Hoover will be stamped isolationists and doomed to ultimate oblivion.

In this connection, it was interesting to note that Dewey said, "Any isolationist speech is an aid to Stalin."

FARMERS:

Must Help Curb Rackets

With the government's order limiting the number of slaughterhouses that will be permitted to operate and the amount of livestock they can butcher, it became apparent it is going to take patriotism down on the farm to keep meat off the black market.

While big and middle-size slaughterers who provide most of the steaks and chops for the dinner table will be licensed, several hundred thousand farmers who usually butcher a few hogs, sheep, for their own consumption or for local sale are exempt.

While these farmers right now don't account for much of the meat eaten in the United States, they are a potential headache for price controllers. During World War II many farmers sat up their own barnyard slaughterhouses with no more equipment than a tree, a rope, an ax, and a butcher knife.

It wasn't very sanitary, but plenty of racketeers were willing to buy the meat at fancy prices and truck it into the cities for sale at even fancier black market prices

Price control officials are afraid that some farmers exempted from the slaughtering regulation might be lured into illicit butchering by the prospect of easy money The job of keeping check on the farmers would require an army of enforcement agents, and is impossible under present conditions. For that reason it will take a lot of patriotism down on the farm if present slaughter regulations are to be enforced.

HOLLYWOOD:

Unpleasant Publicity

Hollywood, that land of make-believe so often in the headlines, appeared in line for considerable more publicity, but of an unpleasant nature.

The new avalanche began to roll when the house un-American activities committee announced plans to investigate certain Hollywood actors that would "inevitably" lead to a revival of the communism-in-Hollywood case.

In 1947 the committee investigated Communist influences in the movie capital in long and sensational hearings with the result that 10 writers and directors were convicted of contempt of congress for refusing to say whether they had ever been Communists. All went to jail.

The new hearings may do considerable good, but as in all such investigations, some innocent people can expect to be hurt.

Hitch-Hiker

William J. Newton, Jr., who first made headlines last August when he landed a seaplane at sea beside the "iron curtain" liner Batory and got into trouble with the FBI, is shown (left) as he was interviewed by correspondent Frank Conniff, after he turned up in Korea. Newton said he had hitch-hiked 12,000 miles to "kill some Communists" to clear his name of the taint of communism. The 8th army gave him a physical, turned him down as unfit.

PRICES:

Reach Record Level

The American public found itself in a strange position, one which it did not entirely understand and which presented frightening possibilities for the future.

The situation began to develop some weeks ago with the enactment of price-wage controls, which most people believed would halt the cost of living spiral. Shortly after the "freeze" went into force, numerous loopholes in the plan were made known by which many foods could jump from 5 to 200 per cent.

Later the gullible public was told by the bureau of labor statistics that wholesale prices reached a new record high despite the "price freeze" The main increases were in prices of food and farm products.

This, of course, caused immediate rumblings in labor's ranks. In turn, Secretary of Agriculture Brannan defended farmers against the charges that farm prices were "unreasonably high".

Economic stabilization administrator Eric Johnston, who has the most thankless job in the United States today, issued a statement saying that prices may advance a few more months and finally level off in midsummer.

The average American had no desire to see any one group of the nation's economy—farmers, laborers, manufacturers—unjustly bear the greatest burden of price and wage controls. But the average American was worried about how far he could stretch his pay check without drastically lowering his standard of living He wanted to know if he could stand it until the midsummer leveling-off took place?

KOREA:

Reds Counterattack

With stunning force and typical blood-curdling methods, complete with suicidal charges, bugle-blowing, bell ringing, whistle-tooting, and drum-beating, Chinese Communists launched a counterdrive against U N forces in central Korea

The counterattack stalled the U.N advance that began late in January and which had approached Seoul.

Eighth army officers reported elements of nine Chinese divisions and six Korean divisions were used in the counterattack.

At full strength this would mean as many as 150,000 to 200,000 men However, heavy casualties had been inflicted on the Communists since the U N offensive began. Officials claimed Red casualties, by ground action alone, totaled 80,121.

Some military observers believed Communist armies in Korea had been hurt so seriously in recent weeks they could not continue an offensive for a long period of time. Others, however, were cautious with their predictions, remembering the overwhelming manpower available to the Communist cause.

Morale was reported high among U.N. troops during recent weeks as they pushed slowly toward the 38th parallel.

JAPAN:

Progress Toward Treaty

Preliminary steps for a peace treaty between the United States and Japan appeared successfully completed with the announcement that the basic points of a defense agreement to be guaranteed by American power had been agreed upon.

Japan has become more important to American security since the Communist plan of conquest in Asia became clear. The proposed peace treaty hinged on future security measures in Japan.

The security guarantee includes stationing of U.S. armed forces in and about the country. No time limit will be specified and U.S. troops might be stationed in Japan for many years.

And while the arrangement lasts, an attack on Japan would be considered the same as an attack on the United States.

American policy has leaned heavily toward a free and strong Japan as a balancing factor in the Pacific. The United States does not want to place heavy economic or financial burdens or major commercial disabilities upon Japan.

In this respect, however, the Philippines, Australia and New Zealand may not agree fully with the United States.

BIG-FOUR:

Meeting Proposed

The United States, Britain and France were reported willing to hold a meeting of the Big Four foreign ministers in Paris sometime during March. Whether or not the Russians would consent is another matter. No one is willing to make a guess.

One of the main problems of such a meeting would be to get the four nations to agree before the meeting took place on just what they would talk about. Britain and France appeared willing to have deputies of the Big Four meet and work out an agenda. The United States wanted to list some of the topics that should be included.

The United States wants to talk about the rearmament of western Germany, eastern Germany, the Soviet Union, and the Communist satellites in the Balkans. Russia would never consent to such an agenda.

It became apparent from the approach of all four governments that nobody expected much to come out of another Big Four meeting. They may meet but it will produce nothing except more frayed nerves and propaganda blasts.

BUDGET:

Congress Accepts Dare

President Truman in presenting his budget to congress said it was a good tight one and dared the legislators to trim it. Evidently congress is going to accept Mr. Truman's dare.

Several Democrats and Republicans at least have promised to do so. Senator George of Georgia, chairman of the powerful senate finance committee which will handle the tax bills to pay for the budget, said it could be cut $5 to $6 billion "without harm."

Senator Bridges of New Hampshire, ranking Republican on the senate appropriations committee, termed the President's program "as full of water as a field of melting snow." He urged the senate to squeeze the "water" out.

On the other hand, Senator McMahon of Connecticut asserted talk of a $6 billion cut in nondefense items was "fakery—it can't be done."

Whatever Mr. Truman's motives for making the dare, he certainly stirred up opposition in congress. The battle may be bitter before it is over.

Engineer

Joseph H. Fitzsimmons, engineer of the Pennsylvania railroad commuter train that met disaster at Woodbridge, N.J., was recovering from injuries received in the crash. He reportedly admitted that he was speeding at 50 miles an hour at the time of the wreck over a stretch of track where speed was supposed to be a maximum of 25 miles per hour. The wreck death toll was 83. Approximately 503 injured.

IRAN:

Red Gift to Royalty

Joseph Stalin's gift of a $150,000 mink coat and a desk set studded with black diamonds to Iran's Shah of Shahs and his new bride caused a number of lifted eyebrows in diplomatic circles.

It is not unusual for presidents, kings and even dictators to send each other presents on important occasions, but Stalin's gift to the Shah of Iran was viewed with deeper meaning than mere respect for the head of one state to another.

EDUCATION

College Enrollment Drop Is Expected

Mobilization is having a drastic effect on colleges throughout the nation. A recent survey of American universities and colleges revealed that most institutions predict they will lose 25 to 50 per cent of their students before the end of this year.

Such a drop in enrollment will result in a sharp cut-back of faculty members, possibly as many as 20,000 to 25,000, who will be dismissed from their jobs or will not be replaced when they leave for military duty or war jobs, the survey revealed.

The drop in student enrollment is causing college officials serious concern. They report a decline of 5 to 10 per cent in enrollment for the spring semester which began in January.

Ell Tip Toppers Met At The Josten Home Feb. 17

The Ell Tip Toppers 4-H club met at the home of LaVonne Josten on Saturday, February 17th with 12 members and two visitors present. A demonstration was given by JoAnn Lemke on pinning and cutting a pattern. Daisy Schaefer and Lois Christians gave a team demonstration on "Selecting, Measuring and Altering a Pattern." Two talks were given, "Sewing by Units" and "Finishing Touches" by Shirley Greiman and Eva Thieman, respectively.

Mrs. Edwin Thieman sent her thanks to the club for the flowers they sent her while she was in the hospital. She will be with us again at our next meeting

After the adjournment of the meeting, lunch was served by the hostess.

SEE RENEWED EMPHASIS ON USE OF LIME IN '51

The value of lime in long-term efficient farming is likely to put renewed emphasis on liming this year, says H. B. Cheney, extension agronomist at Iowa State College.

He explains that while about 3 million tons of lime were applied in Iowa in 1950—as compared with between 300,000 and 700,000 tons per year before 1940—there is still need for further applications of lime.

In the last 10 years about 22 million tons of lime have been sold in Iowa. Cheney estimates that this is only about one-third of the amount needed to take care of long-run needs, and he thinks the use of limestone could be tripled with favorable results. In view of this long-term need, he points out that limestone production facilities should be maintained at a high level during the coming years.

The need for lime and the amount needed can be determined easily by soil test, Cheney reminds farmers and land owners. He adds that while most soils in the state need lime in widely varying amounts, soils that already have too much lime also can be found through soil tests.

Kindergarten News

During the past two weeks we have had three birthdays. Harley Nuehring, Natalie Thompson and Kathleen Priebe. They were all six years old. Harley, Kathy and Natalie all brought us lovely treats.

We have started our new books. The name of the book is "Phonics We Use." The boys and girls have been having a good time working with the different picture games.

The boys and girls are going to bring various types and kinds of seeds to school so we can watch them grow. We will be doing different experiments to show the children what a plant needs to grow.

MR. AND MRS. MENNO ALBERS HONORED ON 10TH ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Les Hartbeck and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Baack planned a surprise party on Mr. and Mrs. Menno Albers on their 10th wedding anniversary last Wednesday evening, which was a complete success, when friends and neighbors gathered at the Albers home.

The evening was spent playing 500 at six tables. Prizes were awarded to Les Hartbeck and Erma Goll for high scores; Orris Lundy and Lyda Swanson won low score prizes and the travel prize was won by Paul Goll.

Late in the evening a nice lunch was served by a committee of the self-invited guests and Mr. and Mrs. Albers were presented with a gift of money.

Those who attended the party were Mr. and Mrs. Donald Neuberger of Clear Lake, Elsie Baack and Dorance, the Evert, Louis and Alfred Jurgemeyers, Mr. and Mrs. August Josten, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Goll, Mr. and Mrs. Orris Lundy, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Swanson, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Hartbeck and Miriam and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Baack.

NUPTIAL VOWS SPOKEN—

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Evelyn Hansen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chris Hansen of Nora Springs, and Laurence Radloff, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Fred Radloff of northeast of Klemm, performed in St. Luke's Lutheran Church with the Rev. Amedee Fredette, pastor, reading the single ring ceremony. Baskets of gladioli and candelabra tied with ferns and pink bows decorated the church. Nuptial music was played by Konrad Hagen and Clayton Worson sang, "O Perfect Love" by Barnby, "Our Wedding Prayer" by Noble and "The Lord's Prayer" by Malotte.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore an ivory satin gown with fitted bodice having a tunic trimmed with Chatilly. The full skirt in a long train. Her double fingertip length illusion veil was held by a tiara of pearls and she wore a single strand of pearls, a gift from the bridegroom. She carried a handkerchief of handmade lace, a gift from the bridegroom's sister, who brought it from Belgium. The bride's bouquet was of red roses and stephanotis with matching satin ribbon.

Mrs. Jack Greiman of Garner, matron of honor, wore a dusty rose taffeta gown with a hoop skirt caught up with rosebuds to reveal taffeta ruffles. She had matching mitts and carried a colonial bouquet.

Mr. Radloff was attended by Jack Greiman, bestman, and ushers were Ervin Hansen and Harold Radloff, brothers of the bride and bridegroom.

Mrs. Hansen, mother of the bride, wore a sailor blue dress with rhinestone trim and a corsage of roses.

A reception was held in the church parlors for about 150 guests with the guild in charge. Miss Lola Hartwig took charge of decorations, Miss Vera Schlosser and Mrs. Calvin Fiegil served the 3 tier wedding cake, which was decorated in the bride's colors, pink and white, and topped by a bridal couple. Miss Shirley Bisgrove of Manly and Mrs. M. S. Newburg, Mason City, poured, Mrs. Red Aldinger, Alexander, niece of the bridegroom, had charge of the guest book. Miss Margaret Smith of Mason City, and Mrs. Lloyd Willig, Mason City, niece of the bridegroom, had charge of the gifts.

Mr. Radloff attended the Garner public school and is a farmer. Mrs. Radloff is a graduate ofNora Springs high school and the Hamilton School of Commerce. For the past 7 years, she has been a secretary in the offices of the Mason City Brick and Tile Co.

For going away, the bride wore a brown gabardine suit with gold accessories. After a trip south, they will be at home northeast of Klemme.

Showers given in honor of the bride include one by Mrs. M. S. Newburg, Mrs. K. V. Race and daughter, Julia, another by Mrs. Ervin Hansen and Shirley Bisgrove. Mrs. Victor Meyer and Mrs. Earl Quintus were hostesses at a shower for her as were Mrs. Orville Baughey, Dora Brese, Mrs. Fred Frudden and Mrs. Carl Crowell.

Texas Trip

VARIED INDUSTRIES NOTED ON MY TRIP SOUTH

As I said in previous stories on my recent trip to the South and Southwest, there would be no particular connection with one story to the next.

From Klemme we followed U. S. Highway 69 across Iowa, Missouri, Kansas and into Oklahoma, which is all nearly directly straight south, following the eastern border of Kansas and Oklahoma.

From Des Moines south of the country is pretty much hilly through Southern Iowa and Missouri and is of course, all agriculture. Getting into Kansas the farming and stock raising gradually gives away to ranching and there are some big cattle ranches in Kansas. Getting further south in Kansas, the southeast part of Kansas, mining becomes a big industry, especially around Pittsburg and down beyond Miami, Oklahoma.

In this mining area lead and zinc is mined and in some places the highway runs in and around vast mountains of "chat", the residue from the mines which looks a lot like crushed rock and makes a good surface for roads. If the mountains of chat could be economically hauled away it looks like there would be enough chat to surface all the dirt roads in the middle west. Seeing the vast piles of chat above the ground, made me wonder how big the hole was under the ground. It must be a vast system of tunnels underground for miles and miles.

Developing electric power is also a big industry throughout Oklahoma and there are quite a number of man-made lakes and power dams along the eastern border of Oklahoma. Small mountains also loom up along the eastern border and add to the beauty of the scenery. There is also a big oil industry scattered throughout Oklahoma and industry from wheat farming, mining, cattle ranching, fruit orchards to raising cotton in the south.

Like a great many states, Oklahoma has what I would call "waste land." Land that looks pretty rough and nonproductive. I would not trade one Iowa farm for several miles of some of the land. This is also true of land in Texas, New Mexico and many other states I have driven through. Land of this type is usually ranch land and the cattle seem to thrive on it. It was a mystery to me how cattle could live on some of that worthless looking, sandy Texas land I saw. But the cattle seemed to be in good shape and fat. I'm sure Iowa cattle couldn't live on sand and cactus.

The highways through eastern Oklahoma were old and rough, but Oklahoma has a big highway building program under way and where roads are being rebuilt, they compare with any in the south or southwest: broad enough for three lanes, and smooth as a table-top. Oklahoma is thoughtful of the motorist traveling when the roads might be icy and slippery. On every hill and on every sharp curve there are piles of sand along the highway with a handy large tin can or bucket so that if you have difficulty slipping on a hill, all you have to do is get a bucketful of sand from a near-by sand pile and sprinkle it on the pavement and you have traction again. Iowa should adopt the idea of having sandpiles on hills and curves for the motorist to use.

The highway improvement program spirit also hit a great many towns, large and small throughout Eastern Oklahoma. Many towns had widened their streets and put on new blacktop paving. It looked like a contest as to which town could build the widest and best streets.

Just a we left Oklahoma to cross the great Red River, which is the boundry between Oklahoma and Texas, we skirted another vast man-made lake, Lake Texoma, largely in Oklahoma west of Colbert, but also extending down into Texas. The lake forms a vast recreational region as well as electricity generated at a great power dam.

Just over the border we were introduced to Texas hospitality at Denison, Texas. At the edge of the little city the State highway Commission maintains an information center and welcomes all motorist to the great state of Texas. Highway patrolmen are in charge of the station and they certainly go all the way out to be of service

I stopped at the station and was given a cordial welcome by the young man in uniform at the desk. After a brief visit and getting information as to where my travel would take me, he laid out my route on a large map that was very easy to follow. In 10 minutes time he told me a great deal about Texas, the biggest state in the Union with the widest and best highways in the Nation. Iowa could do well to extend the same kind of service to out-of-state visitors. It made us feel at home in Texas and I know that young man was one of the best advertising mediums Texas could have.

The second night found us at a nice motel at Dallas. It was dark when we got to Dallas so we really did not see much of Texas until the next morning. There seemed to be a lot of good farm land around Dallas and the country looked prosperous.

Deeper down in Eastern Texas we had a variety of scenery from oil industry, to ranching and farming. For mile after mile we drove through vast regions of mesquit (pronounced mess-kett), cactus, scrub cedar and ironwood with bunch grass growing here and there, and all very sandy. This sort of country is all ranch and a person drives miles upon miles with no break in the fence line, and now and then a gate and a trail leading back to a ranch out of sight from the highway. I have a vague recollection that some of the highway took us through the great King ranch, as for miles along the route the land was "posted" with " no trespassing, no hunting" signs. Part of the route took us by miles of land enclosed with an extremely high barbed wire fence and now and then I saw a sign reading "Game Reserve." I did not see any wild game, although later I was informed that I drove through some mighty good hunting territory which had deer, wild boar, wild cats, panthers, as well as upland game birds such as quail, pheasants, grouse and other birds.

The mesquit tree is about the most crooked tree you can imagine; it grows into all kinds of fantastic shapes but is rarely more than 12 or 15 feet high. The wood is very close grained and is real heavy. Picking up a chunk is like picking up a rock, it is that heavy. The leaves are fine and lacey, smaller and finer than a locust leaf. The schrub cedars look more like a bush than a tree. Ironwood is also more like a bush. Some of the cactus turns a reddish color in the winter, while other varieties are green. A few years ago I had been told that cattle will eat some kinds of cactus. Of course I didn't believe the yarn until I actually saw it with my own eyes Along the highway we came to a half dozen nice fat Hereford steers grazing among the mesquit and I saw two of them contentedly munching away on a big cactus plant. How they could get near the thing without getting those thorns into their noses is beyond me! They seemed to be enjoying their cactus "dessert."

This wild country started to "breakoff" as we came nearer the Valley and here and there large sections had been cleared for farming Some of the land would be "dry farmed," while some would be irrigated. It looked like a very costly proposition to clear the land of mespuit and brush which is done with bull-dozers, the trees and shrubs pushed into piles and burned and then the land "leveled" with more big machinery. The land to be irrigated must all be "leveled" and that is really a big job. But once the land is ready they can raise some big crops of cotton, alfalfa and other crops.

Gradually more and more lands was being farmed and now and then we began to see a few citrus groves. The valley was just ahead, and I have told you about that.

I did not think my stories were of much interest to the readers of The Times, but skipping one week, I really heard about it. I will have another story for you next week. Just what it will be about, I have not decided.

—R. A. Jorgenson, Editor.

Birthday

One of Iowa's oldest residents observed her 98th birthday on February 1st. She is Mrs. Anna Boyles, of Center Point, who was born in 1853 in Ohio.

Centenarian

Iowa acquired another centenarian February 8, when M. L. Lewis of Nemaha reached his 100th birthday. He was born in 1851, in Virginia, on a plantation where his grandfather was employed as manager of the slaves. Mr. Lewis first came to Iowa about 1875.

REPUBLICAN ENTHUSIASM

Neither rain nor snow nor icy roads kept more than 1,800 enthusiastic Republicans from attending the Lincoln Day Dinner-Rally in Des Moines. It was the biggest political dinner rally ever staged in the state and the attendance exceeded by 500 the previous high mark for Republicans set last year.

The most adverse weather conditons of the month did not dampen the spirit of the Republican crowd which enjoyed musical entertainment, a fine fried chicken "air lines special" box lunch and cheered political speeches. There wasn't a dull moment from the first strains of the dance band's opening number through the final words of the main speaker, Senator Robert Taft of Ohio.

Senator Taft, who was late in arriving in Des Moines for the meeting because of plane trouble at Denver, was interrupted 16 times during his 40-minute speech, which dealt largely with foreign policy.

Earlier in the day he had spoken before and answered questions of 3,000 Drake University students and addressed a joint session of the State Legislature in addition to holding a news conference and conferring with Republican leaders and young Republicans. The Ohio Senator was kept on the run during his visit to Des Moines to keep the busy schedule which had been planned for him.

The audience applauded warmly Governor William S. Beardsley's tribute to Abraham Lincoln, urging that "we take inspiration from the immortal Lincoln who had a burning desire to save the nation." Gov. Beardsley left a sick bed to go to the statehouse and introduce Taft to the legislature.

Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper was cheered when he said that an investigation by historians shows there have been three great catastrophes in the nation's history, the Johnstown flood, the San Francisco earthquake and the bankruptcy of the Kansas City haberdasher. He introduced Taft, saying that of all the great men the United States has produced, "Bob Taft stands pre-eminent among those whose heads stands above the clouds." Senator Hickenlooper, who spoke the night before at Huron, South Dakota, was an hour late in arriving in Des Moines because of the storm.

It is estimated that Taft spoke to more than 6,000 people while in Des Moines. In addition, his address was carried by three radio stations and was recorded for play-back to the Young Republicans on the University of Iowa campus.

Senator Taft made it clear that Republicans must stand squarely on issues and make a clear-cut presentation of the facts to the American people. Drake students cheered when he said that it was a hopeful sign that the opposition party is "becoming more pro-Truman and the Republicans are becoming more anti-Truman."

The militant spirit demonstrated at the rally is another but of evidence which indicates that the Republican party in Iowa is not resting on its laurels but is preparing for a vigorour campaign in 1952 by building a strong organization in '51.

James Schramm, state finance chairman, deserves much of the credit for the planning and directing of the activities which resulted in the most successful rally. However, credit also is due to the hundreds of loyal workers in every county in the state who sold tickets and conducted ticket campaigns.

The successful Lincoln Day Dinner-Rally is just the beginning of the job to be done in '51.

Farmers Move

Alex Zeiger and family, who lived on the Art Knoke farm, moved to the Swanson farm east of Klemme, vacated by Albert and Mary Swanson, who moved to their new home just west of Klemme.

Milvern Schoenwetter moved to the former Knoke farm southwest of Klemme, which he has purchased.

Fatal

As Mrs. Marvel Elwood of Goldfield was being rushed to a maternity hospital recently, the car driven by her husband collided with another one on the highway and the unborn child died as a result of the accident. Mrs. Elwood was bruised and lacerated, and was hospitalized for about a week.

By What Authority?

Lesson for March 11, 1951

IS IT right or wrong? This is a fair question always. But there is another question to go with it. Who is to say whether it is right or wrong? Who is the authority? "Autho'rity" means more than "orders." It means the final judge, the court of last appeal.

Dr. Foreman

Neither You nor the Crowd

SOME SAY: Nobody can tell me what to do; I do as I please. There is no authority I am bound to recognize. Such a person has an authority, all the same: himself. For him, "what I want" and "what I like" are the only reasons for anything and all the reasons he wants.

Now aside from the fact that such people are a nuisance to all concerned, and the fact that they can't even prentend to be Christians, this point of view won't work. The person who acts as his own authority runs into others who take themselves as their authority, and the result is the awful mess called anarchy. So all sensible people do recognize some authority outside themselves. They want approval from outside, from above.

But whose approval do they want? Under whose jurisdiction, as lawyers would say, do they live? Some recognize only that vast and vague authority known as "Everybody." If everybody does it, it must be right. If nobody does it, it's bound to be wrong.

Well, this is not necessarily so. Fifty million Frenchmen can be wrong, or 150 million Americans for that matter. You can't take a vote and decide what's right and what's wrong by a simple count of Ayes and Noes. Neither you alone, nor a crowd no matter how big, can be the final Authority on Life.

Calendar, Code, Conscience

ANOTHER proposed authority, believe it or not, is the calendar. Some people will not read a book or see a show or wear a dress or listen to music that isn't up to the minute. If it's "dated" it's dead, unless the date is today.

That is silly, on the face of it. But there are other more respectable authorities which are still not THE Authority. One of these is the Law. If it's legal it's right, say some people, and it can't be right unless it's legal.

There is something true in this, of course. We should by all means obey the laws, and also see that good laws are made and bad ones repealed. But law is not the final authority on right and wrong. Lawmakers can make mistakes. What is a good law at one time may be a bad law under other circumstances.

The best laws can never catch up with the morals of the best people. Still other people take as their authority conscience, meaning their own conscience. This is not quite the same as taking your own wishes or pleasure for your guide. Your conscience may lay unwelcome burdens on you. But while every one should of course follow his conscience, still anybody's conscience can be asleep or mistaken.

Some of the worst crimes in history have been committed by some of the most conscientious people.

God's Last Word

WHAT, THEN, is the highest authority for the Christian? Nothing and no one less than Jesus Christ himself. As we were thinking a few weeks ago, the very word "Christ" is a symbol of authority at the highest level.

In Jesus' day there were two supreme symbols of God: the Law and the Temple. Jesus not only assumed superiority to the Law, but (as our Lesson reminds us) of the Temple itself, though he was no priest and had no ecclesiastical position whatever. If there is a difference between Christian and non-Christian today, it is not that Jesus is the authority for one and not for the other; rather it is that the non-Christian refuses to recognize what is the fact: that for us and for all men, Jesus Christ is God's "last word" to mankind.

And if some say that the law of love is the supreme authority, is there any real difference between the spirit of Jesus and the law of love? For he is God's love incarnate.

When a typewriter ribbon begins to get vague, it can be revived with stamp-pad ink, applied sparingly to the top of the ribbon as the ribbon is wound from one spool to the other. Or, dip a tooth pick in ordinary mineral oil and dab bits of it over the entire length of the ribbon at intervals of one inch. A few hours later the ribbon will be ready to make a firm impression on whatever confronts it.

Quaint but outmoded, little red schoolhouses like this one in Missouri's Ozark country are being replaced by modern schools that offer the very best in up-to-date facilities, comfort and excellent daylight conditions. Many of the new schools are envied by their city cousins.

△ △ △ △

RURAL SCHOOLS

Quaint, Outmoded Rural Schools Vanishing From American Scene

(This is the first of two articles on the rural school plant which is undergoing radical changes in many sections of the country. The second article will appear next week.)

The rural school system is having its face lifted. Outmoded, inadequate and too frequently overcrowded, the "little red schoolhouse" is being shoved off the American scene by a "new look" school which is exciting the envy of the farmers' city cousins.

Most of these new schools are ground-hugging masses of cement, steel and glass block offering commodious classrooms drenched with glareless daylight.

They are designed for function without frills, to provide the latest educational facilities without excessive cost. And they're replacing substandard rural schools at the rate of 2,000 a year.

Appearing from Maine to California, most of these new schools are patterned after the Rosedale experimental school in Austin, Texas, where extensive research in controlled classroom daylighting and its effect on health were conducted by Dr. Darell B. Harmon, noted educator and school designer.

New Lighting System

This research, lasting seven years, proved conclusively that improper classroom daylighting was a health menace. It was shown that children forced to twist and turn day after day o get adequate light on their work developed poor posture and chronic ailments. Glare and bright contrasts as well as inadequate daylight were also held largely responsible for eye deficiencies.

Out of these studies, in which 160,000 children were observed and examined, was evolved a new type of classroom, one which has changed the whole aspect of school design.

Its most outstanding feature is a new window system—large panels of prismatic glass block over strips of clear glass sash. It not only offers positive daylight control under all conditions but does it automatically.

Here's how it works:

Tiny prisms within each light-directing glass block actually bend strong daylight toward the ceiling. This, in turn, acts as a huge reflector to distribute daylight evenly over work surfaces throughout the room. The clear glass sash serves for ventilation and a view of outside.

Color also plays an important role in these new classrooms.

Traditional drab tones have given way to soft pastels that reflect light, not absorb it; floors and furniture are in light natural colors; even the chalkboards are eye-comforting green rather than the customary black.

'New Look' Schools

In Texas schools where these techniques were first tried, improvement in health was astounding. Within six months in demonstration schools, functional and organic eye troubles were reduced 65 per cent. And scholastic achievements improved sharply too.

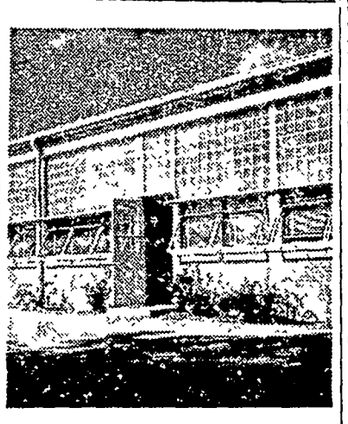
Closely paralleling these studies on classroom daylighting were those made at the University of Michigan, a research project sponsored by Owens-Illinois Glass Co. to improve the light-directing qualities of Insulex glass block.

Today there are hundreds of new rural schools using this window system; many more are being planned.

Varying in size and shape to meet the demands of site and community, the "new look" rural school generally features a single corridor flanked by standard-size classrooms.

Foundation costs are cut to the bone by resting the building on a huge slab of concrete (frequently offering radiant heating coils) surfaced with asphalt tile to serve as a floor.

Heating costs are lowered because the glass block panels have the insulating value of eight-inch brick walls; maintenance costs are negligible because these panels, which never need painting, also require no shades or blinds.



A good example of the type of building supplanting the substandard rural schoolhouse is this modern unit in Spring Branch, Comal county, Texas. All classrooms in this new school receive maximum daylight, automatically controlled to minimize glare by means of panels of light-directing glass blocks installed above clear window sash. Individual exterior doors reduce corridor traffic, offer easy access to play areas.

Thus these new schools, economic to build, heat and maintain, are proving more and more popular in areas where tax rates are low and every public dollar must be spent with care. But for every dollar spent, uncounted dividends in health, culture and even a new community spirit are certain.

Take the case of the new school at Grand Junction, Colorado. It's a story of how one school influenced school boards of surrounding communities and became the basic pattern of a wave of new school construction.

15 Schools Built

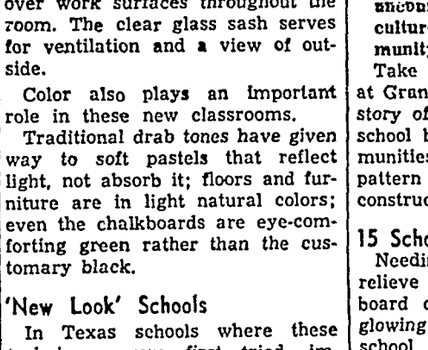
Needing new school facilities to relieve overcrowding, the school board decided to first investigate glowing reports of a "new look" school at Austin, Texas, before signing a contract. The school superintendent and the architect went to see for themselves. Their trip changed the entire complexion of rural Colorado schools.

They found classrooms ideally daylighted; they found gay rooms decorated in pastel colors: they found children with good posture and improved health records.

Facts, figures and visual evidence were convincing and Grand Junction got its first "new look" school —the focus of attention for all surrounding communities.

The school has six classrooms, a kindergarten, a lunchroom and a multi-purpose room with a stage. Primary grades have their own toilet rooms and outside exits to play area; the lunchroom and kitchen are linked to the large general-purpose room to provide better service for special parties and after school functions; oversized classrooms are flooded with glareless daylight.

Sorely needed to provide for a fast growing population, this school is a far cry from the traditional rural school.



Ultimate in seeing conditions is provided the "new look" rural classroom by means of a new window system. The ceiling acts as a huge reflector to distribute the daylight evenly to all parts of the classroom. The block glass above the clear glass sash bends strong daylight toward the ceiling.

Giants Have Caught Pennant Scent

By GRANTLAND RICE

IT WOULD START a breezy argument if the Giants, training at St. Petersburg this spring, should win the National League pennant. Especially if at the same time the Yankees, training in Arizona and California, should fail to win the American League flag.

Grantland Rice

The sunny state of Florida would have something to say about a situation of this sort. And the far western rebuttal would be packed with alibis.

Whatever happens, Leo Durocher expects to win the National League pennant, with anything like an even break from that cockeyed wench known as Dame Fortune.

"No one can say what will happen to any one club from the draft," Leo says. "But we haven't many young rookies. Most of our squad have been around for some time and we certainly shouldn't be hit any harder than anyone else.

"Up to June, 1950, the Giants have had less than their share of good pitching. At least we'll say our pitching has been spotty. We were already out of the race last season when we got Jim Hearn from the Cardinals and Sal Maglie began to win. I know from that spot on we played the best ball in the league.

For the first time, starting this spring at St. Petersburg, we have the ball club I've been hoping to get. That means first-class pitching—with the probability of six good starting pitchers. We have a fine infield, especially strong around second with Stanky and Dark. We have a high-grade outfield and we have our share of power. We can get runs.

"The Dodgers will be good again this new season and so will the Phillies. The Phillies will miss Curt Simmons more than a little bit. Simmons would have been ready for a big year. Boston will be good again. Losing practically none of their veterans, the Cardinals will be dangerous for a while at least. But I like the Giants. I like them better each week as the season draws closer. The club is well rounded, as well rounded as the Dodgers, and I'd rather have our pitching. Hearn, Maglie and Jansen outmatch any three in the league on any single club."

Condition and Hustling

You can rate one thing about Leo Durocher—there is no manager in baseball who handles his team better on the field. And there is no manager who works harder for condition and the old hustling act I've seen Leo work many a team into a froth. He is a great believer in condition and just as great a believer in hustling all the way through.

No team that keeps hustling will be outclassed. I never thought the Giants of the last few years had any sort of chance to run 1-2-3. But it's different this season—or it will be different when Hearn, Maglie, Jansen, Kennedy, etc., get their working arms ready for the long grind. You can use up a lot of pitching between April and October and this time the Giants have it in greater abundance than any other National League club.

Last winter at this date, Durocher was confident that his improved defense, especially at second and short, would take care of his pitching troubles. But it wasn't until Hearn and Maglie got busy winning games that his shaky pitching problem was solved.

It has been a long, long time since the Giants had any intimate association with a National League pennant. In the past 10 years the Dodgers and Cardinals have dominated the older league and when any outside teams broke into the pennant business they were the Braves and the Phillies—not the Giants.

It can be different this year. Horace Stoneham has collected the best team he has known since Bill Terry's day. He and Durocher have a bunch of ballplayers who can hustle their way into first place with any needed breaks. They still have the Dodgers, Phillies and Braves to shove aside, but this is no impossible job. At least Durocher feels he has the team he has wanted for some time.

Concerning the Customers

"Baseball," said one of the best-known club owners in the game, "has one bad weakness. It has never paid enough attention to the care and comfort of the customer or the fan. Most of the stands are out of date. Most of them are dirty. The seats are too narrow and uncomfortable. There are many, many thousands of women fans in this country but they get little consideration. Even racing is more thoughtful in this respect."

"Now it may be impossible to make needed improvements with the war scare over the land. But the change is bound to come if baseball is to hold its place. Baseball today is getting more competition than it ever knew before. For example there is a little thing known as television. Television is holding the attention of almost numberless millions now.

GIVE FIRST AID TO ALL INJURIES LARGE OR SMALL

First aid is one of the first things that comes to mind when any member of a farm family is seriously injured. But the minor cuts and bruises make up a more serious overall problems, says Hancock County's extension director Paul Henderson.

It's the small cuts, burns and jabs that make up the vast majority of injuries, and these are the ones that are often neglected. They may not bleed or pain much so they may be forgotten, but the danger of serious infection is still present.

Iowa State College farm safety specialists Norval Wardle points out that dirty wounds will not heal more slowly, but infection may set in which occasionally causes loss of fingers, hands or arms. And it can all start with a little sliver, bit of glass or other minor injuries.

Some persons think they can fight off an infection because they are healthy and strong. While this helps, of course, it will not insure against infection unless the good health is coupled with immediate first aid treatment.

Wardle suggest that one person in every family have first aid training. That's a bare minimum. The American Red Cross sets up first aid classes in local communities for the special purposes of training such persons in the best first aid technique.

American Red Cross offices in Hancock County are located at Garner and Britt. Emil Elling is in charge at Garner and Kenneth Boughton at Britt.

Visiting around Iowa

by Joe Marsh

Iowans Are Different

After the war, Bill's boy brought an eastern girl to Iowa as his wife.

Naturally, Mary was "different." And when she called Bill's prize tomatoes "tomahtoes" he had to laugh.

Of course he left the room — but Mary's smart too. Next day she said "tomayto." Her thoughtfulness flicked Bill's tough hide. "Say it your way, Mary," he begged. "Everybody's different, thank goodness."

Yes, even Iowa's closest next-door neighbors have different politics, different pastimes, different ways of doing business.

In our friendly town the doctor studies major league box scores while the lawyer follows the home-town team. The druggist drinks coffee every day while the merchant enjoys a temperate glass of beer. The farm supply man burns holes in his coat with his pipe, but the radio repairman carries salted peanuts in his pocket.

Any friend may ask you to share his pleasure. But, here in Iowa, he is sure to understand if you still prefer your own.

Iowa Blocked By Snow In Worst Blizzard In Years

THREE DAY SNOW BLOCKED ALL HIGHWAYS IN STATE

Snow Ranges In Depth From 13 Inches To 26 Inches Over Iowa

Highway traffic in all of Iowa was almost at a standstill Monday and Tuesday with roads blocked by drifting snow that began Saturday and continued through most of Tuesday.

Plows were called off of the highways Monday night as the loose snow difted the roads shut as fast as the plows went through. Moderating winds Tuesday again sent the plows out to clear highways.

26 Inches Of Snow

In some parts of the state as much as 26 inches of snow fell. The Mason City weather station reported 13 inches of snow, while in the Klemme area about the same amount fell as near as could be measured.

Schools Closed

Nearly all schools in Iowa were closed Monday and Tuesday. A few schools, including Klemme, were open Tuesday but no bus service.

Weather officials stated it was the worst snow storm that Iowa has had in several years.

LARGE CROWD ATTENDED SHOWING OF CANCER FILM

Over one hundred and fifty women and girls of Klemme and community viewed the new color sound film of the American Cancer Society of Iowa, entitled "Breast Self Examination" which was shown at the high school auditoriam last Wednesday night.

Mrs. T. G. Ahrenkiel, local educational chairman, introduced the speaker, Dr. Leinbach of Belmond, who gave an interesting talk following the film.

A girls trio, composed of Jo-Ann Hummel, Shirley Bisom and Shirley Beier, sang two numbers. They were accompanied by Mrs. Ernest Gerardi.

The showing of the film was sponsored by the Music Mothers Club.

17 GARNER DOGS SLAIN IN ANTI-RABIES DRIVE

Seventeen dogs have been destroyed thus far in the campaign under way to rid the town of Garner of stray dogs or those unwanted by owners as a part of the town's quarantine campaign against rabies. On Feb. 12 city officials ordered that all dogs in Garner be confined or tied up for a period of 60 days.

A short time ago an epidemic of rabies was discovered in an area southeast of Garner which resulted in loss of domestic animals on several farms.

Fire Department Called To The Herman Meyer Farm Saturday

The Klemme Fire Department made a run to the Herman Meyer farm west of Klemme shortly before noon Saturday. The house was threatened by a chimney burn-out which might have ignited the roof. However, no damage was done.

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

All-out war could be a terrible thing to a nation unprepared. An air raid or attack could turn normally sensible people into a screaming mob—helpless to help themselves or others.

Civil defense and first aid training are our first defense against wartime hysteria and wartime injuries or fatalities. That training gives us an orderly, effective plan for protecting ourselves, our families, our communities and our country.

Nobody wants to see riot and disorder in our country, any more than we want to see war strike our country. But, while war may be inevitable, lack of preparation isn't. That's we're building up our armed forces.

And that's why we must build our civil defenses, too—to show possible aggressors that we're ready, and prove it if we have to.

Civil defense and first aid training have valuable peace-time aspects, too. You can see the value of being able to give first aid to injured persons when professional medical attention isn't immediately available. A civil defense organization, set up and ready to cope with wartime disaster, can also be an effective aid in time of peace-time disasters such as fires and floods.

That's why your Iowa Safety Congress urges you to enroll now for first aid and civil defense training—and reminds you: "The training you master can ward off disaster!"

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY RAY EASTMAN

There's an old song, still popular, that starts out: "Grab you coat and get your hat—leave your worries on the doorstep . . . "

That's a good motto for anybody who drives. Operating a motor vehicle is a job that demands full attention, every minute, with no time out for worries or intense emotions.

The man who can't see his way in troubles, and frets while he drives, may not be able to see his way out of an accident either. And that fellow who's "blind with rage" is just as dangerous as any other blind man driving an automobile would be.

Likewise, the chap who's "drunk with joy" has no more business on the road than the one who's drunk with alcohol—and the person "sitting on top of the world" probably shouldn't be sitting behind the wheel.

Ask any highway patrolmen what contributing cause leads drivers to most accidents. The chances are he'll answer something like this:

"Most of them weren't thinking—or they were thinking of something else.

"And, brother, when you drive with half your attention, you're half dead already!"

"CATTALO" MAY BE NEW MEAT TREAT

Ottawa, Ont.,—Canadians soon may be enjoying a dash of buffalo in their beefsteaks.

The advent of the new meat, a cross between a bison and a steer, will depend on the success of a current experiment by the department of agriculture's experimental farms service.

Agriculture scientists hope that the experiments will result in a new method of crossing domestic cattle with hump-backed animals which once roamed the mid-western plains by the millions.

The new research represents a continuation of work originally started by the experimental farms service 30 years ago. The object of the experiments is to develop a useful hybrid—or cattalo—embodying the desirable characteristics of the bison with the best features of the nation's top types of cattle.

MARGARET ARNOLD AND RAYMOND BARZ EACH POLLED FIFTY-SIX VOTES

Mrs. Arnold, Incumbent, Won Out In The Tie Breaker

Despite the bad weather Monday, there were 103 votes cast at the annual school election in Klemme, less than half of the eligible voters going to the polls.

Ended In Tie

Mrs. Margaret Arnold, incumbent and Raymond Barz, a candidate for a three year term each received 56 votes. Everett Guth, incumbent, received votes for director. A. R. Arnold, incumbent, received 91 votes for treasurer.

Judges Had To Decide Tie

When the tie vote showed up, the ballots were recounted with the result being the same, 56-all. The judges of the election then looked up the law which stated that in case of a tie, the result would be decided by lot. Therefore Secretary A. J. Kudje wrote out the two names, each on a slip of paper; placed them in the Editor's hat which was held high in the air by Glen Terhufen and Lester Stille reached in and drew out a slip, which had the name of Margaret Arnold on it and she was declared the winner.

This was probably the first time in the history of Klemme that a vote had ended in a tie and the winner had to be decided by lot. Mrs. Arnold will be serving her second term as director.

One Spoiled Ballot

There was one spoiled ballot, but it would not have altered the count, as the voter had made his cross in front of each of the three names. Only two were to be voted on. This voter was generous and wanted to help everyone, but that spoiled the ballot.

10TH ADJOURNED JANUARY MEETING

Garner, Iowa
March 5 1951

The Hancock County, Iowa, Board of Supervisors met in session on above captioned date pursuant to adjournment with Clarence Bird, F. J Schoun and Clint Daniels present

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved as read.

WHEREAS C F Merten, County Engineer has filed his report recommending the grading and graveling of approximately 15.5 miles of road in various townships.

BE AND IT IS THEREFORE RESOLVED by the Board of Supervisors of Hancock County, Iowa, that the report of the Engineer be and the same is hereby tentatively approvd and the 19th day of March A D, 1951, at the hour of 10 00 o'clock A M., at the Courthouse in Garner, Iowa, is hereby fixed as a time and place for the annual Board of Approval meeting, at which time the representatives from the various township Boards of Trustees will meet with the Board of Supervisors and the County Engineer to formulate the 1951 local road construction program for Hancock County, Iowa, all as provided for by law

The County Auditor be and he is hereby directed to notify the respective township clerks in the County of the time and place of meeting.

The foregoing resolution was offered and read by Supervisor Bird who moved its adoption, was seconded by Supervisor Daniels, whereupon the Chairman, F J. Schoun, placed the motion of its adoption and upon roll call the vote thereon is Clarence Bird, Clint Daniels and F J Schoun, ayes, Nays, none. Whereupon the Chairman declared the resolution duly adopted.

On motion and second the County Engineers report recommending the construction of certain bridges in Hancock County, Iowa, is hereby approved.

This being the 5th day of March, 1951, a date heretofore fixed for a hearing on the proposed cleanout, to grade, of Lateral No. 16 of Drainage District No 1 & 2, petitioned for by Tom O'Rourke, et al, the hour for said hearing having arrived, the report of the Engineer recommending such cleanout, the proof of publication being on file, and the Board being fully advised, said hearing was held as scheduled

The petition and report of the Engineer recommending such cleanout were read by the County Auditor and objectors and proponents were given an opportunity to discuss the necessity and feasibility of the cleanout, to grade, of the drainage district and objectors thereto, petitioned for by Tom O'Rourke, et al, as recommended in the report of the Engineer, Wm Henschen. There were no written objections on file and no objectors appeared After thorough consideration it was deemed conducive to public health, welfare, convenience, benefit and utility and the benefits to be derived will be greater than the cost thereof and that said cleanout, to grade, be approved.

BE AND IT IS THEREFORE RESOLVED by the Board of Supervisors in and for Hancock County, Iowa, acting for and in behalf of DD No. 1 and 2, Lateral No. 16, petitioned for by Tom O'Rourke, et al, which district is to have cleanout, to grade, through the lands listed in the Engineer's report, be and the same is hereby approved.

On motion by Supervisor Daniels and second by Supervisor Bird that the proposed cleanout to grade of D.D. No. 1 and 2, Lateral 16 be approved in accordance with Section 455 135, Code of Iowa, 1950, and April 2, 1951 at the hour of 1:30 P M. at the Courthouse in Garner, Iowa, is hereby fixed as a time and place for letting of the cleanout, to grade, thereof.

The County Auditor be and he is directed to cause notice of such letting to be published in the Britt News-Tribune, a newspaper of general circulation published at Britt, Iowa, which notice shall request bids on labor, only, for the construction of said drainage improvement, the time of commencement and completion, the approximate amount and kind of work to be done, that the Board reserves the right to waive technicalities and to reject any or all bids, all in accordance with chapter 455, Code of Iowa 1950.

The foregoing resolution was offered and read by Supervisor Daniels who moved its adoption, was seconded by Supervisor Bird, whereupon the Chairman, F. J. Schoun, placed the motion of its adoption and upon roll call the vote thereon is Clint Daniels, Clarnece Bird and F. J. Schoun, ayes. Nays, none. Whereupon the Chairman declared the resolution duly adopted.

On motion and second the Board adjourned to March 12, 1951 at 9:00 o'clock A. M.

EARLY SPRING IS TIME TO CHECK TILE DRAINS

Many Iowa farmers are up against the problem of what to do with ineffective drainage systems they inherited from the 1900-1920 era.

The place to start revitalizing existing tile drains is at the outleas, says Dale Hull, extension agricultural engineer at Iowa State College. The time to check is during early spring months. A few minutes spent digging out a tile outlet or unclogging a tile line can mean days of time saved in the field later on and better crop yields.

Hull says that tile drains or open ditches are not all doing a good job of carrying off excess water. He estimates that Iowa's crop production acres could be increased by 5 percent by doing a good job of revitalizing existing drainage systems so they work effectively.

The problem stems from a couple of factors. Original public and private drains were not all adequately designed, and there has been too little maintenance work on them since they were installed.

The result is open channels blocked with tree growth, caving from side slopes made too steep, and silting from lack of maintenance of surface inlets.

In light of present-day information, a lot of things were done wrong in tiling Iowa farms during the early days. Tile were put in too shallow. Too small tile were used in many instances. In some cases not enough lines were laid to provide adequate drainage. In others, laying tile by water flow and sight resulted in not enough slope to carry the water.

SCHOOL NEWS

Kindergarten New

The children have been watching the growth of various seeds this week. The seeds have been planted different to show what is needed for a young plant to grow.

One of the experiments we tried is hallowing out a carrot top. The carrot is cut in half and the center is removed. We made a string handle and hung it on the wall. Each morning we fill the carrot with water. The green foliage has grown about an inch since we started our experiment.

Our room is decorated with rabbits. The boys and girls made the little girl bunnies with a Easter bonnet and the little boy bunnies have bowties.

First Grade News

Mrs. Harvey Hubbard was a visitor in our room last week.

We have a new pupil, Marie Hacket, who came from Britt.

In Health class we have made a Good Health Store. We made paper money and are having fun buying good breakfasts, dinners and suppers.

Friday morning we went to the creamery and were very interested in what we saw. We saw all the processes that the milk went through. We saw the big churn where the butter is made. Before we left, we each had a bottle of chocolate milk. We all learned a lot and enjoyed the trip.

Second Grade News

It's beginning to look like Spring in one corner of our room. We have branches from many different kinds of trees which are beginning to leaf out. They are very pretty.

We converted our "Toy Corner" into a place to play "Store." We have many empty boxes, cans and jars which we put prices on. We take turns being the "Store Keeper" to give us practice counting change.

We have a new pupil, his name is Larry Hachett, formerly of Britt.

Dean Neuberger treated the class Friday in observance of his eighth birthday.

Third Grade News

We are happy to have a new student from Britt, Iowa. His name is Jerry Hackett. He is nine years old and has a brother in Second Grade and a sister in First Grade.

Our room is now in the progress of being decorated for the coming holidays, such as Easter and St. Patrick's Day.

In Science we have been studying about plants and their habits. We experimented by planting oats, corn, and soy beans with and without fertilizer, to see the difference in growth and the length of time it took them to grow. We also planted some of the seeds in glass jars and put the seed close to the glass so we could watch the different stages which the seed went through day by day.

Finger painting was our project in Art this week. The picture is made with a paste like substance and then the actual drawing is made with the movement of the whole arm and the palm of the hand. There were some very outstanding pictures.

Miss Sebben

Fourth Grade News

Jerry Janssen returned to classes this week after taking a trip to Mexico, Texas and other states. He had many interesting things to tell in Sharing Time.

Those to get 100 percent in Spelling this week were Harlan Baack, Myrna Barz, Cozette Lau, Carroll Priebe, Dorothy Roul, Mardell and Marlin Stadtlander.

Dorothy Roul was chosen the "Citizen of the Week."

The "New Line Tractor"

The Oliver Corporation's Charles City factory has been building tractors so long that the name "tractor" originated there. Each year, by retaining good features and discarding bad ones, they have improved their product.

The new '66', '77' & '88' tractors are superior in every way to anything Oliver has made so far, and we can prove they are better than anything else offered at any price. Come in and let us show you why.

NURSING PIGS SHOULD HAVE EXTRA FEEDS

Early gains are the cheapest gains as far as pigs are concerned. That is why it's important to get them started on feeds other than sow's milk as soon as possible after they're born. It means they'll be larger, heavier and thriftier at weaning time and be ready for an early fall market.

E. L. Quaife, extension swine specialist at Iowa State College, reports that too many hog producers fail to feed their little pigs any extra feed while they are nursing the sows.

A creep should be provided for young pigs, unless a good ration is self-fed to the sows and there is plenty of feeder space from which the little pigs can help themselves. However, it is usually advisable to give the pigs a special feed.

Quaife reports that about four-fifths of Iowa's Master Swine Producers start their pigs on rolled oats. Pigs will usually eat these quicker than any other feed. In the light of recent experimental work, it is advsiable to add 30 pounds of a B-12 antibiotic concentrate to each ton of rolled oats.

Hulled oats are also satisfactory. However, ¼ ground oats should be mixed with hulled oats to keep the pigs from bolting them.

A mineral mixture containing the trace minerals should be available to the pigs in addition to the oats.

The swine specialist recommends feeding the oats until weaning and then removing them from the ration. Shelled corn and a protein supplement should be added to the ration when the pigs are 4 weeks old. This mixture should be similar to the one they'll receive after they're weaned.

OATS MAKES EXCELLENT BEEF CATTLE PASTURE

Experiments at the Pasture Improvement Farm near Albia have shown that as many pounds of beef per acre can be obtained by pasturing beef cattle on oats as can be produced from pasturing bluegrass for a whole season.

Too, grazing off the oats during the 4 to 8 weeks when it makes good pasture removes nurse crop competition and is insurance for the successful establishment of grasses and legumes.

However, R E. Krenzin, Iowa State College agronomist, says care should be taken that the new seeding is not grazed when the oats crop is about gone. The legume and grass seeding can be grazed later in the season when it is well established, although it should not be grazed heavily and late if it is expected to come through the following winter in good shape.

The agronomist suggests sudan grass as a possible midseason pasture Sundan has a high carrying capacity of high quality forage in midsummer. Plantings of this grass made between May 15 and June 15 are the most productive.

BEST TO ORDER TREES FOR WINDBREAKS EARLY

Iowa farmers who are planning on setting out windbreaks this spring will do well to order their trees now, says Ed Gardiner, extension forester at Iowa State College. Nurseries fill orders according to the way they come in, and farmers who order early are more apt to get the kind of trees they want.

Gardiner suggests obtaining the catalogs from various nurseries, and then selecting the species, size and price trees that are desired.

Transplanted evergreens that are 12 to 24 inches in height are satisfactory for windbreak purposes, and are usually the most economical. Seedling trees or those which have not been transplanted in the nursery are cheaper, but their chances of survival are much lower.

The best place from which to order trees is reliable local nurseries. There are several advantages in buying locally, according to Gardiner. Transportation costs will be eliminated, and if any problems arise over the order, they can be worked out conveniently.

More information on planning the windbreak and selecting trees is available in a bulletin entitled "Evergreen Windbreaks for Iowa Farmsteads." This can be obtained from the county extension director's office or by writing to the Bulletin Office at Iowa State College.

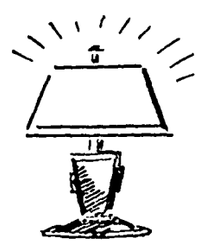
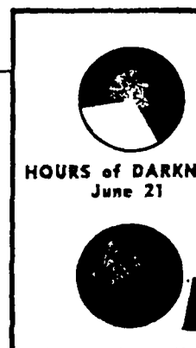
MORE HOURS of Electric Light

Reddy gives you cheerful, sight-protecting light. Fights long hours of winter darkness.



MORE HOURS of RADIO

Family and friends enjoy Reddy's entertainment. Makes home fun!

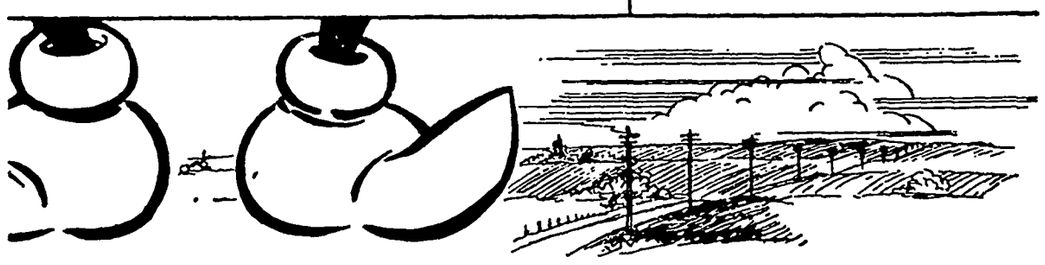


AUTOMATIC HEATING . . ELECTRIC BED COVERS . . etc.

Reddy brings the comfort and convenience of electrically controlled heating plants, constant, even, luxurious heat. Millions of folks now enjoy a new sleeping comfort with electric bed coverings.

RADIANT ROOM HEATERS, HEAT LAMPS . . etc.

Chill is soon taken from any room with a convenient portable radiant heater. Heat lamps bring relief and comfort.



Yes . . . winter is Reddy's "busy time!" He has to provide five more hours of electric lighting every day to keep homes cheerful and bright. In addition, he runs a host of seasonable appliances. And, of course, he keeps right on with his usual work for you. He cleans the house . . . keeps an eye on proper refrigeration of your food . . . washes your clothes . . . sews . . . entertains you with the radio. Never tired . . . never asking for a "day off!"

The more demand for his services, the more electricity he has to supply. Like most everything else, it costs less to make electricity in big quantities. So the average cost per kilowatt hour for residential use goes lower when you use more electricity . . . you take advantage of lower quantity rates. With everybody operating more appliances, Reddy's bill is no longer a "light bill." It's a "service bill" . . . for the many electric servants that make life easier and more enjoyable. The average home pays LESS per unit of electricity and uses much MORE of it! Reddy's still the most economical item in your household budget!

Please remember that the last bill you received covered your use in January and February — Your heavy load months.

Mayor W. C. Bill Keraus Declines To Run For Office

GIVE SUMMARY OF MANY IMPROVEMENTS UNDER HIS ADMINISTRATION

Was Sixteenth Mayor To Serve The People Of Community

In an interview with the writer last week, W. C. "Bill" Keraus, Mayor incumbent, stated definitely that he had declined to run for the office, after having served continuously for several years and having served longer than any of his fifteen predecessors in the Mayor's office.

Mr. Keraus, however, did have some statements to make publicly regarding what has been accomplished during the time he was in office as Mayor of Klemme. But first he said "I appreciate very much the splendid cooperation I have received from the present, as well as the previous, Councilmen, the Town Clerks and Marshall who served with me, and I want to thank the citizens of Klemme who were patient and tolerant with me during my terms as Mayor. The officials feel that we are turning over the state of affairs in Klemme, Iowa, to the new officials to be elected in pretty good shape."

Keraus Lists Improvements

Mayor Keraus pointed out a number of improvements that were made during his administration, as follows:

East Main Street paved, also some street grading and graveling. Disposal Plant buildings repaired and painted. Dump ground enlarged and fenced. Natural Gas to be brought in. Town well overhauled. City water tanks cleaned, repaired and painted. Town Hall repainted. New Fire Truck Station built. New Township Fire Truck housed here. Community Hall converted into grade school building. New Park Sidewalk. Band Stand repaired and painted.

Financial Statement Good

Mayor Keraus pointed out that his administration had also been economical and that the town had a balance of all funds on hand of $14,861.16, or about $3,000 more than a year ago. Here are the balances of all funds, as of April 1, 1951:

General Fund	$2,421.78
Water Fund	5,661.28
Light (overdrawn)	141.24

Natural Gas For Klemme

Mr. Keraus pointed out that four years ago we voted a franchise to the Northern Natural Gas Co. Last week a representative of the Company was in Klemme and talked with the Mayor and advised him that the pipe for the Klemme project was shipped March 9, 1951, and if all material necessary can be obtained we should have Natural Gas service in Klemme this year.

Don't Forget To Vote

Mayor Keraus urged that every voter go to the polls on next Monday and vote for the men you want to run your town for the next two years.

SIXTEENTH MAYOR

W. C. "Bill" Keraus

W. C. KERAUS IS KLEMME'S SIXTEENTH MAYOR

Going back through the records we find that the Town of Klemme was incorporated 50 years ago and that sixteen men have served the Town as Mayors during that time. Checking back we find that Henry Terhufen was the first Mayor of Klemme, and W. C. Keraus was the 16th Mayor. Here is the list:

MARLENE BLUMER WON IN KLEMME SPELLING CONTEST

The local spelling contest for grades was held in the Klemme schools Friday with Marlene Blumer winning first place and the honor of representing Klemme at the County Spelling Contest held Saturday at Garner.

Margaret Haefner won second place, Arthur Carlson, third place, Merlyn Olson, fourth and Cecil Jacobs, fifth.

Mr. Cappon and Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson were the judges.

NORTH IOWA AGAIN PARALIZED BY MORE SNOW AND DRIFTING

After Iowans had dug out after the worst snow storm since 1936, snow began to fall Saturday afternoon and high winds up to 40 miles an hour continued until Sunday night, piling up snow in high drifts and blocking highways in nearly all parts of the State.

Highways had just been cleared in most parts of North Iowa when the second storm struck and again blocked roads. Some of the previous drifts were so deep that only rotary plows will be able to clear the worst spots.

The wind went down Sunday evening and snow plows were again called out to clear the highways.

The calendar says Spring is just around the corner, but the weatherman did not see it that way.

Don't forget to vote next Monday.

Are YOU Vision Safe?

To avoid danger you must be able to SEE it!

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

There's a lot of satisfaction in having good vision. Naturally, it's pretty hard to enjoy a movie or television, a book or newspaper, or a hunting trip, or golf game if you have trouble seeing what you're doing.

There's a lot of safety in having good vision, too. Safe driving depends almost entirely on seeing danger, in the form of pedestrians, other cars and warning signs, in time to take precautions. You have to see what you're doing when you're working around machinery, too. Even recreation demands good vision. For instance, nobody wants a hunter who's shooting "blind."

Sometimes visual defects creep up on us, so gradually we're not aware of them. Sometimes apparently normal eyes have a weakness that produces eye-strain under hard use.

In the interests of satisfaction and safety, it's a good idea to have your eyes checked. If the check shows you need glasses, then the wise thing to do is get 'em . . . and wear ' em!

Your Iowa Safety Congress suggests this: "The glasses you wear may save your sight . . . and save your life, as well!"

1951 CANCER CAMPAIGN CHAIRMAN NAMED

In announcing that the 1951 American Cancer Society Campaign Kick-Off meeting would be held March 28 at 12:30 P. M. in the Methodist Church parlors, Britt, Iowa, S. Williard Cunningham, county chairman of the drive also released the names of those who will serve as Town and Township Chairman. The following are the chairman and their town or township:

Corwith -- Mrs. John Thompson
Crystal Lake - Mrs. P. J. Kirkpatrick
Britt ---------- Mrs. Ray Baker
Garner ---- Mrs. Jake Koolbeck
Goodell -- Mrs. Harvey Boller
Kanawha -- Mrs. O. E. Johnson
Klemme -- Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson

Concord ------ Mrs. Wm. Hoeft
Garfield --- Mrs. Emery Brown
Britt --- Mrs. Layton Anderson
Orthel ---- Mrs. Norris Larson
Bingham - Mrs. Robert Guernsey
Crystal -- Mrs. Glenn Brookins
Madison ---- Mrs. Eldon Willis
Ellington ------ Mr. Peter Juhl

Mr. Cunningham said "The fact that cancer strikes eventually in one of every two Iowa homes creates a tremendous potential of personal interest in the cancer problem. We hope that contributors will consider this fact in apportioning their gift. It might well be that cancer some day would be the number one problem of any individual or his family. A gift to combat this problem should be of equal concern."

Nine Boys And Girls Will Be Confirmed

Three years of catechetical instruction have been completed by nine confirmants at Immanuel Evangelical and Reformed Church. They were examined before the Consistory on March 5th and before the congregation on Palm Sunday. They will be received into the membership of the church through the rite of Christian Confirmation on Good Friday, during the 10:00 A. M. service conducted by Rev. Vernon E. Jaberg. The sermon subject for this service is "Follow After Christ." The preparatory service for Holy Communion will also be held at this service.

Persons being confirmed are the following: Norman Eugene Henschen, Roger Terhufen, Lois Ann Christians, Richard Lee Baack, Lois Ann Jacobs, Ronald Karsjens, Bonnie Jean Mau, LeRoy Josten, and Delbert Etchen.

A cordial invitation is extended to the public to attend this service of confirmation on Good Friday.

TWO TICKETS IN FIELD FOR TOWN ELECTION MONDAY

Polls Will Be Open From 8:00 A. M. Until 7:00 P. M.

There are two tickets in the field, but neither complete, for the Town Election to be held at the Fire Station in Klemme, with the polls opening at 8:00 a. m. and closing at 7:00 p. m.

Ticket By Petition

The first ticket to be filed with Clerk A. R. Arnold was a petition with V. A. Cook as the mayor; Henry Buseman, Roy Schaefer and Martin Barz for Councilmen.

Fred Barz and Fred Kluckhohn had been named as councilmen on this ticket, but both men withdrew their names from the ticket. C. G. Waterman, who had served as Town Treasurer for 32 consecutive years, withdrew his name as candidate for Treasurer. Mr. Waterman stated that he thought 32 years was long enough and he was perfectly willing to let someone else have the office.

With the withdrawals, the Petition Ticket is therefore short 2 councilmen and 1 treasurer.

Citizens Party Files

As the result of a caucus called by Mayor W. C. Keraus, a Citizens Ticket was filed with the Clerk. This ticket is headed by W. F. Pavey as Mayor. The following are candidates for councilmen on this ticket: Fred J. Arnold, Frank Schulz, D. P. Anderson and Cliff Montgomrey. Allen Barz is the candidate for Treasurer.

Orville Bridges was also named on this ticket, but withdrew his name.

The Ballot

The ballot you get at the voting place will be about as follows:

By Petition

For Mayor:
V. A. Cook
For Councilmen:
Martin Barz
Henry Buseman
Roy Schaefer
Citizens Party
For Mayor:
W. F. Pavey
For Councilmen:
D. P. Anderson
Fred J. Arnold
Cliff Montgomery
Frank Schulz
For Treasurer:
Allen Barz

There will also be a blank Independent Ticket if the voters desire to write in names.

Mrs. Graydon Back Honored With Miscellaneous Shower

Mrs. Franklyn Buseman was hostess at a miscellaneous pink and blue shower honoring Mrs. Graydon Back at the Buseman home in the country Saturday afternoon.

The ladies enjoyed the afternoon playing games and Mrs. Back was presented with many nice gifts.

Mrs. Buseman, assisted by her mother, Mrs. Herman Back, served a nice lunch.

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY RAY EASTMAN

A few years back, it was not uncommon for a car to stall on a railroad crossing. Sometimes there was time to push it off the tracks before a train came along, and sometimes there wasn t. Sometimes the occupants didn't even have time to get out of the car.

Now, motors and gasoline nave been improved. Modern cars don't stall so often.

Now, at major crossings the old-time cross-buck worning sign has been largely replaced by flashing red lights, automatic stop-arm gates or other adequate warning systems.

Many crossings have been eliminated by rerouting and reconstruction of highways.

But human nature is still human nature. And people still die, needlessly and tragically, because drivers fail to heed the signs that warn of sudden death.

This is the problem that had Frank Ulish scratching his head the other day. In his office as safety education director of the State Department of Public Safety, he was reading the annual grade crossing accident summary of the Iowa State Commerce Commission. Less than halfway through it, he looked up.

"Sometimes I wonder," he remarked to nobody in particular. "After all, do people really pay attention to signs?"

The totals showed 59 persons killed and 119 accidents at Iowa grade crossings in 1950.

Five of the accidents involved drivers who disregarded the flag warnings of railroad men. In one case, a switchman flagging a crossing was struck by a car and thrown under moving cars. That crossing had flashing red lights, too.

One driver, deaf but not blind, drove onto the tracks in deadly defiance of flashing lights and the wigwag flagging of a trainman. In other cases, drivers raced past other cars waiting for a train.

In 40 of the 119 accidents, motor vehicles ran into the side of a train. Sixty-five accidents happened in broad daylight, only 54 at night. Seventy-five happened in clear weather; only nine in bad weather. Thirty-two occurred at "fully protected" crossings.

Actually, Ulish wasn't questioning the value of warning signs. Most people do heed the signs and signals.

But what about the drivers who won't take time to stop, look and live? When education and common sense prove not to be enough, there's alwys room for another grave in the hometown cemetery.

TOM C. NELSON, FORMER KLEMME FARMER DIED SUNDAY

Thomas C. Nelson, Jr., 66, Garner, died at a Mason City hospital Sunday following a heart attack.

Mr. Nelson was president of the Hancock County Mutual Insurance Co. for several years and was active in church and community affairs. Before moving to Garner several years ago, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson farmed near Klemme and are land owners in this community.

Funeral services were held this Wednesday afternoon at the Garner Methodist Church.

Mr. Nelson is survived by his widow, Edith Nelson and two sons, Verner Nelson of Klemme, and Rev. Harvey Nelson of Sioux City.

Miss Lois Stille Has Accepted Position In Des Moines

Miss Lois Stille, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Stille of Klemme, has been transferred from Burlington to Des Moines where she began her new work Monday.

Miss Stille is now doing secretarial work in the personnel office of the E.S.A. (Economics Stabilization Administration).

This office is headed by Mr. Albert J. Loveland, and is a nice promotion for Miss Stille.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Stille drove to Burlington Friday to help Lois move her belongings to Des Moines, where she and her sister Ruth now have an apartment together.

GARFIELD NO. 5 GIRL WON COUNTY SPELLING CONTEST

Marian Nedved, Garner, 8th grade pupil in Garfield No. 5 and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Nedved, won the Hancock County spelling contest held at Garner Saturday.

Runner-up was Phillip Mikkelson of Crystal No. 9. Third place winner was Jane Tegtmeyer, Orthel No. 6; fourth place went to Kathryn Paca of Garfield No. 5 and fifth place was won by Robert Clark of Britt Independent. The above contestants each received a student dictionary.

Judges of the contest were Supt. T. G. Ahrenkiel of Klemme, Miss Eva Schluter of Hayfield Consolidated and Mrs. Marian Stevenson of Britt Township school. C. W. Sankey, Wright Co. Supt. of Schools, pronounced the words.

HALF-SECTION FARM SELLS FOR $93,000

Elmer E. Apt and Melva R. Apt recently conveyed the east half of section 30 in Orthel township to the Cubbon Realty company of Nebraska. The instrument was filed on Feb. 28 and carried revenue stamps totaling $102.30 which would indicate a consideration of approximately $93,000. The 320-acre tract is well improved and in a high state of cultivation.

HOLY WEEK COMMUNION SERVICES

Holy Week Communion Services will be held in the Klemme-Liberty Methodist Churches. The Klemme Service will be on Maundy Thursday evening at eight o'clock and the Liberty Service of Good Friday evening at eight o'clock.

FARM WOMAN DIED THURS. EVENING FOLLOWING LONG ILLNESS

Survived By Husband And Three Children

Funeral services for Mrs. R. S. Renner, 56, who died at a Mason City hospital Thursday evening after an illness of several months, were held at the Methodist Church in Klemme at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. The Rev. E. Morris Egeland, pastor, conducted the rites and was assisted by Rev. Paul Petersen of the Wesley Methodist Church of Mason City. Burial was in Memorial Park cemetery near Mason City.

Mrs. Renner was born Dora Elizabeth Lindekugel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Lindekugel, at Alexander, Nebr., Dec. 3, 1894. She was married to Mr. Renner June 21, 1915. They have lived on a farm 8 miles east of Klemme the past 14 years. Mrs. Renner was a member of the Klemme Methodist Church.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Renner is survived by 3 children, Robert Norval Renner, of Thornton; Mr. Chester Renner, Klemme, and a daughter, Mrs. Harold Doescher, living south of Mason City; 8 grandchildren; a brother, Frank Lindekugel, Bruning, Nebr., and 4 sisters, Mrs. Ida Matthews, Powell, Wyo.; Mrs. Ralph Williams, Omaha, Nebr., and Mmes. Fred Ellis and Clyde Tiffany, Binghamtown, N. Y.

She was preceded in death by her parents and an infant brother.

Lester Neuberger's Car Wrecked In Storm Saturday Afternoon

Lester Neuberger's nearly new Ford car was wrecked late Saturday afternoon in the sudden storm as he was coming from Garner and was about to turn in on the Klemme road.

Involved in the 3-way collision was a truck and another car. The pavement was very slippery and just what happened is not known, but Neuberger's car was caught in the middle of the smash-up and folded up resembling an accordion. Neuberger escaped with minor bruises. Occupants of the other vehicles seemed only shaken up. The truck and the other car were not badly damaged.

Wrecks the past week were numerous, due to the slippery roads, drifting snow and at times very low visibility.

Methodist Study Group Met March 8th

Mrs. C. A. Arnold and Miss Minnie Lenz were hostess to the Methodist Study Group on Thursday, March 8, 1951.

The meeting opened with the history of the song, "How Sweet The Name of Jesus Sounds."

Mrs. Dale Brede's devotional topic was "Angels In The Kitchen." "Near East Panorama" our study book, was finished with Rev. E. M. Egeland giving the last chapter, "Bridges Into The Future."

Questions and answers were in charge of Mrs. Frank Ward Twenty-six adults and 4 children were in attendance.

The social hour and the lovely lunch was enjoyed by all present.

Kudjes Entertained At Dinner And Bridge Party

Mr. and Mrs. Art Kudje entertained to dinner Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. Ray Jorgenson, Jr. of Garner; Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Harson and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Fuss.

Bridge was played after dinner and Mr. and Mrs. Harson won the high couple prize and Mr. and Mrs. Jorgenson won the low couple prize.

Economical Cough Relief! Try This Home Mixture

No Cooking. Makes Big Saving.

To get quick and satisfying relief from coughs due to colds, mix this recipe in your kitchen.

First, make a syrup with 2 cups granulated sugar and one cup of water. No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Then get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. This is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its quick action on throat and bronchial irritations.

Put Pinex into a pint bottle, and fill up with your syrup. Thus you make a full pint of splendid medicine—about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and tastes fine.

And for quick, blessed relief, it is surprising. You can feel it take hold in a way that means business. It loosens phlegm, soothes irritated membranes, eases soreness. Makes breathing easy, and lets you get restful sleep. Just try it, and if not pleased, your money will be refunded.

FOR EXTRA CONVENIENCE GET NEW READY-MIXED, READY-TO-USE PINEX!

Don't Talk About Troubles; Correct Them Says Mother

When many folks get to feeling badly they just don't know what to do. They fret and stew around, tell their neighbors, their friends and their family how badly they feel—and they usually do feel miserable. But they don't help matters any by telling other folks how badly they feel all the time, because most folks don't want to be around them when they act that way. Now, for example, take Mrs. Zina Lee Bowman, Route 6, Clees Ferry Road, Nashville, Tennessee. When she got to feeling badly, she began taking HADACOL and found that by taking HADACOL she gave her system Vitamins B^1, B^2, Niacin and Iron in which she was deficient.

Here is Mrs. Bowman's own statement: "I was so weak I could hardly do my housework. I am 30 years old. I am the mother of 9 children. I was so nervous I hardly wanted the children to speak. I had to rest after I got breakfast and before I cleaned my house. I have taken almost 4 bottles of HADACOL, and I feel fine. The children can make all the noise they wish, and it doesn't bother me. In fact, I join them in their ball games and other games. We are a happy family, thanks to HADACOL."

If your druggist does not have HADACOL, order direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana. Send no money. Just your name and address on a penny post card. Pay postman. State whether you want the $3.50 hospital economy size or $1.25 trial size. Remember, money cheerfully refunded unless you are 100% satisfied. —Adv.

Brucellosis Is Danger in Work

ALTHOUGH FARMERS are in constant danger of getting brucellosis from cattle and swine, veterinarians and packinghouse workers run an even greater risk according to a report in the Journal of the American veterinary medical association.

The report, made after a joint survey by the U S public health service and the Indiana state board of health, declared that brucellosis can be regarded as an "occupational hazard' of persons whose work brings them into contact with infected animals

Through use of a blood test, it can be determined if a person has been exposed to brucellosis.

Tests showed that as many as 25 per cent of one group of veterinarians either had had the disease or had been exposed to it The tests were made during a three-year period on more than 600 veterinarians.

Considerable numbers of packinghouse employees also showed exposure to the disease. Numbers of reactors to the test were highest on jobs requiring frequent contact with infected animals—with group percentages running as high as 33 per cent

When groups of farm workers were tested, slightly less than four per cent of the men reacted to the test and less than two per cent of the women.

Employees of a rendering plant also showed a high incidence of exposure, with some 27 per cent giving positive readings on the blood test

It's Time to Bake a Luscious Cake
(See Recipes Below)

Cake Magic

THERE'S NOTHING nicer than a delicious, fluffy cake on hand for birthdays, for company that may pop in unexpectedly, or for the sewing circle gathering!

One of the all-time favorites is chocolate or devil's food with a fluffy white icing. Close on its heels, vying for honors is the delicate white cake often frosted with Seven Minute frosting and a dusting of moist coconut.

Burnt sugar cake has an interesting flavor, as has the caramel frosting which goes with it.

Deluxe White Cake
(Makes 2 9-inch layers)

Measure into sifter:
2½ cups sifted cake flour
2½ teaspoons double-acting baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1¼ cups sugar
Measure into cup:
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup milk
Measure into bowl:
⅔ cup vegetable shortening
Have ready:
5 egg whites, beaten to meringue* with ½ cup sugar

*For meringue, beat 5 egg whites with rotary egg beater (or at high speed of electric mixer) until foamy, add ½ cup sugar gradually, beating only until meringue will hold up in soft peaks.

Have the shortening at room temperature. Grease pans, line bottom with waxed paper, and grease again. Use two deep 9-inch layer pans or a 13x9x2-inch pan. Set oven for moderate heat (350°). Sift flour once before measuring.

Mix or stir shortening just to soften. Sift in dry ingredients; and ¾ of liquid. Mix until all flour is dampened; then beat 1 minute. Add remaining liquid, blend, and beat 2 minutes longer. Then add meringue mixture and beat 1 minute. (Count only actual beating time.

Or count beating strokes. Allow at least 100 full strokes per minute. Scrape bowl and spoon or beater often.) Turn batter into pans. Bake in moderate oven (350°) about 35 minutes for layers, or about 45 minutes for 13x9x2-inch cake.

Devil's Food Cake
(Makes 2 9-inch layers)

Measure into sifter:
2 cups sifted cake flour
¾ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon soda
1 cup granulated sugar
Measure into cup:
⅔ cup buttermilk
1 teaspoon vanilla
Measure into bowl:
½ cup vegetable shortening
Have ready:
½ cup brown sugar, firmly packed
2 eggs, unbeaten
3 squares unsweetened chocolate, cut up and melted in ½ cup boiling water

Have the shortening at room temperature. Grease pans, line bottoms with waxed paper, and grease again. Start oven for moderate heat (350°). Sift flour once before measuring.

Mix or stir shortening just to soften. Sift dry ingredients. Add brown sugar—force through sieve to remove lumps, if necessary. Add eggs and ½ of the liquid. Mix until all flour is dampened; then beat 1 minute. Add remaining liquid, blend, and beat 1 minute. Add chocolate mixture and beat 1 minute longer (Count only actual beating time. Or count beating strokes Allow at least 100 full strokes per minute. Scrape bowl and spoon or beater often.) Turn batter into pans. Bake in moderate oven (350°) about 30 minutes for layers Spread with seven minute frosting.

Seven Minute Frosting
(Makes enough for 2 layers)

2 egg whites
1½ cups sugar
1½ teaspoons light corn syrup or ¼ teaspoon cream of tartar
⅓ cup cold water
Dash of salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
Few drops red food coloring

Place all ingredients except vanilla in double boiler; mix thoroughly. Cook over hot water, beating constantly with rotary or electric beater until mixture forms peaks, about 7 minutes. Remove from heat and hot water; add vanilla and food coloring. Beat until cool.

Burnt Sugar Cake
(Makes 2 8-inch layers)

½ cup shortening
1½ cups sugar
2 egg yolks
1 teaspoon vanilla
2½ cups cake flour
¼ teaspoon salt
2½ teaspoons baking powder
1 cup water or milk
3 tablespoons Burnt Sugar
2 egg whites, stiffly beaten

Thoroughly cream shortening and sugar; add egg yolks and vanilla; beat until fluffy. Add sifted dry ingredients alternately with water, beating well after each addition. Add Burnt Sugar and fold in egg whites. Bake in 2 waxed-paper-lined 8-inch layer-cake pans in moderate oven (350°) about 30 minutes. Put layers together and frost with Caramel-Nut Frosting.

Burnt Sugar: Melt ½ cup white sugar in heavy skillet over low heat until dark brown and smooth. Remove from heat; add ½ cup boiling water; return to heat and stir rapidly until molasses-like syrup melts.

Caramel-Nut Frosting

2 cups brown sugar
½ cup butter
½ cup light cream or top milk
Few grains salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup chopped walnuts

Combine ingredients in saucepan. Stir over low heat until dissolved. Heat to boiling and cook to soft-ball stage (234°). Beat until cool. Add vanilla. Spread between layers and on top and sides of 2-layer cake. Sprinkle with chopped walnuts.

LYNN SAYS:
Give Cake Crowning Touch With These Icing Secrets

Ever try to ice a cake that's too fresh or warm? It may break or fall apart, crack or melt the frosting if you haven't allowed it to cool before icing.

It's a mistake to try to achieve a smooth looking surface when swirls, ridges or a textured surface is far more effective. Use the blade of a spatula, a fork or the tip of a spoon to make the surface interesting.

Loose crumbs mixed in through the frosting spoil the appearance of many a good cake. Let cake cool, then brush crumbs with one hand while holding with the other one.

Frostings and icings should be cooled before being spread on the cake; otherwise, they may soak into cake.

Chocolate or butter cakes are lovely when you sprinkle confectioners' sugar immediately after taking them from the oven. If sprinkled over a lace doily, the sugar leaves a pattern.

KATHLEEN NORRIS
Love Delusions

"HOW CAN WE HELP our daughter?" writes Lucy Cotton, from Duluth. "Fay is 24, our only child, but we had my nieces, whom I will call Meg and Emily, living with us for many years. Emily married at 19, three years ago, and has a baby son. Meg worked in an insurance office and was married last year.

"Neither girl is actually as pretty as our Fay, but both are attractive, confident and popular. Of their small estate only a few hundreds are left, but Fay will inherit enough from us and her grandparents to be financially independent. However, both Harry and I thought that she should find occupation, too. She completed a course as a kindergartner, but did not care for the work; later she and a friend opened a tea and gift shop, in which her interest did not last long. The girls sold out, and Fay went in seriously for amateur theatricals, having real talent in character and comic parts. She also worked hard as property woman and prompter, and we hoped she was really started.

Imaginary Infatuations

"However, a year ago, she began to give unmistakable signs of nervous disorder. She shut herself away from us, sometimes was absolutely silent and moody, sometimes talked fast in what a psychologist later called 'elation.' (We took her to our best mental man, who did help, and advised care, love and time as the cure.) From what she told him he gathered that jealousy of her cousins, perhaps unconscious, was partly the cause.

". . . best mental man . . ."

"Fay seemed better, and for a few months was more like her old self. But now there is a new phase, infinitely distrubing to me. It began, I see now, when she told me last summer that her psychologist was not only in love with her, but had made improper advances. As he is a married man of 50, with three sons, I was at first shocked, and then incredulous. I persuaded my husband to talk her into giving up treatments from this man, which she did.

"To make the rest of the story short, Fay now believes, or at least asserts, that at least half the men she meets are infatuated with her. Her cousins' husbands, their male relatives, our clergyman, even the postman and grocer are all by turns supposedly under her sway, and she relates her affairs with these men with a relish that makes my heart ache with pity and shame.

"How Can We Help Her?"

"Yesterday she announced to the papers her engagement to a man I am convinced never had the slightest romantic feeling for her. He is a business associate of her father's which makes it the more embarrasing. Reporters telephoned him, and he went to see Harry, and we were saved publicity, at least, but Fay took the matter very lightly, laughing it off by saying that apparently the man had changed his mind. 'Whom your fastidious daughter had the honor to refuse!' she will say when any man's name is in the paper; whether he is engaged, or going to the front, or has been given some honor or promotion.

"My husband and I can't bear to see her going on into middle-age like this. When she was a small girl she did romance about things; we expected her to outgrow it. But it seems she never has. How can we help her?"

Since she is still very young, and since she has some property to give her a sense of security, I would, in her case, spike her guns in advance. You and her father love her enough to do this subtly and tenderly. Don't harp on it. But remind her often that you see through it.

Tell her that you and her friends know that she wants to marry, that it is quite natural, but that only by occupying herself in some hospital or Red Cross or charity work—so terribly needed now on all sides!—can she learn to forget herself, distinguish truth from fable, and make real friends among the sort of men who interest her.

Perhaps your strongest argument will be that if she decides to grow up now she can make a good life for herself, but that in 10 years she will be confirmed as the simpering, flirtatious old maid.

Jesus Faces Death

Lesson for March 18, 1951

MANY A STORY has been written around the theme of a man who knows he has only a short while to live. But the best of these is the story of Jesus It is the best not only because it is true; it is the story of the best man known to history. We Christians go further than that. We believe he was Perfection in all his human life. Jesus' way of facing death is the right way to face it, the way his followers too will choose

Heart at Leisure

FOR ONE thing, Jesus did not try to conceal from himself or others the fact that he would shortly die. Through all that happened, he was aware of his death. He neither shut his eyes to the inevitable, nor mourned over it.

Now in our sad times, with death so near to all of us, the approach of death is not something to talk about as if it were an event of the 21st century. Death may come to any of us soon; death is very likely to come to many of us soon; and sooner or later, death is certain to come to all of us. Facing death may bring out all a man's hidden selfishness. From the moment he knows his days are limited, he may think of nothing but himself and his "chances" to escape.

Jesus, on the contrary, under no illusions about escape, accepting death quietly, day by day thought of others rather than of himself.

His Friends and God

MANY PERSONS, in the felt presence of death, withdraw into themselves. They cut the ties that have bound them to others, they set their faces "outward bound." Not so with Jesus. While it was still day, he would not act as if it were night. So we find him tightening up the bonds of friendship.

It is an interesting fact that of all Jesus' living days, those which were remembered best were those which came just before his death. Part of the reason for this may be that his friends came closer to him in those days; there was an intimacy, a greater warmth, between him and his old friends than there had ever been. Even when he prayed in Gethsemane he was not content to pray alone. If there was none to watch with him and in some dim way share his agonies, it was because his friends were not awake to his need, not because he in any way turned his back on them.

Again, we find Jesus' prayer-life growing intense in those last days and nights. Nowhere else from Jesus' whole life is such a long prayer recorded as the one John puts into the story Mark tells so briefly of the last supper (John 17). Not in Jesus' whole life before, though he prayed early and often, do we hear of such agony of prayer as that in the garden before Judas came. He not only turned to his friends, and turned to God, but it is plain that he wished of all things most to bring his friends nearer to God.

Yet how many Christians are there who, if they knew death would be coming for them within the week, would think of others' spiritual welfare rather than their own? How many would help to prepare others for God, and not themselves alone?

First, a Good Life

THE CHURCH has always been a bit suspicious about "deathbed repentance." We know it can be real; but over a period of two thousand years it has been noticed that most people who suddenly turn good in the presence of death are likely to be just as bad as ever if death postpones his visit.

Jesus' last days were not those of a scared man trying to make up in a few short days the lost opportunities of a mis-spent lifetime. On the contrary, Jesus' last days were all of a piece with the rest of his life. Prayer, friendships, appreciation and help of others, even sacrifice, were not strange to him.

So with each of us. We all know how we ought to live if death were hovering near. But we shall have a hard time living and acting so, then, unless it is our habit already. It is well to pray for a "good death;" but the best way to have a good death is first to live the good life.

RED STAR SPECIAL ACTIVE DRY YEAST DISSOLVES FASTER
I LIKE RED STAR'S FAST RISING ACTION
30 MINUTE HOT CROSS BUNS
2 packages Red Star Special Active Dry Yeast
1¼ cups warm water (105° to 1 F.)
¼ cup sugar
1¾ teaspoons salt
1 egg
3 cups sifted all purpose flour
1 cup raisins
¼ cup chopped citron
1 teaspoon cinnamon
2 tablespoons shortening, melted and cooled to lukewarm
Step 1: Dissolve yeast in warm water (105° to 110° F.) in large mixing bowl. Step 2: Add sugar, salt, unbeaten egg, flour, raisins, citron and cinnamon. Beat well with electric mixer on low or medium speed, or by hand with large wooden spoon. Add shortening, beating until thoroughly mixed. Step 3: Spoon dough into well greased muffin pans, filling about one-third full. Step 4: Let rise in warm place (90° to 95°F.) until dough has risen level with top of muffin pans (about 25 to 30 minutes). Step 5: Bake in moderately hot oven (375° to 400° F.) 20 minutes. Step 6: Remove from pans and glaze with thin powdered sugar icing. When cool, make a cross on each with plain icing. Yields 18 to 24 buns.

THE EDITOR JOURNEYS TO HOME OF THE WORLD'S FIRST WONDER

Mary Jane and I had been looking forward to our third visit to New Mexico and we were sort of tiring of being in the Rio Grande Valley and it's summer-like weather. We really looked forward to a bit cooler climate and higher altitude, so we started out again for New Mexico.

Although we did not see the Rio Grande River, we were not far from it as we drove Highway 83, 85 and 90 along the Mexican border on our trip that took us through Laredo, Eagle Pass, Del Rio to Sanderson, at which place we headed more to the North.

We again went through a lot of cattle country, somewhat barren and overgrown with mesquit and cactus, saw some oil country The towns were a long way apart but the few cities along the route were up and coming and had many new modern buildings.

We had a bit of mountain driving, especially between Del Rio and Sanderson where we crossed the Pecos River canyon. As we approached this canyon a very large sign warned us to test our brakes and use 2nd or low gear. It was a very steep descent with plenty of switchbacks and the scenery was beautiful. M. J was driving at the time and it gave us a good chance to try out the Pontiac's hydramatic drive. The car performed beautifully and the pull up the steep, twisting grade coming out of the canyon really was a fine demonstration of smooth power and the car just seemed to "eat up" those steep grades. We crossed several more canyons, but none as deep and as beautiful as the Pecos Canyon.

Night found us at Sanderson which on the map appeared to be a good sized town, but only a little larger than Klemme However, their motels were first class

The next forenoon as we neared Carlsbad we saw more ranches and several ranches had herds of horses grazing Closer to Carlsbad the scene changed to farms again where fine cotton, alfalfa and maize is raised All the farm land is irrigated around Carlsbad, the water being from Red Bluff Lake, formed by a dam across Pecos River The lake also makes a fine recreational center and fishing is good there. This irrigated land around Carlsbad sells for $500 per acre.

The air was crisp and delightful at Carlsbad with an elevation of 3,100 feet, the lowest in New Mexico. The average annual temperature is 63 degrees with an annual rainfall of only 13 inches and they claim 80 per cent sunshine The winters are quite mild and even in summer the nights are always cool.

Carlsbad is the Potash Capital of America—three gigantic potash plants annually produce thousands of carloads of this vital chemical and plant-food fertilizer from the Nation's only potash mines. I will tell a story about the biggest mine later, which we were lucky enough to visit one day I say lucky, as very few people are allowed to visit the mines. Being in the newspaper business and also being acquainted with one of the men in the mine, secured us a coveted pass More about this at a later time

Our host and hostess during our several days stay at Carlsbad were Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Smith and son, Daryl D Mrs. Smith is a sister of Mrs. Ray Jorgenson, Jr of Garner, so we were not strangers to the Smiths The Smith family had just moved into a fine new brick home in a new suburban district of Carlsbad. Mr Smith is one of the chief electricians at the mines, and through him we were able to get a pass and live the life of a miner for one day

Sunday afternoon "Smitty" (Eldon Smith) insisted that he take us out into the foothills of the Guadalupe Mountains, and through some fine ranch land, visit a real ranch and drive on to a place in the mountains where we could look down into Dark Canyon in the Lincoln National Forest.

The Smith family, Mr Smith's father, Mary Jane and myself were soon on the way and in a few miles were getting into the mountains and up on a high plateau where we saw some of the finest Hereford cattle we had ever seen, grazing along the mountain road we were traveling. We saw herd after herd and everyone of those cattle looked like a topper for the Chicago market. There were no fences along this mountain road, only an occasional cross fence and a cattle guard on the road. The altitude was perhaps near a mile high in this cattle region and the cool climate gave the cattle a nice, heavy glossy coat.

Smith then headed down a side road into a canyon where we pulled up in the yard of a fine ranch complete with a nice ranch house and the bunk house for the cowboys. Nothing very glamorous about these cowboys that day; they were out in the yard sawing wood and splitting logs. So they have more to do than just ride 'ucking broncs and rounding up cattle.

Sixty-five miles out from Carlsbad we really came to a jumping off place if there ever was one. Getting out of the car we looked down into a deep, beautiful canyon called Dog Canyon and a part of the more extensive Dark Canyon It was perhaps a half-mile deep, almost a sheer drop down from where we stood, and a couple of miles long. The canyon floor was rather broad and level and cattle were grazing down in there. As far as we could look in both directions we could not see the end of the canyon. There was a stiff breeze coming up out of the canyon and if you threw your hat into the canyon the breeze would bring it right back out again! The canyon seemed to have a bluish tint and was unlike the Grand Canyon which is a riot of ever-changing color.

We were continually on the lookout for deer, as they are quite numerous throughout the foothills of the Guadalupe Mountains. There is an abundant of feed, plenty of good cover as the slopes are covered with dwarf cedars, a variety of shrubs and tall grasses. Its not only ideal deer and elk country but good cattle country.

I had intended to get in a story about Carlsbad Caverns this week but I have been rambling along and got off the subject, so will tell about the Caverns in another story. I have visited the Caverns two times and enjoyed them more than ever the second time. It would still be worth while to see them again, they are that vast.

Visiting around Iowa

by Joe Marsh

Iowa's Great Seal

Edna and I toured the State House at Des Moines the other day.

"There's something every Iowan should remember," Edna says . . . pointing to Iowa's motto on the Great Seal. The motto reads:

"Our liberties we prize and our rights we will maintain."

It's a motto we Iowans can be proud of. And it's one that most of us live up to.

I don't think there's any place where people's basic rights and freedom are more respected than right here in Iowa. Yes, we have our agitators. But in our town (or most anywhere in Iowa) amateur dictators don't get very far.

We grant them their right to talk. That's one of their privileges. But let them try to take away any of our rights to live, think, or work the way we prefer, and you'll find the neighbors rallying 'round mighty fast.

Think it over . . . "our rights we will maintain." It's a pretty good motto to tie-to.

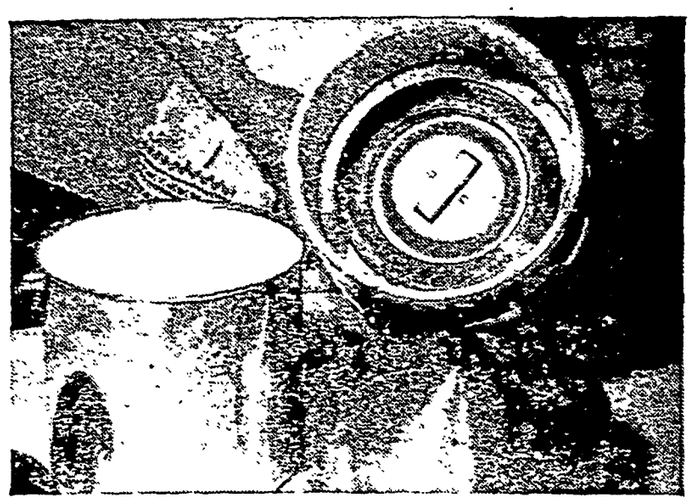
Make Milk Safe—

PASTEURIZE IT AT HOME



Milk is an old standby for good health, and to be healthful it must be safe. Pasteurization helps make it safe. Many Iowa women are finding they can carry out this process quite easily in their own kitchens.

Homemakers can do much to safeguard family health by pasteurizing their own milk supply at home. Many women are in the habit of pasteurizing enough milk to last 3 days, depending on refrigerator space available, and they do it in less than an hour's time. Others find it easier to sell all the farm supply and buy their milk, already bottled and pasteurized, from the grocer or local pasteurizing plant.

What is pasteurization? It's a process whereby all of the milk is heated to a temperature high enough and held at that temperature long enough to destroy any disease-producing organisms that may be in the milk You can use equipment already on hand in your kitchen—or perhaps you'll prefer to buy a home pasteurizer.

Now, dairy industry and nutrition specialists at Iowa State College will tell you that compared to some other sources of disease, milk isn't responsible for many disease outbreaks. However, it is possible for milk to carry the germs which cause brucellosis, septic sore throat and tuberculosis. Occasionally there have been cases where typhoid fever, dysentery, paratyphoid fever, scarlet fever, diphtheria, cholera and poliomyelitis (rarely) have been traced back to milk or other dairy products So that's why pasteurization is important.

Commercial Home Pasteurizers

There are three main types of electric home pasteurizers on the market, sold under several trade names. These take less time than home utensils and are easier to operate, because they have time and temperature controls Those on sale since Jan. 1950, have been given performance tests in the dairy industry research laboratories at the Iowa State College. Milk processed in them meets the requirements demanded by nutrition specialists at the college.

The 1-gallon type functions by means of a hot plate fitted with time and temperature controls. The container is filled, set into the heating unit and left until the milk has been pasteurized. Then the container is removed and the milk cooled—all this according to the manufacturer's specific directions.

Hot Water Jacket

A hot water jacket with time and temperature controls is the feautre of the 2-gallon pasteurizer. An agitator keeps the milk in motion during the heating and cooling processes. Then you can run cold water through the jacket to cool the milk, without removing the milk container from the heater.

The 7-quart equipment pasteurizes the milk right in the bottles. It too is fitted with time and temperature controls. Pasteurizing and cooling are done in the same container You can use either milk bottles or Mason-type jars for containers.

Whichever method you decide on, you can get more information on how to go about it from your county extension director.

Even though you pasteurize, you'll still need to take the usual precautions. Your herd should be disease-free, your milk of good flavor; you should follow sanitary milk production methods, observe health and santitation rules in- handling milk, and be sure to provide adequate protection for milk after pasteurization.

All this, plus pasteurization, say dairy industry and nutrition specialists, adds up to fine-quality, wholesome milk.

TREES ARE AVAILABLE FOR CONSERVATION USE

There's a wide selection of hardwood and conifer trees available at cost from the Iowa State Conservation Commission. These trees are produced for use as wildlife refuge and erosion control, says R. B. Campbell, extension forester at the Iowa State College.

There is a good supply of red pine, a desirable tree for planting in many parts of Iowa, he reports. Red pine is adapted to growing conditions southeast of a line extending from Mason City to Missouri Valley. Some spots north of this line are suitable for this species, but the general area is not recommended for red pine, Campbell says

Red pine is a fast-growing tree that develops into a straight growth which is ideal for lumber Red pine is the leading lumber tree in the lake states, Campbell adds.

Farmers are cautioned not to plant any conifers on low, wet poorly drained soil. For this type of soil use cottonwood, soft maple, green ash and walnut.

The Iowa State Conservation Commission has available most of the common hardwoods and conifers that are grown in Iowa. Farmers should get their orders in early to assure delivery. March 15 is the deadline for orders.

Price lists and order blanks are available from county extension directors, conservation officers and Soil Conservation representatives.

THE LIBERTY GIRLS 4-H NEWS

The pinning and cutting out of a pattern was a demonstration given by Bethel Haberkamp at the February meeting of the Liberty Busy Bees 4-H club held at Jeanetta and JoAnn Greiman's home.

Eight members answered roll call on "What I Wish To Add To My Wardrobe." We decided to donate $5.00 to the International Rural Youth Exchange. A demonstration on "Good Grooming" was given by Eunice Huenman. Rachel Hueneman gave a talk on seams. The leaders gave us some pointers pertaining to sewing.

Vivian Stromer and Rachel Hueneman were appointed on the picture committee.

SOIL TESTS MAKE FOR BETTER FERTILIZER USE

With industry bidding for chemicals and other raw materials needed to make commercial fertilizer, farmers will want to make especially efficient use of the fertilizer they buy this year, observes J. W. Fitts, Iowa State College extension agronomist.

Full-scale farm production in 1951 will depend a lot on how well this supply of fertilizer is used The type of fertilizer applied must be correctly fitted to the soil it's used on if agriculture is to make the greatest contribution to the mobilzation program, Fitts adds.

He stresses good soil tests as the quickest and best way that soil needs can be learned. Although it's late for soil testing this year, there is still time to send in samples from land that will be planted to row crops. Fitts suggests taking these samples as soon as possible after the frost leaves the ground. County extension directors have the forms for farmers to fill out and send in with their soil samples. Samples are tested at the Iowa State College soil testing laboratories at Ames and Cedar Rapids.

IOWAN'S SHARE IN FEDERAL TAXES TWICE AS BIG AS STATE TAXES

—Iowans are paying twice as much toward the cost of federal government as they pay for state government, the Iowa Development Commission has commented.

Federal taxes paid by Iowans in 1950 divide into a $138 share for each of Iowa's 2,621,000 residents, or $500 for each family. State taxes amount to $61.53 per person, or $222 for each of Iowa's families, according to the Commission's statistical division.

Federal taxes paid in Iowa in 1950 added up to $360,134,874.-33. About 60 percent of that sum was individual income tax, and about 20 percent was corporation tax. The rest consisted of various excise taxes and employment taxes such as old age insurance and unemployment compensation.

State taxes paid by Iowans in 1950 totaled $159,992,500. Thirty percent of this amount was retail sales tax, paid at the rate of two cents per dollar. Gasoline tax (4 cents per gallon) amounted to 23 percent of the tota., and motor vehicle licenses added up to 17 percent. Auto registrants hit a new high in 1950.

State income tax accounted for only 11.6 percent of the total.

Other state taxes include levies on chain stores, beer and cigarette sales, oleomargarine sales and inheritances. Profits from state liquor stores amounted to $2 per person, or more than $7 per family.

Of the special tax money and liquor profits, 79.58 percent goes back to local governments in highway improvements, state aid, and other welfare measures.

FOR GOOD TEETH THERE'S NOTHING LIKE MILK

ILLUSTRATION COURTESY OF IOWA DAIRY INDUSTRY COMMISSION

Yes, Milk is Nature's way of providing the minerals that build firm, white teeth. Milk also provides well-balanced proportions of vitamins A, B and C—so essential to strong, sturdy bodies. In wintertime, Milk helps develop extra resistance to colds and other diseases.

No other food gives you so much nourishment, at such low cost. Your dentist or your physician will tell you—children need at least a quart each day, adults at least a pint . . . of wholesome, refreshing Milk. See that YOUR FAMILY gets its full share every day.

Social and Emotional Security Pledge To

TODAY'S CHILD

Happily they play on the school grounds in Iowa, this coming generation. What kind of young people they will become; what measure of adults in the years ahead is of foremost concern to today's parents.

Iowa's 18-year-olds, children just a few years ago, have some mighty important decisions on their hands today. Mom and Dad, too, are facing the problem of possible family adjustments, and of whether their young people are all set to go.

Challenge Of Today

"Our children today are living in a period of history more exacting than ever before," says Margaret Mead, noted anthropologist. "They must live in new places, in new ways and keep their characters intact. They are pushed into the world at an earlier age, so they must be stronger than ever before."

Mrs Alma Jones, family relations specialist at Iowa State College, puts it this way: "If the 18-year-old is physically and mentally ready to answer his country's need for defense, is he also emotionally and socially able to take on that new experience? Can parents do more in their homes and communities to help their children and young people develop all their abilities so that they can take the changing world of today in their stride?"

Start Early

The beginning is the "chiefest" part of the undertaking, said Mrs. Jones. Starting in the early, formative years to meet the emotional and social needs of the child as well as his physical and mental needs is now known to be of greatest importance.

Those who have long studied in this field now know that the sense of trust and confidence in self and others is instilled most strongly in the first year. The child needs the warmth of being loved, of feeling wanted that stays with him throughout life.

The sense of independence has its best chance to develop in the 1 to 3-year old. It is at this time he learns what is approved and what is forbidden In this wise parents will give him guidance. Shaming or belittling him may destroy self-confidence.

Initiative and imagination, those ingredients on which much of the success of American enterprise has come about, is most easily instilled in the 4 to 5-year-old period, and wise are the parents who encourage their children to help them in small tasks taking the awkward and unintentional mistakes in stride This is an impressionable period, Mrs. Jones said, and many a parent has turned down a child's generous impulse to help, only to wonder why he won't cooperate in tasks later on.

The desire for accomplishment, adequacy and mastery is strongly shown in the elementary school age. This is the time to build on the child's desire to acquire knowledge, skills, learn the rules of the game, and play fair.

The sense of identity—of trying to clarify who he is and what the future holds for him—becomes of great importance to the child of 12 to 16; the sense of intimacy—of wanting to be well liked, to take his full place in society, and to play a part in community and national welfare—comes as an older teenager.

EASTER CONCERT TO BE PRESENTED BY THE REFORMED CHURCH

A concert of Easter music will be presented at the Immanuel Evangelical and Reformed Church on Easter Evening at 8:00 P. M. The various musical organizations of the church will unite to present this concert.

The opening devotional service will be conducted by the pastor, the Rev. Mr Vernon E. Jaberg. The Mixed Choir under the direction of Mr. Raymond Barz will sing "Take Up Thy Cross," "One Day" and "The Sinner and the Song." The solo in the latter selection will be sung by Mr. Allen Barz. The Women's Chorus under the direction of Mrs. William Reinhart will sing "He Lives Again," "Sheep and Lambs" and "Christ The Lord Is Risen Today." The Junior Choir under the direction of Mrs. Ernest Gerardi will sing, "Memories of Galilee," "Chimes of Easter Day" and "The Christ of the Cross." The Men's Chorus under the direction of Mr. Raymond Barz will render the following selections "Christ Arose," "Whom Are Ye Bearing" and "On The Cross." The Easter concert will be concluded by the combined choirs singing the anthem 'Praise Ye The Father." Accompaniement on the organ will be provided by Mrs. Ernest Gerardi and Miss Beulah Goll.

All members and friends of the congregation are cordially invited to this special Easter Service of song and praise.

CARD OF THANKS

HOUSE IS DANGER SPOT FOR FARM ACCIDENTS

Little children often run to the house for safety when something scares them. But the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture, has figures to show that instead of being the safest spot on the farm, the house is the number one place for farm accidents.

The kitchen ranks as the most dangerous area in the home according to number of accidents. Living room and bathroom tie for second.

Farmers often neglect treatment of minor wounds unless first-aid kits are conveniently placed around these areas where accidents most often happen, says Norval Wardle, Iowa State College farm safety specialist.

Naturally, Wardle names the kitchen as one of the most important spots on the farm for a first-aid kit. The first- aid kit should be in plain sight so even a stranger in the house would have no trouble finding it.

The shop area is another location that needs a first-aid kit. Otherwise, injuries there will be neglected. If the wound or bruise is treated at a later time, Wardle calls it "late aid," instead of first aid.

Have a first-aid kit on the tractor. Fasten it by itself where it is easy to reach. Use metal boxes for the first-aid kits in the shop and on the tractor, he urges. This will keep dust out.

CIVIL DEFENSE

Regional, State Training Centers Planned in Civil Defense Program

(This is the fourth of a series of articles on civil defense by Walter A. Shead, Western Newspaper Union's Washington Correspondent.)

By WALTER A. SHEAD

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Authority in the line of command for the tremendous civil defense army needed in case of full scale war stems from the President, through Civil Defense Administrator Millard Caldwell, to the 48 state civil defense directors and down the line to the appointed officers in cities, towns and counties throughout the nation.

National defense against atomic, biological and chemical warfare rests upon thorough training to start in a civil defense staff college to be established for top civil defense planners and administrators. The college will serve as a source of all latest information. Regional technical training centers are also planned where this information will be disseminated in the civil defense training programs in the states and local communities. The technical centers will be staffed by thoroughly trained men and women in all phases of the work and will provide means for standardization of the technical and special training. Standardization is a prime factor for successful mutual aid and mobile support which require a force of uniformly trained civil defense workers.

Graduates of the federal technical training centers will train other civil defense workers and trainers within the states, who, in turn, will train the local volunteers. Under the program, two kinds of training will be provided—general and specialized. General training will consist of instruction in basic subjects to include fundamental principes of organization and operation, basic first aid and improvised rescue operations.

Specialized training will give civil defense volunteers the detailed knowledge and skills to carry out their especially assigned jobs, including specialized health service courses against atomic, biological and chemical warfare. The American Red Cross, officials of the public health service and other organizations concerned with health services will conduct certain phases of specialized training such as first aid and nurses' aid training. Many medical officers of the military services, public health services, the veterans administration and other organizations have taken specialized courses in defenses against atomic warfare and these will be asked to assist in the program.

ALREADY, in the atomic warfare field, 148 physicians from 38 states have taken courses given by the atomic energy commission in cooperation with the national security resources board Similar courses for nurses have been started Other courses either federal, state or local, will be available for dentists, veterinarians and other professional and technical people working in health services. State health officials have taken courses in radiological monitoring which included many aspects of the civil defense program.

Similar training courses will be available for biological warfare against humans and animals, and chemical and biological warfare against crops. Courses in these subjects will have three prime aspects —detection, treatment of casualties, and methods of decontamination. Training will be available for nurses aids and home nurses, radiological monitors, auxiliary sanitary personnel and auxiliary laboratory workers.

For large segments of the general public, the major type of training will be in the category of first aid—what to do first in any of the fields of civil defense. The goal is 20,000,000 trained first-aiders in a 22-hour course which will also include training in special weapons defense and in procedures for treating minor illnesses in time of emergency when physicians will be over-burdened with casualties.

Every state will operate under a uniform system of organization, equipment and procedure. Establishment of control stations in strategic areas, of first aid stations and the implementation of all necessary ambulance, hospitalization, fire fighting equipment and a score of other defense mechanisms will be taught. It is estimated that approximately 35 per cent of surviving casualties in an atomic bomb burst would require transportation by litter to first-aid stations, hence the importance of first aid work. As an example, if there were 40,000 injured survivors, about 13,000 probably would have to be carried by litters. Another 27,000 would walk, or would be taken to first aid stations by other means. So the most important function is in first aid training, since even fire-fighters, rescue teams, police, engineering and other personnel, first to contact the injured, would be called upon for first aid to casualties.

So every individual should watch for announcement of establishment of regional training centers and schools for training volunteers. Don't wait, volunteer your services. In the meantime, thousands of pints of blood, both plasma and whole blood, must be obtained and stored. Here is a first and must duty which can be carried out now.

(The last of this series of civil defense articles will appear next week.)

Star Dust STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

HUMPHREY BOGART proudly boasts that some day his two-year-old son, Stephen, will be paying enormous income taxes. Bogart has made sure of that by setting up a trust fund for Stephen, into which will go the $5,000 weekly which the tough guy of the movies will receive for starring in the Ziv Company's transcribed radio series, "Bold Venture". When reminded that Stephen will have to contribute heavily toward the upkeep of Uncle Sam, Bogart retorts that he'll be able to afford it.

Margaret Sheridan, discovered five years ago by Howard Hawks, has been studying hard all this time in preparation for a picture career. She makes her debut as the feminine lead in Hawks' "The Thing", for RKO.

Thelma Ritter's first starring film, "The Mating Season", has a fine cast, good direction, and a familiar story. Miss Ritter was better as a supporting actress. Gene Tierney, John Lund and Miriam Hopkins are excellent.

THE FICTION CORNER

A DULL FELLOW

By Richard H. Wilkinson

"IT WAS PROBABLY suicide," I said, looking around the cabin.

"Why?" Capt. Rhodes asked.

I nodded toward the walls. At least a half dozen photographs of Arthur Kimball hung there.

3-Minute Fiction

"Any man," I remarked, "who was so vain as to take all those pictures of himself along to decorate his cabin on a two weeks' cruise, must have been vain about other things."

"You mean he'd probably suffered financial reverses or something, and was too proud to face the facts, so he shot himself?"

"That's about it," I nodded, pleased that the captain should give so much consideration to my theory. A very dull fellow this Capt. Rhodes.

The captain looked down at the lifeless body of Arthur Kimball. He had apparently been sitting at his desk, writing. There was a bullet wound in his temple. An automatic was clutched in the fingers of his right hand.

The captain looked at the pictures.

"I'm probably right, don't you think, Captain?" I said.

Captain Rhodes grunted. "No," he said, "I don't." He turned abruptly and went out.

Well, this only confirmed my ideas about the Captain's stupidity. To me the thing was dead open and shut.

The first mate, a tall, rugged individual named Brooks, told me to go to my quarters and stay there until I was called.

Capt. Rhodes was prepared. As I sprang I landed in the arms of one of his men.

IT WASN'T UNTIL evening that the mate summoned me. I followed him down the corridor to Arthur Kimball's cabin. Captain Rhodes was there and several other men in uniform, and a strange man and woman.

"That was a very logical theory you advanced," the captain said, looking at me. "But we've proven it to be dead wrong."

"Wrong?" I said.

"Mr. Kimball was murdered!"

I didn't say anything. The captain was not only a dull fellow, but now he was revealing a tendency toward dramatics.

"As soon," went on the captain, "as I decided that Mr. Kimball was murdered, I began to look for someone who knew him before he sailed. This wasn't as easy as it sounds. Kimball was traveling alone. Still, I figured that someone had engaged passage on the same boat with the idea of murdering him. That someone, I reasoned, would have taken a cabin as near to his as possible. So we began inquiring into the careers of all the cabin occupants along this corridor. The only two people whom we discovered who might have known Kimball are Mr. and Mrs. John Cole, these people here." The captain glanced toward the strange couple.

"But," he continued, "they have conclusively proven that they were in the main salon at the time the murder was committed."

"How did they know when the murder was committed?" I asked importantly.

"I told them," Capt. Rhodes said.

"So I continued my hunt, and presently I discovered there was only one other person on board who knew Kimball. I discovered that this man had suffered financial losses through Kimball's activities.

"And who?" I asked quietly, "is this man?"

"You," said Capt. Rhodes.

It was a remote possibility, and I had not believed it would occur, but nevertheless I was prepared

Capt. Rhodes was prepared too. That's why the uniformed men were present. One of them had sidled in behind me, and as I sprang I landed in his arms.

The captain grunted. "If," he remarked dryly, "you ever have occasion to plan another murder, consider the details." He pointed to one of the pictures of Arthur Kimball. It was the picture in which Kimball was seated at his desk writing. "Note," said the captain, "that Mr. Kimball is holding his pen in his left hand, as he is the riding crop and polo mallet in the other pictures. He must have been left handed, yet you placed the murder gun in his right hand."

A dull fellow, the captain.

Publicity of Punishment Will Halt Delinquency

By Wright A. Patterson

YOUTH DELINQUENCY is growing and spreading rather than abating. In the cities, considerable sections are over run with youth gangs who terrorize the public by committing many depredations, up to and including murder. But youthful delinquency and the organization and operation of gangs is no longer only a city problem. It has spread to the towns and villages.

My home town is a rural community. In it, the automobile owners over a considerable period suffered the loss of auto parts, spare tires, hub caps, hood caps and other things of value that could be easily detached. Those thefts were traced to a gang of 12 high school boys, and the police of the county arrested them. Though some of them admitted the thefts, none was locked up to await trial. Instead the names and addresses of the boys were taken, and also the names of their parents. They were given instructions to appear at the juvenile court, accompanied by their parents, the following day.

The boys and their parents were present, and the police presented convincing evidence to which no rebuttal was offered. After sentencing each of the boys to one year in prison, the court listened to a plea for clemency made by the parents. The judge suspended the sentences, placing each boy under the parole of his parents for the one year period, with the provision the boy must continue to attend school until graduation and must not be allowed outside of the home after six o'clock each evening, for the one year period, with the provision that any violation of that parole would be construed by the court as making the parents an accessary before the fact, subjecting the parents to conviction and sentence under such a charge.

The liberal publicizing of that case, including names and addresses of the 12 boys, and the sentence of the court caused both the boys and their parents to be ostracized in school and in the community, but failure to attend school meant going to prison. That was a wise decision on the part of that judge. It not only put the fear of the law into those 12 boys and their parents, but it had similar effect on other boys with criminal and gang tendencies and on their parents. The one lesson has gone a long ways toward curing youth delinquency in my home town. It would not have been effective without the publicity given by the newspapers.

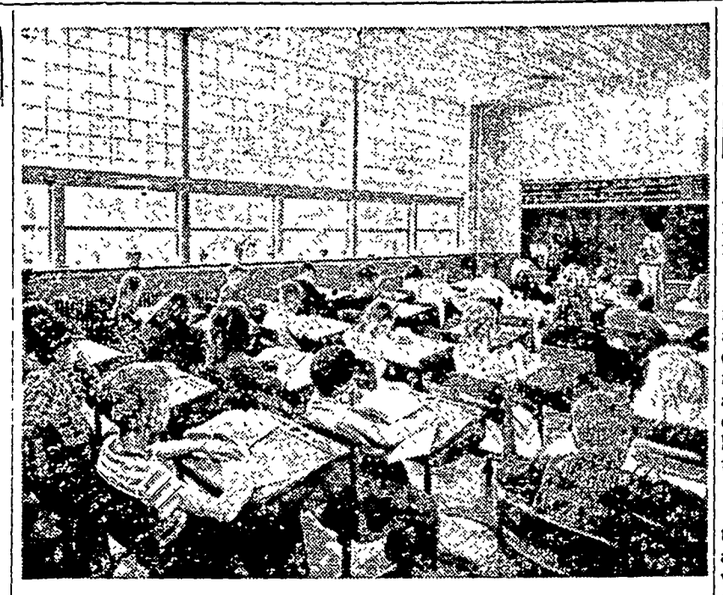
A committee of the senate that keeps its eye on the expenditures of the operations of the federal government, asked the 26 departments and agencies for the effect of the legislation that activated the recommendations of the Hoover commission. Of the 26 departments and agencies which received that request, 25 complied.

Each of the 25 reported increased efficiency, better service for the people, and, in practically all cases, a reduced cost of operation, ranging from a few thousands into the millions.

The one not reporting was that of defense, General Marshall merely acknowledging receipt of the request from Senator John L. McClellan, chairman of the committee. But he gave no estimate of actual or expected savings, though it was expected the legislation would reduce the cost of operation in his department by from three to four billion dollars a year.

The committee is instituting an investigation of the department of defense to determine for itself what result has been accomplished. It has full authority to make such an investigation, General Marshall has seemingly resented any interference on the part of congress with the operations of his department and has shown no interest in a reduction in cost.

He has on his department payrolls a larger army of employees than the number of men fighting in Korea. The Senate investigation may cost his department an appropriation to pay that army of civilians. It would do a welcome job if it did. Senator McClellan, Democrat of Arkansas, is a real fighter for economies. General Marshall will discover that congress, including the senate, is top brass in the armed services.



This classroom, typical of those in many new rural schools, is flooded with glareless daylight—even in remote corners. Walls and furniture are in gay pastel colors, desks are light natural wood tones, and even chalkboards are eye-comforting green instead of somber black.

RURAL SCHOOLS

All-Purpose Rooms in New Rural Schools Win Community Favor

(This is the second of two articles on the rural school plant which is undergoing radical changes in many sections of the country. The first article appeared last week.)

In the Grand Junction, Colorado, school discussed in last week's article primary grades have their own toilet rooms and outside exits to play areas; the lunchroom and kitchen are linked to the large general-purpose room to provide better service for special parties and after-school functions; oversized classrooms are flooded with glareless daylight, gay and cheerful in colors which reflect light, not absorb it.

Although more complex, the two-story Moffat county high school at Craig resembles the other smaller "new look" schools in the area. But it's the chance to get college-accredited high school courses that really excites the students.

Previously these courses were offered in a number of small unaccredited schools sprinkled over the county where distances are great and population (a little better than 5,000) sparse. Now school buses serve a 35-mile perimeter, other students living further out must be driven to school or board in town.

Fully equipped with up-to-date laboratories, home economics rooms, shops, library, gymnasium and auditorium with a full-fledged stage, this new high school is not only the pride of rural Moffat county but the envy of a number of city schoolmen who have gone to Craig to see it.

Multi-Purpose Rooms

Equally important, however, is the new community spirit that has sprung up as the result of these modern county schools.

Architects, mindful of the community use of the rural school, are equipping these new buildings with multi-purpose rooms— versatile units that can play more roles than a quick-change artist.

As a result, these schools, serving children by day and adults by night, are the busiest spots in the community.

The multi-purpose room, a comparatively new idea in school design, may serve as assembly hall in the morning, a lunchroom at noon, a basketball court in the afternoon and anything from a club room or banquet hall to dance pavilion or little theater after dark.

Storage space under a stage holds folding spectator chairs; sometimes even the stage folds out of the way. So do sports bleachers, telescoping wonders that move in or out of unobtrusive sidewall platforms.

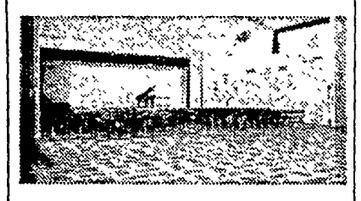
In many of these rooms, fully-equipped kitchens are concealed behind folding partitions; lunch tables and benches swing up flat against walls; and basketball backboards jackknife out of sight when the room converts from sports to social functions.

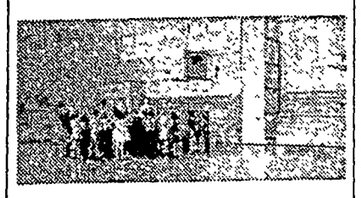
At Grand Junction, for instance, the usual school stage facilities have whetted interest in dramatics. A little theater group presents regular "Broadway" production—when the multi-purpose room isn't being used by parent-teacher groups, boy scouts, girl scouts, and other clubs and organizations.

Sport Area Provided

At Craig, the new Moffat county high school auditorium and gymnasium is pretty solidly booked. The auditorium with its fully-equipped stage offers the only community-owned place where an "artist" series—principally concert—may be conducted.

The sports equipment of these multi-purpose rooms also prove invaluable in Colorado for intramural basketball competition on the elementary school level as well as for other teams. This one feature alone plays an important part in promoting neighborliness between communities previously comparative strangers.





The two pictures above are general views of the all-purpose room and gymnasium in a new school at Boardman, Ohio. The gym offers basketball backboards and spectator bleachers that can be telescoped out of the way, a folding partition, electrically operated, divides the floor for separate classes or meetings. The auditorium adjoins a kitchen to permit it to double as a dining room; table and benches jackknife against the wall when meals are over; chairs are stacked on hand trucks for storage. In smaller schools all of these features frequently are incorporated into a single room.

Wherever possible, cafeteria facilities have been placed adjacent to the general purpose area to increase the usefulness of this community unit. In most instances, these cafeterias have been planned to provide for smaller community groups, some even offering small platforms.

Glass block is used to advantage in these multi-purpose rooms—as well as in classrooms of the "new look" rural schools. Ample daylight for all activities during school hours is provided by large panels generally installed high on the rear and side walls.

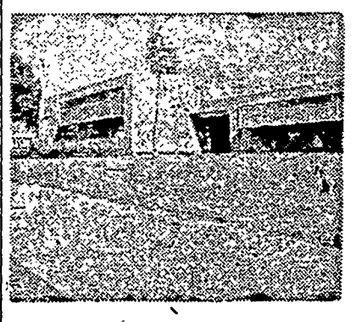
In addition to their daylight function, these attractive panels of glass block also chalk up important savings in maintenance. Set in mortar, glass block panels are easy to clean (a washdown with a hose is sufficient), never need repainting, seldom require attention.

They can also withstand hard blows from basketballs and softballs, thus eliminating the need for wire guards and other expensive protective devices.

Being hollow with a partial vacuum trapped inside, these glass blocks have the insulating equivalent of an eight-inch brick wall —a feature which many school boards have credited with substantial savings in annual fuel bills.

Thus, because of their simplified design, these "new look" rural schools are generally fireproof, offer better corridor safety through lack of stairs, are easier to heat or keep cool, and cheaper to build and maintain.

And of equal importance is the attitude of school children—and of teachers, too—toward their new fresh surroundings. In a great many cases this changed atmosphere has resulted in distinct improvements in scholastic achievement—in some instances among classes that had run a constant low average in old drab classroom surroundings.



Here's the school that became a model for 15 new ones in rural Colorado. It's the Orchard Avenue school in Grand Junction, Mesa county, and was designed to include the best features of a famous experimental school in Austin, Texas.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Stubborn caps on nail polish bottles can usually be dealt with if you run hot water over the cap for a few minutes.

To prevent bedroom curtains from getting dirty and blown around when you open the windows before retiring of a winter's night, fold them out of the way and secure them with pinch-type clothespins The pins can be hidden on the windowsill back of the curtains during the day.

One of the most worrisome things about traveling is riding along in the train wondering whether the stopper has come out of the perfume bottle in your suitcase. You can find other things to worry about instead, though, if you seal the bottle with nail polish by smearing it around the stopper and bottleneck Candle wax will accomplish the same purpose, but nail polish looks better especially if it's colorless. Then, too, you can remove it easily with polish remover at your destination, and you usually have some polish along with you to seal the perfume bottle up again for the return trip

Who Can Equal the Older Stars?

By GRANTLAND RICE

TIME MARCHES ALONG to a rataplan of knocks and raps. The loud noises and the squawks usually come from a group of gray-haired veterans panning the present generation. It may be a group of old-time ballplayers attacking the mediocrity of the present-day crop. It may come from a bunch of old-time golfers or old-time fighters giving the world proof that those hanging around today are largely bums. The same is true of football where the platoon system has been composed of half-players, according to the veterans of older wars. Those who can run or pass can't block or tackle and those who can tackle can't run or pass.

Grantland Rice

Only recently Ty Cobb and Rogers Hornsby, baseball's two greatest hitters — Cobb, the greatest—Hornsby, the game's greatest righthand hitter—decided there were no modern players who belonged among the first 20 of other years.

I don't believe this will quite stand up. I'd say an outfield composed of Musial, DiMaggio and Williams would have been awarded many sprigs of laurel or olive over 20 or 30 or 40 years ago. This trio would have been a great outfield back in the peak years of Cobb and Ruth

One main trouble which arises in all comparisons is the change that has come to all games. For example, baseball has changed in many ways since the days of Cobb, Ruth and Hornsby. Or in the big days of Honus Wagner. Those were the days of the dead or much deader ball—the days of the steal—not the days of the home run. Speed and quickness ruled over sheer power. Nine home runs would lead a league in one season. But it would take 70 or 80 or 90 stolen bases to lead a league. Baseball from 1900 to 1920 was an entirely different game from baseball in 1920 on to 1950.

A big part of the game's old science had given way to the home-run hitters

Same Everywhere

Football is also an entirely different game from what it used to be. The first big change came in with the forward pass in 1906 The pass began to dominate the attack around 1915 Now it is a big part of football. The two platoon system changed football completely The game of 1900—even the game of 1920—had passed out. Football is no longer a team game. It is practically one college meeting another college

Today you have 30 or 40 men on each side throwing from 30 to 40 passes. So again how can you compare old time football stars with the modern bunch, who either never make a tackle or else never run with the ball?

It might be well for all concerned to remember this—in the words of Bernard Gimbel—"In every sport that can be measured or timed records are improving year by year. The game is getting better and better."

Every sport should be well advanced today over bygone yesterdays. There are many more players. These players are getting better bulk training and smarter coaching in general

There is no Cobb or Ruth around today and we'll likely never have another pair like this But there have been some pretty fair ballplayers—Musial, Williams, DiMaggio, Rizzuto, Slaughter, Reese, Robinson, Terry Moore, Johnny Mize, Marty Marion, Yogi Berra, etc

Bill Dickey ranks Berra up with the best catchers he ever saw and Arkansas Bill knows about all there is to know about catching

When it comes to comparisons, old and modern play are entirely too far apart to start any definite ranking.

The Case of the Cubs

Just across some 18 or 20 miles of water beyond Los Angeles there is a very beautiful island Its name is Catalina—the training spot for owner Wrigley's Chicago Cubs

On this island with its hills and ravines you can go wild goat hunting, quail shooting or play golf. Or you can watch Frank Frisch and his Cubs getting ready to keep out of last place, if possible.

It is generally understood that Branch Rickey has no idea of permitting the Pirates to linger much longer around the cramped confines of the cellar. Smart baseball men are betting he will have his Pirates in the first division in two years But the Cubs, in spite of Frank Frisch's driving ability, don't seem to be going anywhere in the general direction of any higher plateau.

But the Cubs have the most comfortable and best-kept park in either big league and so big crowds wander out to the West Side

Frank Frisch is a first class manager and a terrific worker but for some odd reason it takes good ballplayers to win ball games, of which the Cubs have only a few.

Last season the Cubs broke briskly from the barrier and acted for a few rounds like a first division outfit. But not for long. Mr. Frisch was a worn and weary leader when he returned to his flower beds in New Rochelle at the season's end

NOT GREEDY

The quiet little freshman coed from the country was on her first college date, and thrilled beyond words. She didn't want to appear countryfied. She had put on her prettiest dress, gotten a sophisticated hair-do, and was all prepared to talk understandingly about music, art or politics.

Her hero took her to a movie and then to the favorite college cafe.

"Two sodas," he told the waiter.

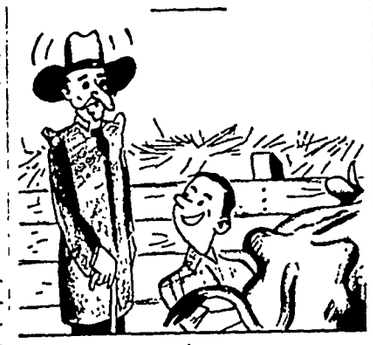
She, not to be outdone, murmured: "The same for me."

Thanks for the Warning

Lady of House, to new waitress appearing on duty bedecked with jewelry: "We are having guests tonight, Martha, and I think it would be better if you didn't wear any jewelry."

Martha: "Oh, tank you, madam, for warning me. I'll take it off immediately."

BY-PRODUCTS



The wealthy gentleman farmer, on a visit to one of his dairies, questioned a hired hand who was doing the milking: "How much do you get from this cow?"

"Eight gallons at a milking," the young man replied.

"Good Lord!" retorted the farm owner, "what do you do with the cow when you're finished? Take her hide and toss it in the pasture?"

Drat Those Neighbors

"But, darling, we seem always to be short of money," the hard-working husband complained. "Why is it? Why?"

"It's the neighbors," the little woman explained. "They're just always doing something we can't afford."

LINE UP!

The other day one of the fellows in this house received a letter that went something like this:

Dear Mr. Morchower:

I am engaged and I have recently discovered that you were out necking with my girl the other night.

If you will drop down to my fraternity house tomorrow at 11:00 P.M., I would like to discuss this matter with you.

Robert J. Smith

Immediately the answer came back:

Dear Mr. Smith:

I have received your circular form letter and I will be glad to attend your meeting tomorrow.

T. V. Morchower

NO DELAY

Then there's the one about the wealthy, retired businessman who, nearing a ripe old age, invited his six married sons to a Sunday dinner. As they sat down at the table, he said he had not made any arrangements for his will owing to his disappointment that he was not yet a grandfather. As a bonus, he said he would give $10,000 to the first son that presented him with a grandchild. When he lifted his head from saying grace, he noticed that the only one left was he, they all had gone . . .

Can't Avoid It

Down south, a colored man with a badly slashed face entered a doctor's office.

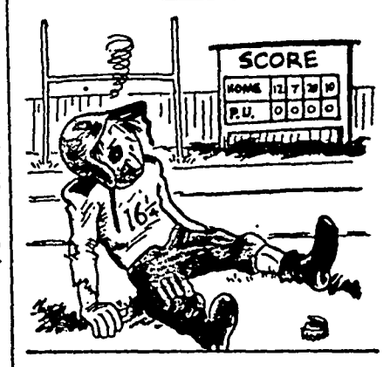
"Hello, Tom," the doctor greeted him. "Got cut up again?"

"Yassuh, I done got carved with a razor."

"Why don't you keep out of bad company, Tom?"

"I'd like to Doc, but I ain't got enough money to get me a divorce."

WHAT'S THAT AGAIN?



Coach Ironsides' team had experienced a disastrous season. After a 49-to-0 shellacking in the ninth game of a ten-game schedule he called his behemoths into a skull session.

Striving for self-control, Ironsides began, "Now, for this last game, we're going to forget all the fancy plays I've tried to teach you. We're going to go back to the very fundamentals of the game."

His voice dripping sarcasm, Ironsides raised a ball over his head and said "Lesson number one—this is a football. Now, lesson number . . .

A beefy guard in the back row jumped up and yelled, "Hey, coach. Not so fast."

A Stinker

Two men had just left a theater, and judging from their expressions, the picture must have been a poor one. "It certainly is wonderful how the movies have progressed," said the first.

"How do you mean?" asked the second.

"Well, first there were silent pictures, then came the talkies, and now this one smells!"

Wide Awake Worker

Boss: "How come you're only carrying one sack, when the other men are carrying two?"

Workman: "Well, I suppose they're too lazy to make two trips, the way I do."

DON'T INTERRUPT

The young bride had just taken her first driving lesson and was telling a friend about it. "My husband went along wit me," she said, "and, oh, did we have a frightful time! I stalled the car right on a railroad crossing and there was a train coming . . ."

"My dear," the husband interrupted, "there was no train coming."

With a frigid look in his direction, the bride answered, "There was a train coming sometime," and went on with her story.

CATTLE LICE CUT DOWN MILK, BEEF PRODUCTION

Large losses in the amount of milk and beef produced on Iowa farms can be accounted for by cattle lice. These pests can cause cattle to become irritated and restless with a resulting drop in production on the part of dairy cattle and slower gains for beef cattle.

Earle Raun, extension entomologist at Iowa State College, says lice-infested cattle will rub along fences, feed bunks and buildings in an effort to relieve irritation. Their hair coats become rough and the cattle are weakened and made susceptible to disease. Mature cattle can be killed from heavy infestations.

The entomologist says lice can be controlled with DDT. He recommends using the 50 percent wettable powder type at the rate of 8 pounds in 100 gallons of water to which 2 pounds of wetting agent has been added One application will give complete control in most cases if it is applied to all parts of the body.

Rotenone can also be used effectively against lice. This can be applied in the spray or dust forms. Two applications, 16 to 18 days apart, are necessary for effective control.

BLUE GEESE DUE ON MISSOURI RIVER

One of the most spectacular concentrations of birds in the United States is the annual flight of blue and snow geese along the Missouri River bottoms. Each year the first big flock of these magnificent birds reaches Iowa about March 1st. The first flocks stop in the bottoms near Hamburg, Iowa, and for several days their numbers are increased by birds from the southern wintering grounds. The peak of the flight is reached about the 15th of March, at which time 500,000 birds may be found in an area of a few miles. In the heaviest concentrations flocks often total as many as 100,000 individuals. The birds spend two to four weeks in the broad, flat fields of the Missouri bottoms and grow fat on waste corn before moving on through Canada to their nesting grounds immediately below the Artic Circle.

In recent years illegal shooting has not been a serious problem, and thousands of Iowans visit the bottom areas to see and photograph this spectacular concentration. Locations of the main concentrations may be secured on a day to day basis from the State Conservation Commission offices.

During the past few years the blue goose, which was originally a non-stop migrant in the fall, has been stopping in large number during the open hunting season, and as a result has become an important addition to the Iowa hunter's game bag.

Services Held Wednesday For Former Klemme Man

TOM C. NELSON, 68, DIED ON MARCH 16 0F HEART ATTACK

Services Held At The Garner Methodist Church, Burial At Klemme

T. C. Nelson, 68, prominent resident of this vicinity for many years, died Sunday at Mercy hospital, Mason City, after a brief illness, and last rites were held Wednesday in the Garner Methodist Church.

Officiating at the services was the Rev. S. W. Cunningham and the Rev. A. W. Gauger of Mason City, former pastor of the Klemme Methodist Church to which Mr. Nelson belonged for many years.

Two hymns were sung by a quartet of Clair Tompkins, Wayne Lawhorn, James Gatchel and Dean Tompkins. Miss Barbara Jean Rankin was at the organ.

Pallbearers were Orville Maben, Clint Daniels, Harry Ruka, A. B. Coope, A. E. Boman and E. I. Brooker. Burial was in Calvary cemetery, Klemme. The Bohn funeral home was in charge of arrangements.

Thomas Christian Nelson was born August 29, 1882 at Britt. At an early age, he moved with his parents to a farm north of Garner and later to a farm east of Klemme where he grew to manhood.

He was married to Edith Webner February 23, 1903. They farmed near Klemme for almost 40 years. Upon retiring from the farm in 1943, they moved to Garner where Mr. Nelson made his home until his death.

During the last few years, Mr. Nelson has been president of the Farmers Mutual Insurance company. He has also worked for the soil conservation committee the last three years.

He served his community, also as school director and township trustee in Avery township for many years. The various drives for community causes would find him active in their behalf. He was an active member of Farm Bureau.

During his young adult years, Mr. Nelson was converted to the Christian religion and has been a devoted member of the Methodist Church since. In the Klemme Church, he served many years as Sunday School superintendent and on the board of stewards and trustees. He was active on the committe for building the Klemme Church edifice.

Soon after his membership was transferred to the Garner Church, he became active in various responsibilities, including that of Lay Leader of the church.

Mr. Nelson is survived by his wife; two sons—Verner of Klemme and Harvey of Sioux City; four grandchildren; one brother, Andrew of Rockwell; three half-brothers Ralph Nelson of Thompson, Jay Nelson of Yankton, S. D., and Fred Nelson of Ponta Gorda, Fla.

BIRTHDAY PARTY HELD FOR JIMMIE CLEMENT'S 7TH BIRTHDAY

Patent Granted To Henry Ward On Power Unit

Saturday Henry Ward received a certificate from the U. S. Patient Office informing him that his power transmission unit for use on a tractor power take-off was now fully covered by U. S. Patents.

Mr. Ward and Elmer Langlitz have already manufactured and sold a number of the units. They have a lot of orders ahead and are working on the machine every day.

Mary Circle Met Thursday

The Mary Circle met Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Pringnitz. There were 15 members, 2 guests and 1 child present. Mrs. Otto Lemke gave an interesting lesson and the devotions.

After the meeting a delicious lunch was served by Mrs. Pringnitz with Mrs. Jake Hess as cohostess.

Happy Birthday
DRIVERS LICENSE
HAVE YOU— FORGOTTEN SOMETHING? OUCH-MY DRIVERS LICENSE!
EVERY 2 YEARS YOU MUST Renew it... IN THE 30 DAYS BEFORE your BIRTHDAY!

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

When you forget your wife's birthday, you're in trouble aplenty at home.

But when you forget your own birthday, you may be in trouble with the law—if you have failed to renew your Iowa driver's license within the previous 30 days.

Your Iowa Safety Congress reminds you:

Under the "birthday license law," your driver's license expires on your birthday in the second year after the date of issuance.

Under the regulations of the State Department of Public Safety, you are asked to renew your license within the 30 day period before (not after) your birthday.

So, no matter how happy an anniversary you have, you may run into unhappiness afterward if your driver's license has lapsed. And it's up to you to remember.

MOTHER-DAUGHTER BANQUET APRIL 13TH

The Naomi Circle of the Methodist W.S.C.S. is going to sponsor a mother-daughter banquet to be held in the church dining room Friday, April 13 at 6:30.

The tickets are on sale at $1.00 a plate. Every mother and daughter, women and girl in the community is invited to attend. If you have no daughter borrow one for the occasion. Tickets are being sold by the members of the Naomi Circle. If you are not contacted in the next couple of weeks and wish to attend call or get in contact with one of the Circle members or if you do not know who the Circle members are call Mrs. D. P. Anderson or Mrs. Nova Stokesbary.

Plan to attend the Mother-Daughter banquet and bring your daughter or daughters.

LEGION OBSERVED 32ND ANNIVERSARY TUES.

The Klemme American Legion and Auxiliary observed the 32nd anniversary of the founding of the American Legion at a supper held at the Grade School dining room last Tuesday evening attended by 40 persons.

A nice supper was enjoyed by all and a special birthday cake, baked and decorated for the occasion, served as a centerpiece.

Lester Stille gave a very interesting talk on the history of the American Legion, how it was organized and how it functions, and how it has grown.

Naomi Circle Met At Neuberger Home

The Naomi Circle of the Methodist W.S.C.S. met at the home of Mrs. Lewis Neuberger. Mrs. Clarence Lemke was cohostess. There were 12 members, 1 visitor and 2 children present. Mrs. Dave Schwichtenberg was in charge of the devotions and lesson.

Most of the afternoon was spent in preparation for the Mother-Daughter banquet our Circle will sponsor Friday, April 13th.

After the meeting a delicious lunch was served by the hostesses.

SECOND BLIZZARD STRUCK IOWA AGAIN FRIDAY BLOCKING ROADS

That was an awfully short spring last week when the sun came out and Thursday looked like spring and a lot of snow melted, but not for long.

Friday all furry cut loose again as a blizzard moved back into Iowa and again blocked highways with high banks of snow. However, Saturday the wind had died down and snow plows again went to work Friday night and all day Saturday clearing out drifts so that by Sunday all highways were again open.

Perhaps spring is now on its way in Iowa.

Local Farmer

FRIEDOW FEATURED IN NATIONAL MAGAZINE

O. W. Friedow, farmer seven miles northwest of Klemme, is among a group of midwest rural people featured in an article in the April issue of Capper's Farmer on making home movies.

"Homemade movies have contributed to the success of Friedow as a producer of purebred Poland China hogs," says a story in the nationally-circulated farm magazine. "He continually takes movies of his hogs and the films are shown to prospective buyers who come as far away as Texas and Washington for his two annual sales.

He also shows these films to groups of prospective buyers as he travels about the state.

"The collection of films also includes many shots about the farms and picture stories of vacation trips the Friedows have made. They hold movie shows at their home and frequently use their projector to present inspirational and entertainment films at church meetings."

Youth Fellowship Had Sunrise Breakfast At Methodist Church Sunday

The Youth Fellowship Class of the Klemme Methodist church sponsored a sunrise breakfast Easter Sunday which was attended by nearly 70 high school students. A good program and service was also enjoyed by the young people.

The following ladies made hot muffins and served the breakfast: Mrs. Claude White, Miss Marie Blank, Mrs. D. P. Anderson, Mrs. Leonard Swanson, Mrs. Roy Schaefer and Mrs. Roy Jacobs.

Mrs. Jorgenson Entertained Club

The U-Delt-Em Bridge Club met at the home of Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Edna Thada won the high prize, Mrs. Ed. Jacobs, low and Mrs. George Lawhorn, second high.

A nice lunch was sered by the hostess.

HANCOCK FARM BUREAU PAID $5,337.00 IN 1950 FOR EXTENSION-EDUCATION

The Hancock County Farm Bureau paid $5,337.00 in 1950 to help defray the costs of extension-education program in the county, according to an announcement made this week by Hancock County Farm Bureau president, Gilbert Guenther.

This amount, paid out of Farm Bureau funds for educational purposes, was in addition to the money used by the Hancock County Farm Bureau for membership and legislative work.

"The amount contributed by Farm Bureau to the extension program was much more than the amount appropriated from county treasurery for extension program, "Mr. Guenther said.

Mr. Guenther also pointed out that the county appropriation of $3000 in Hancock County amounted to only about two tenths of one cent for each dollar paid in local taxes. The total money used for extension education work in the county amounted to only about eight tenths of a cent per acre.

"That's pretty cheap, "Mr. Guenther said, "When you stop to consider that 500 4-H boys and girls were enrolled last year in this county, and that 1,086 farm families were reached with the farm family-living program.

"In addition to this work, there were 850 farms in the county on which changes in farming practices were adopted as a result of the extension program in agriculture and home economics," he said.

Mr. Guenther reported that a total of 436 volunteer workers donated their time and effort to helping with the extension program in Hancock County last year.

"The extension program has always been available to every family in the county. It is not limited to members of our organization," Mr. Guenther has added.

STATE DAIRYMEN COMMEND LEGISLATURE FOR ACTION

The Iowa legislature acted wisely for the best interest of the state's agriculture.

Expression the appreciation of Iowa dairy farmers for enactment of the new "butterfat set-aside" law, Scott Ellis, Dallas Center dairy farmer and president of the Iowa State Dairy Association, added: "Agriculture is the mainspring of American economy and dairying is the balance wheel of agriculture. It is vital that Iowa dairying be encouraged."

Bill No. 79, calling for a set-aside of a penny a pound on all butterfat sold in Iowa during the months of May and June, passed both houses with a large majority. Proceeds of this set-aside will be used to help finance an expanded program of product promotion and public understading within the state and nationally.

"The Iowa dairy farmer realizes that it takes money to make money and believes in taxing himself to promote his own business," Ellis explained. "This is Iowa's part in a nation-wide program of self-help through the business-building, advertising and merchandising activities of the American Dairy Association and the Iowa Dairy Industry Commission.

Iowa dairymen started the ADA program 11 years ago. It is now supported by dairy farmers in 40 states. Previously, Iowa has operated under a 15-day butterfat set-aside plan. The new increase to 60 days is in line with what many other states across the nation are doing this year, Ellis declared.

Senior Enjoyed Party

The Senior Class enjoyed a party given by Joan Hummel at her home following rehearsal last Wednesday evening. Mrs. Hummel and daughters, Joan and Janice served a nice lunch after which all enjoyed watching the television program.

180 DAYS OF SCHOOL REQUIRED TO RECEIVE FULL STATE AID

During the bad weather this winter we have missed several days of school. I feel that many people have a misunderstanding in regard to the number of days a school must be in session each year. Therefore, I felt that through this article we might be able to get a better understanding.

The State Department of Public Instruction recommends that every school maintain 180 teaching days each school year. Since the Department has no way of forcing schools to teach the 180 days they have set up the general state aid on basis of the number of days school is actually in session. If the School District has less than the full number they will get less state aid. Every day lost means less money.

The local board feels that we should run the full 180 days and take advantage of as much state aid as possible. We are asking for your cooperation in helping us make up these lost days and hope that it will meet with your approval.

Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson has been appointed Chairman for the Cancer Fund Drive for Klemme, to be put on in Hancock County during April.

Today, Wednesday, Mrs. Jorgenson, accompanied by the Klemme workers: Mrs. Lester Stille, Mrs. Martin Barz, Mrs. Benn Coobs and Mrs. Wm. Fuss drove to Britt to attend a noon luncheon at the Methodist church and to obtain their instructions and supplies.

Dinner And Bridge Party

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson entertained to dinner Friday evening: Mr. and Mrs. George Lawhorn, Mr. and Mrs . A. H. Dulmes, Mr. and Mrs. Art Kudje, Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Harson and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Fuss, and Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Waterman.

Bridge was played after dinner. Mr. and Mrs. Lawhorn won high couple prize, Mrs. C. G. Waterman was high for ladies and Mr. Harson was high for men. Mrs. Harson won the travel prize.

FOUR NEW COUNCILMEN NAMED TO KLEMME TOWN BOARD

Allen Barz, Town Treasurer, Also New Town Official

173 people went to the polls Monday to name a Mayor and other officials for the Klemme town board. Roy Schaefer is the only former Councilman on the Board and V. A. Cook is the new Mayor of Klemme.

For Mayor, V. A. Cook received 90 votes and W. F. Pavey polled 73 votes for the same office.

The Council elected were Martin Barz with 129 votes to lead the race; Frank Schulz was next with 128 votes; Fred J. Arnold was third with 117 votes; Roy Schaefer, incumbent, received 105 votes and Henry Buseman received an even 100 votes. The above men will be on the Klemme Council for the next 2 years.

Unsuccessful candidates for Councilmen were Cliff Montgomery who polled 87 votes, and D. P. Anderson with 73 votes.

Allen Barz, who was unopposed for Treasurer, received 126 votes.

Will Organize

The new Town Board will hold their organization meeting at the Council rooms at the Grade School Building beginning at noon next Monday, April 2, when they will take their oath of office.

Larger Vote Expected

It was generally expected that at least 250 votes would be cast at this election. Due to the sloppy condition of the streets and so much melting snow making walking difficult, it cut down on the number of votes usually cast at a Town Election.

Easter Music

CHORUSES GAVE EASTER CONCERTS IN BOTH CHURCHES SUNDAY

There was special Easter music at both the Klemme Methodist and the Klemme Evangelical and Reformed Churches Sunday evening. At the Reformed Church the three groups: The Women's Chorus directed by Mrs. William Reinhart, The Men's Chorus, directed by Raymond Barz and the Junior Choir, directed by Mrs. Ernest Gerardi, all appeared in several numbers. Accompanists at the organ were Mrs. Gerardi and Miss Beulah Goll.

At the Klemme Methodist Church a mixed chorus directed by Mrs. Wesley Patterson sang an Easter cantata. Maurice Jacobs accompanied at the piano and also played a special number on the organ.

Both concerts were well attended.

NINE YOUNG PEOPLE IN THE REFORMED CONFIRMATION CLASS

Nine young people were confirmed and received into membership on Easter Sunday morning at the Klemme Evangelical and Reformed Church. They were:

Richard Baack, Lois Christians, Delbert Etchen, Norman Henschen, Lois Jacobs, Leroy Josten, Ronald Karsjens, Bonnie Mau and Roger Terhufen.

Seven people were received into membership by adult confirmation and five by letter of transfer.

Grid Manpower Problem Likely

By GRANTLAND RICE

WITH SPRING FOOTBALL training getting under way, western and southern football coaches have already selected their candidates for top honors next fall The answer is Army and Navy.

Grantland Rice

"I've kept fairly close track of the situation," one western coach said. "Every team in the Far West has already lost valuable material for 1951. We have already lost two star freshmen from last fall and two very good sophomores. The others have lost about the same number. But Army and Navy will lose no men to the draft. Both finished the 1950 season with fine material left for 1951. Army has a lot of fine backs, including Blaik and Pollard. Navy ended her season with all the material any team needs. This was potentially a good Navy squad all fall. It simply never got together until the Army game. On that day it was probably the strongest team in the country. It will be even stronger next fall.

"Now take the draft situation. Full pressure hasn't even started yet. It is just beginning. It will land with a heavy thud by May and June. Many collegians won't be called before June. They will be given the chance to finish their year's work. At least many will After that I'm afraid it will be just too bad for a lot of us Unless we have war with Russia, we'll have football next fall. There will be good football men in the R.O.T.C. who may not be taken. But I doubt that we will have many 4-F's

"It will be a little rougher than it was in World War II. The call on those from 18 or 19 to 21, 22, or 23 will take many an athlete. How many, no one knows." Southern coaches we ran across had about the same slant.

"In the Southwest," one coach said, "Texas A. and M. will have the best chance. Texas A. and M. is practically a military college. These men will be given the chance to complete their military training. A fellow like Bob Smith, a great back, will have a terrific year.

"Spring practice will go along just about the same. But the big gaps will open in May and June, on through the summer. By next September the draft losses and the enlistments will be heavy for everybody except Army and Navy."

What about the Future?

In World War II it was the Navy that saved college football The Navy and Captain Tom Hamilton's Preflight teams Army made no move in football's direction, although Army's West Point team led the pack.

Any number of college stars moved into the two academies and more than a few moved out again before the war was over. Navy especially lost a big portion of her earlier talent. For a while such teams as Notre Dame and Michigan received big help from Navy allotments. But when it came to the stretch only Army and Navy had the talent. Army, for example, crushed Notre Dame by such scores as 59 to 0 and 48 to 0, if we happen to recall the correct figures Any way, Notre Dame took a bad beating from Army

Through this war period Duke, Georgia Tech, Alabama, Tulsa, Oregon, Southern California, Villanova and a few others had pretty fair squads.

But the general average of 4-F's and kids didn't add up too strongly. Michigan had a good team, even after losing Bill Daley, a former Minnesota star back. Pennsylvania did well, especially after Minisi's return.

Will Navy look after college football again? Will Army pitch in to help? Or will any such help be needed?

For example, George Munger's Pennsylvania team had arranged a rugged schedule for 1951, including Notre Dame and California Pennsylvania had a good-looking squad in action last fall with a better one all set for this next season. No one knows what will happen by next fall.

Princeton and Cornell seemed to have the best Ivy League material for the 1951 campaign, but once again this will be a guess.

Ray Robinson's Place

Ray Robinson's victory over Jake LaMotta has already started a new debate on his place in ring ranking This means the all-time spot the new middleweight champion should draw in fistic ratings

Wearing two crowns on his head at the same moment in two of the tougher divisions is only part of the story. Robinson has been forced to shed one title, the welterweight top piece, but he is still the best welterweight there is.

The LaMotta affair should lift the present middleweight king still higher among those now tossing leather back and forth. But there is an even bigger argument at hand. How would you rank Robinson with Harry Greb, Stanley Ketchel, Mickey Walker, Tiger Flowers, Marcel Cerdan and Tony Zale—to mention only a few in the middleweight picture?

KATHLEEN NORRIS

Family Burden

"FROM THE TIME I was married 22 years ago," writes a Massachusetts woman, "I have had the care of one helpless member of the family after another. First it was my husband's dear old grandmother, who lived with us, and while she was bright and independent and we all loved her, she could not assume responsibility for anything.

"After some years of that, my own beloved father and mother moved in when they came back from long residence in the Orient, and after Dad suddenly died, Mother settled down here for the remaining years of her life. She was a semi-invalid, bright and amusing, and loved by my children, but a real care, as trays had to go up to her rooms on the third floor three times a day for eleven years.

"Mother's death left me really desolate, but her room was not long empty My husband's fine mother died in California, and his father came to us. His father who is generosity itself, owns this comfortable old family home in which we have always lived and, of course, has every right here, as well as a claim on us, but I can assure you that my heart failed me when the business of consideration for one more old person had to take first place in our domestic plan. Now I not only have this good, patient, but almost helpless old man, but the charge of an adorable small niece who is recovering from a serious bout with polio.

Lifetime Devoted to Ill

"As a result," this semi-serious letter continues, "my entire married life has been geared to the care of persons not able to take care of themselves. And as we all know, almost every family has one of these persons. The homes that care for them charge as high as $100 per week for very ordinary accommodation and are, at their cheapest, out of reach of the average family budget. So we have to fix trays and clear trays, make beds up fresh, give baths, and have on tap endless sympathy and understanding.

". . . a semi-invalid . . ."

"We are not rich," Harriet Gillespie's letter continues, "but we are comfortable beyond any reasonable complaint. I have had one good kitchen helper for more than 15 years, and also now have a practical nurse for my two invalids.

"But what I'm writing you for is a protest against this intrusion into the family circle of these derelicts—beloved, perhaps, but still derelicts. Sam and I haven't had two years out of our 22 without one or the other of them. Our son and daughters have grown up in an atmosphere of 'run upstairs, dear, and see if—somebody is all right.' Surely there must be some more reasonable and economical way of solving this problem. Is it right for these older or invalid persons simply to settle down on the more vigorous ones, and expect the sacrifices that are inevitable?"

All Families Face It

Harriet is quite within the truth when she says that almost every family, at one time or another, has had to face the tedious, endless care of an aged person, whose life, however active and honorable, has come down to feebleness and dependence and seeming uselessness.

"Seeming uselessness," you note I say. For these burdens are anything but useless, really, and the fruit of their effect upon our homes is an invaluable one. No training could be of more use to growing boys and girls than this constant reminder of the sacred obligation that is upon us all, to make the last years of old persons dignified and comfortable, and to give them, if we possibly can, the sense of being loved.

This good healthy protest impresses me as coming from a generous, fine woman, who has shouldered the problem of these exacting guests with great spirit and capability. Note that it is a "dear old grandmother," a "beloved father and mother," and "a fine old father" to say nothing of the "adorable small niece."

No, Harriet Gillespie wrote in a burst of good-natured impatience. Perhaps she had just chanced to calculate exactly how many of her married years had been spent in nursing and guarding her old people. But in her heart she knows that it is good for a boy of 15 to have had years of carrying trays upstairs; good for young girls to pay daily visits to the sickroom, developing their young sympathy for the old and suffering.

Why not take this situation as normal?

Death to Life

Lesson for March 25, 1951

THE FLOWERS in the church on Easter morning will not have been there long. Less than 24 hours before, the church was dark and empty At no time in the year does the church look gloomier than on Easter Eve. In many churches the altar is draped in black. Good Friday commemorates the saddest day in earth's history, Easter the most joyous. Yet they come only 48 hours apart. This reminds all Christians that neither Good Friday nor Easter stands by itself, but each gives meaning to the other

Cross and Crucifix

THE Protestant churches usually have a cross That is because Protestants wish to remember that the Cross is empty, that it is not a dead Jesus whom we worship, but a living, risen, reigning Christ.

Even in the churches where crucifixes are numerous, there may be pictures or statues representing the risen Christ. Suppose there had been only Good Friday, suppose that had been the end of Jesus? Then there would have been no particular point in the cross. It would have been the mere instrument of one more violent death, another case of justice gone wrong, another tragic failure.

The Resurrection showed who it was that hung upon the Cross; the Resurrection showed that the Cross was not a scene of failure but of victory "Death could not keep its prey; He tore the bars away!" But on the other hand, what would the Ressurrection have been without the Cross? Just another miracle,—something to make our eyes pop, but not to make us grateful. The New Testament tells of or hints at many resurrections during the time of Christ; but it is not enthusiastic about any of them, with this one exception.

Victim and Victor

THE New Testament represents the Resurrection in many lights. One of the most striking is that it was a reward, a reward for the Cross. That is, God "highly exalted" Jesus because of his willingness to die on behalf of others (Isaiah 53:12; Phil 2:8). The Cross was the battle with the dark powers, and the victory; the Resurrection was the march of triumph.

On the Cross Jesus was both victim and victor; on Easter morning he was all the victor. The Cross was a perfectly natural event; by it Jesus underwent the worst that nature, and human sin, can do. On the Cross Jesus was murdered, for murder it was, however "legal" it was made to seem; and he called down no miracle to save himself.

But at the Resurrection Christ rose above nature, as nature's Lord. The early church preached both Cross and Resurrection; and it has never forgotten either one.

"As He is, so are we . . ."

THERE is another important truth about the Cross and Resurrection. From the very beginning, the church has refused to think of these events as concerned with Jesus alone. The Christian who has begun to work deeply into the meanings of his faith will see farther than the child does. He will see both Cross and Resurrection from the inside

The church has long taught that on the Cross God was doing something for us, and that through the Resurrection God is doing something in us. Paul expresses the life of a Christian as of one who is "dead with Christ" and "risen with Christ." The Christian life is thought of as one which has undergone both death and resurrection. Death to sin; rising to a new kind of life; death to a kind of existence in which we are slaves to what is worst in us; rising to a kind of life in which we are "more than conquerors."

Not all Christians have understood this, to be sure. Perhaps the greater number of Christians think of their life as one of simply trying (not very hard) to do the best they can, and usually failing But the really high-level Christians have discovered something more profound: that the Christian actually has access, by faith, to an inner power which is the very same that raised Jesus from the dead. Every Christian can share, now, in the resurrection-life of Christ. And this is the secret of Easter.

EDITOR AND WIFE VISIT

CARLSBAD CAVERNS

IN NEW MEXICO

I have already told you of some of the sights in New Mexico, and especially around Carlsbad where Mrs. Jorgenson and I spent several days and were guests of the Eldon Smith family.

Carlsbad Caverns National Park is unquestionably the major attraction of the Carlsbad area and perhaps of New Mexico. Carlsbad Caverns National Park lies beneath the foothills of the Guadalupe Mountains and is located on U. S. Highway 62-180, twenty-eight miles southwest of the County Seat City of Carlsbad, in the southeast corner of the state of New Mexico. It is said by many visitors to be "The World's First Wonder." (The Seven Wonders, so called were man-made.")

Tourists can find adequate accomodations at fine motels and hotels in Carlsbad, or at White's City, on the highway at the entrance to the Caverns. The rates are very reasonable, both lodging and food. The trip through the Caverns consume the greater part of a day, so it is convenient to get a motel at the entrance to the Caverns park and a good cafe there serves wonderful food and there is entertainment for guests in the evening.

It was the second trip through the Caverns for Mrs. Jorgenson and I and we really enjoyed the second trip even more than the first one. The Caverns are so awe-inspiring, so beautiful and so immense that it is hard to grasp all of the wonders in one trip. If we happen near Carlsbad sometime in the future we will again take in the Caverns trip.

To begin with, tickets are purchased near the Caverns at $1.20 per person tax included, and the guide service is free. Four or five guides accompany each group and the trip takes five hours. In order to handle the immense crowds the trips have been "staggered," groups starting at 9:00, 10:00 and 11:00 a. m. and at 12:15 p. m. Lunch is served in a vast dining room some over a city block long down about 750 feet. Hot coffee, sandwiches, fruit and cake sure tastes good after you have been walking through the caverns for a couple of hours.

At last you are at the entrance, just a great big hole in the side of the mountain. A wide, easy-sloping concrete ramp twists downward and soon you will be down at the first level, some 700 feet from the surface and you begin to see what a vast cave you are entering. The guides pause to give you a breathing spell and to lay down the rules of what you must not do: do not pick up any stones, do not touch any formations, do not throw stones down into depths to hear the noise. To date over 4½ millions of people have visited the Caverns and if each person had taken a souvenir, a bit of rock, or a bit of a formation, the Caverns would now be stripped of their natural beauty. In other words, walk and look and enjoy this vast cathredral which was created millions of years ago by the Master Designer.

Symmetry and beauty here is beyond description of words and in your imagination you will see forms of animate life, tropical verdure, fruits and vegetables, fine laces, totem poles, pipe organs, bee-hives, and paintings. Here you see thousands of stalactites (down), helectites (horizontal), and stalagmites (up), and giant columns and massive draperies—all in cold, beautiful stone. All defies the efforts of descriptive writers. You must see Carlsbad Caverns to believe!

The vastness of this cavern might be realized when we were told over 27 miles of the first level had been explored. Another cavern as large or larger is about 150 feet below the first level and is visible from two points where we could look down through a large opening to the cavern floor below. The National Geographic Society explored the lower cavern a few years ago and their chain ladder still hung over one entrance. The lower cavern will probably never be opened to the public as it is much like the first level in formations and the expense of building paths and lighting the lower caverns would be too great a cost.

The immensity of the cavern is best illustrated when I tell you that the Big Room is nearly 4 miles long, and a quarter of a mile wide and ceilings up to 300 feet high! You can go through this cavern without bumping your head! The cave is comparatively dry, only a few pools of water here and there and the temperature is 56 degrees the year around. The caverns are well lighted, the footpaths are broad and smooth, mostly built of cement and there are only a few stairs to climb on the entire trip. You can either walk out of the cave the way you came in, or take the elevator to the surface.

Most of the formations in the Caverns are "dead," that is: their growth was completed thousands of years ago. There are a few "live" formations, still growing. For instance one formation shaped like a huge chocolate drop, some 15 feet in diameter and perhaps 20 feet high, light tan in color is still growing. Water dripping from the ceiling 200 feet overhead deposits chemicals at the rate of less than 1 cubic inch a year. At that rate you can set down and figure how old the formation might be. It takes 7 years for a drop of water to penetrate from the surface until it falls on this formation.

We were at Carlsbad the wrong time of the year to see the famous bat flight. The nightly bat flight from the cave begins at sundown between late spring and early fall. The bats migrate south in winter. During the flight season the bats come out of the cave by the millions. They occupy a special room in the cave not open to the public as the Park Service does not want them molested.

It was from seeing the vast clouds of bats coming out from the side of the mountain that lead to the discovery of the Caverns by one Jim White a cowboy riding the range when he saw the strange sight. He concluded that it would take an awfully big hole in the ground to shelter that many bats. He looked for the opening and found it and later explored a part of the cavern before he could convince anyone of what he had found.

The first time we visited the Caverns, Mr. White was there to tell his story. He died a few years ago but I understand that his wife still retains an interest in some of the concessions there. Mr. White turned over his discovery to the Government for a National Park.

Some of our readers have probably visited the Caverns and may enjoy this bit of a review Others who are traveling in the Southwest should make it a point to stop at Carlsbad. It is well worth your time to drive several hundred miles out of your way to visit the World's First Wonder.

YEARLY SPRAYING RIDS BASEMENT OF INSECTS

Bothersome basement insects can be eradicated with DDT, and one spraying will last a year. Harold Gunderson, Iowa State College entomologist, offers this reminder to Iowans roped in on spring basement cleaning.

Spray walls, corners, ceiling and floor of the basement with a 5 percent DDT solution, preferably the emulsion type, advises Gunderson. For a good job, it's important to remove all trash, dirt and cobwebs so the spray thoroughly covers all surfaces.

DDT will kill spiders, field crickets, camel crickets, beetles, house centipedes, and fleas from the dog or cat.

Gunderson says the spray should not be directed toward any open flame. This might include a furnace, water heater or laundry stove.

LATE SPRING IS TIME TO BUY FEEDER LAMBS

In view of present high lamb prices, late spring may be a good time to contract for feeder lambs, according to Francis Kutish, Iowa State College farm economist.

He sees a short supply and strong demand for feeder lambs next fall. There has been no boost in lamb numbers in the Pacific and Range states area—the source of supply for most of Iowa's feeding lambs.

However, Kutish thinks there will be a sharp rise in the lamb supply and lower lamb prices during the coming months. He points out that about half of the boost in ewe lamb numbers reported January 1 was the eastern Corn Belt—an area that raises early lambs. This extra lamb supply will combine with more high-quality beef expected on the market this spring to drive lamb prices down from their current peak.

The fed lamb crop moved to market early this year, seasonal short supplies developed early and brought a spring price rise that was early and sharp, Kutish explains.

He adds that part of the present high prices can be traced to the pelts. Pelts account for about one-fourth of the live value of lamb and are worth the most money at this time of year On the other hand, pelt value is lowest in late spring and summer.

ARTIFICIAL BREEDING PROGRAM GROWING

Paul Henderson, County Extension Director, pointed to additional evidence this week that Iowa's artificial breeding program is growing by leaps and bounds.

A report from Robert Fincham, extension dairyman at Iowa State College, showed that even though Iowa got a later start in the program than some other states it now ranks in the top six in number of cows bred artificially among all states. A total of 166,047 cows were bred by artificial insemination in the state during 1950, a 24 percent increase or an actual increase of 31,853 cows over 1949. A total of 34,063 herd owners used the service during 1950. Henderson pointed out that the program has come a long way since the first artificial breeding cooperative was organized in 1942. That year, three associations serviced 3,000 cows in the state. Now there are 92 local organizations making service available to all counties in the state.

There are two major reasons for the growth of the artificial program in the county and in the state as a whole. First, increased production of daughters from artificial insemination over their dams has proved beyond doubt the value of the program.

Sixty of the sires used artificially since 1942 have 333 daughters with production records that can be compared with the records of their dams. The daughters produced an average of 421.2 pounds of butterfat per lactation compared with 381.5 pounds of butterfat for their dams, or an average increase of nearly 40 pounds.

The second factor is the way the program has been organized in the state. Outstanding sires are made available by the three bull studs in Iowa through the local county breeds co-op. These bulls are of the caliber that few dairymen in the county could afford to own for use as a herd bull.

There are several advantages of carrying out the program through local breeders co-op., according to Henderson. The local co-ops are managed by local farmers who have a voice in their operation. The system has proved that it is of a permanent nature and that farmers can depend upon efficient services of their local breeding co-op year after year. Technician in Hancock County is Lester Anderson. Dairymen interested in more information or in aritficial breeding service may call him at Kanawha.

INSULATION WILL HELP KEEP LAYING HOUSE DRY

Insulation is the basic step in keeping laying house litter dry—especially during seasons when temperatures vary widely, F. G. Wollney, Iowa State College extension poultryman, reminds Iowa poultry raisers.

He says a high-producing hen gives off from one-third to one-half pint of moisture per day, and cold walls and a cold ceiling will condense enough of this moisture out of the air to keep the laying house in a state of perpetual dampness.

A good temperature range inside the laying house—one that will keep hens in high production—is from 40 to 55 degrees, Wollney says. He thinks this spring—when uninsulated walls and ceilings are alternately dripping water during the day and collecting moisture in the form of frost at night—is a good time to include laying house insulation in summer building and remodeling plans.

In most houses, 4 inches of insulation with a vapor barrier and seven-eighths inch outside siding will be enough wall insulation to keep temperatures at the right level. Ceiling insulation in a single-story house needs to be at least 50 percent better, or about 6 to 8 inches thick.

Ample insulation teams up with proper ensulation to keep temperature and humidity constant enough to allow year-around confinement of hens and increase egg production, Wollney explains.

He adds that good insulation and an effective ventilation system only need to be installed once to boost production over a number of years. Overcrowding, type and amount of litter, faulty water fountains and type of feed are contributing factors to litter troubles that can be cleared up by better management practices, when basic wet litter problems have been solved.

LIMIT PRESIDENT

Constitutional limitations now apply to the number of times a person may serve as President of the United States. It is the 22nd amendment, which has been approved by three-fourths of the states and requires that no person may serve more than two terms as president. It does not apply to the present accupant of the White House.

The Iowa Legislature was among the first to adopt the limitation in 1947. At that time, the Republican-controlled legislature passed the resolution approving the amendment by a wide margin. This year other states, including those controlled by both parties, gave their approval and it is now the law of the land.

Senator Margaret Chase Smith of Maine wrote recently that "some Democrat partisan who under the guise of objectivity shed crocodile tears in claiming the Amendment would take from the country indispensable leadership in times of crises. Surely, our country is not so devoid of capable leaders that some one person becomes indispensable. Surley our democracy can produce enough leaders to invalidate the theory of the indispensable man."

The Iowa Legislature showed its foresightedness four years ago in approving such a measure. Many states followed suit. It is definite proof that the will of the people, the bi-partisan will of the people, is that some limitations should be put on presidential tenure to safeguard the possibility of rule by dictator.

WELL-PRUNED FRUIT PLANTINGS YIELD MOST

Small fruit plantings that will be the heavy producers and the biggest food budget helps in '51 will be those that are pruned, observes A. E. Cott, Iowa State College horticulturist.

He says grapes should be pruned heavily every year, since the fruit is produced only on 1-year-old wood. The best time to prune grapes usually comes between March 1 and the time the buds begin to swell.

The same time schedule applies to the spring pruning of raspberries. If old fruiting canes were not taken out last summer after harvest, they should be removed first. In black raspberry plantings, Cott says to leave from 3 to 5 of the most vigorous new canes in each clump and cut back lateral branches to a point where they will support the weight of the fruit. Unbranched canes need to be cut back to a length of about 3 feet.

In red raspberry plantings, the horticulturist recommends cutting out all weak canes less than 18 to 24 inches high. Then the remaining canes can be thinned out until canes are 6 to 8 inches apart. Following the thinning operation, the remaining good fruiting canes can be cut back to a height of 36 to 48 inches depending on the vigor of the cane

In the case of ever-bearing red raspberries, Cott says to be sure old fruiting canes that produced last sumer's crop are removed. At the same time, make sure the canes that produced the fall crop of berries are left, because they will produce the crop this coming spring.

CHECK WIRING NOW FOR DEFECTS OR DAMAGE

Chick brooders and pig brooders are stepping up electricity consumption on many Hancock County farms this month. Because of this heavy load of electricity on wires, County Extension Director Paul Henderson urges farmers to check their wiring and electrical equipment closely for defects or damage.

Hancock County farmers using 250-watt heat lamps for pig brooding should use no more than six of these lamps on a circuit. This circuit should be protected with a 15-ampere fuse. If more than six lamps are needed, Johnson, Iowa State College Agriculture Engineer, recommends another wiring circuit should be installed. He also suggests that farmers check with their power supplier to make sure their wiring and transformers will carry the extra load safely.

To be safe, check fuses on all farm circuits, Johnson advises. Circuits used only for lighting should have 15 ampere fuses, but circuits with appliances can use up to 20 ampere fuses. Circuits with appliances should be No 12 AWG wire.

There are other wiring precautions that farmers will want to remember. Damage for lightning can be minimized by grounding all places where wire enters buildings. Use at least an 8-foot ground rod solidly clamped to a No. 6 copper ground wire.

Wires in damp locations should be a plastic covered, non-metallic cable (romax). This costs slightly more than common romax, but it lasts longer and is safer, Johnson says. He also urges farmers to keep wires far enough above all buildings so a coating of ice won't cause wires to sag onto the roofs. Wires should hang at least 16 feet above the ground in the kard to allow clearance for tall machinery

It's a good idea to cover wires that are within reach of livestock with conduit or wood guard strips to prevent animals from rubbing or chewing these wires

Iowa State College Phamplet 144 entitled "Wire Your Farm For Better Service" lists in detail what precautions should be taken in farm wiring. It is now available in Henderson's office

OVERFEEDING MILK ONE CAUSE OF CALF SCOURS

Overfeeding of milk and dirty feeding utensils are blamed by Joe Hineman, extension dairyman at Iowa State College, for most causes of scours in young calves

He says that a calf should get no more than a pound of milk for each pound of body weight, regardless of whether it is skimmilk or whole milk. A 100-pound calf, for example, should get no more than 10 lbs, or a little over a gallon, per day Alot of dairymen feed a 100-pound calf that much at a feeding twice daily. Hineman says

He recommends scrubbing milkfeeding utensils with hot water and a wetting agent after each feeding, and rinsing them in hot water or a chemical solution just before using Some dairymen use the same solution for cleaning calf feeding pails as they use to sterilize milking utensils

Freak Fire

When a heating pad set fire to the bed covers, Mr T M. Renshaw of Storm Lake tossed the burning covers out of the bedroom window and appeared to have the situation well in hand Unfortunately, the covers ignited loose straw piled around the foundation of the house. Considerable damage was done in the blaze that followed.

More Dogs Licensed

1,231 dog licenses were issued up to March 3 in Hancock county, according to County Auditor Maynard Schoneman 975 were issued to the same date a year ago.

BIG TAX PAYER!

The first installment of a million dollar tax bill is being paid in Iowa this week by the Milwaukee Road.

Payments covering its 1950 taxes are in proportion to the railroad's mileage in the various counties in which it operates.

Hancock county receives $11,259.30.

Large Money

Rats in the Oakland area have expensive tastes. J. A. Bolton lost his billfold in a corn crib last fall and recovered it only recently. The rodents had eaten up the $10 and $20 bills, ignoring three "ones."

Carbon Monoxide

When the kerosene burner on a water heater acted up, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Neil of near Reinbeck lost 158 laying hens one night recently, all smothered by carbon monoxide.

Dale Merical of Redfield was painfully burned recently when a gasoline tank exploded. He was cutting an old car to pieces with an acetylene torch when the tank blew up and showered him with burning gasoline.

Competition With Taft

Every time Fred Newman of Iowa Falls makes a speech, he runs into competition from Senator Robert Taft. Three years ago Mr. Newman spoke in Los Angeles, where Taft spoke that same evening. Two years ago, Newman spoke in Columbus, Ohio, and found that the senator was addressing another group in that city. This week, Mr. Newman spoke in Des Moines to an engineer group, while Taft addressed the Lincoln day Republican Audience.

Eggert Wiese of Atlantic passed away of a heart attack while participating in a trap shoot at Griswold last week. He had shot at four targets and had just called for his fifth and last bird, when he collapsed. Death came almost instantly.

Retires After 33 Years

For the first time in 33 years, the St. Johannes Lutheran church at Exira has a new church chairman. Hans Farstrup retired from that post recently, after 33 years of consecutive service.

Killed Rattler

A former Lake City resident, Earl Bowles of Brewster, Washington, recently had an unusual experience when a live rattlesnake invaded the cab of his heavy truck. Mr. Bowles felt the snake against his neck just as he started his heavy truck down a steep hill, 3 miles long. Unable to stop, he kept the truck under control until he reached the bottom of the hill before stopping to kill the snake.

Fell In

A Red Oak man is still trying to "explain things" to his bride." As he helped with the decorations following a wedding, he lost his balance and plunged his arm clear through the large, tiered wedding cake.

Fifty-Five Years

When Mrs. Victorie Stidburek of Boise, Idaho, visited in Cresco recently, it was her first visit to the "old home town" in 55 years. She and her husband operated a bakery there in 1895.

60th Anniversary

At Onawa, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Meadows observed their 60th wedding anniversary recently. They were married in Omaha in 1891 and lived for 42 years on the same farm, near Soldier.

Tractor Tire Exploded

Richard Ulrich of Redfield was hurt in an usual accident last week. As he inflated a large tractor tire, the tire exploded after receiving about 45 pounds pressure Ulrich was thrown ten feet and knocked unconscious. The explosion was heard for a block away.

Narrow Escape

Two Akron railroad men narrowly escaped injury in the heavy fog recently, when their railway motor car had an unscheduled meeting with a freight engine. The two men, Claude Burris and Alvin Oaks, leaped to safety when the engine loomed up ahead.

Baby

The deep snow failed to halt the stork in Guthrie county recently. Snowplows came to the rescue, clearing a path to the Glenn Capehart farm home, where a new baby was born.

GET 5-20 CENTS MORE BY SELLING CLEAN WOOL

Experienced Iowa sheep raisers are already looking ahead to the time when they'll be marketing wool this year, reports Dick McWilliams, Iowa State College animal husbandman.

At current prices, clean wool is worth from 5 to 20 cents more per pound than dirty wool. McWilliams thinks fleeces should be fairly high in quality if they are kept clean between now and shearing time.

He suggests keeping bedding fresh and using only bedding and hay that are free from burrs and clinging-type weed seeds. Pastures that are infested with burr-type weeds are another threat to top wool price if sheep are allowed to graze this spring.

To keep chaff and dirt in hay from sifting down on the sheep, McWilliams recommends using vertical-sided feed racks or boarding up the sides of sloping feed racks.

He adds that clean fleeces are easier to handle, require less time to shear and are less likely to damage the clippers.

It's now time to begin pruning your shade trees.

CIVIL DEFENSE

Home Towners May Be Vital Link In Nation's Civil Defense Chain

(This is the last of a series of five articles on civil defense by Walter A. Shead, Western Newspaper Union's Washington correspondent.)

By Walter A. Shead

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Whether you live in a city or a small town, or on a farm in the rural areas of the nation, you have an obligation as a citizen interested in saving your own life and the life of your fellow citizens in the civil defense program.

Many folks in small towns or on farms may be inclined to take the dangers inherent in a full-scale war with a grain of salt. There are no barriers to poison or nerve gases. There are no limits to biological warfare, and the destruction of the means of providing food to our military personnel may be a main objective of our potential enemy Suppose your neighbors in a nearby city have the most efficient civil defense system possible to work out and an enemy attack knocks out large numbers of its personnel. Then it may be the duty of those in surrounding cities and towns and counties to move in as rescue teams —to care for evacuees, to improvise hospitals, and many other essentials of defense work

There are hundreds of jobs for civilians which must be filled: airplane spotters, apprehension of saboteurs, guarding against water poisoning or pollution, amateur radio operators, ambulance drivers, messengers, first aid trucks, storage of thousands of items of supply in medication and food-transport, engineers, housekeeping employees for nursing and dietary departments, cooks, laundresses, blood donors, watchmen at plants, utilities, and essential services such as dairies and pasteurization plants, immunization of small animals to prevent rabies, grave diggers, specially trained radiation detection teams, air raid shelter contruction, and dozens of other essential workers.

Alert watchfulness on the part of farmers to detect dangerous diseases in their live-stock and pests and plant disease is highly important. The bureau of animal industry already has given instruction to a large number of veterinarians in diagnosis of these diseases and at the first suspicion the farmer should call the state livestock sanitary officials for prompt investigation. In many instances large amounts of vaccine must be promptly available and in any outbreak, quarantine precedure and destruction of animals and their burial may be all-important to prevent spreading. Special equipment for disenfecting crews should be immediately available.

The same watchfulness is essential in detection of plant pests and diseases. County agricultural agents, farmers, and regional, state and federal agricultural agencies will advise which crops in their respective areas are most essential for national welfare and, therefore, more likely to be the aim of biological warfare

THE STATE AND local governments are furnishing approximately half of the three billion dollars appropriated in the national civilian defense act to provide for this nation-wide program. But in spite of every thing the federal administrator may do, the responsibility of adequate defense rests at each level of local government including the responsibility for health service operations It is up to the state civil defense director to map out his state and to determine in each locality just what type of organization must be setup A community then would find itself in one of three categories: first, cities within critical target areas; second, mutual aid communities; and third, mobile support communities. The folks in the small towns and rural areas would find themselves in one of the last two categories and their principal function would be to receive casualties from the nearby principal city, and to send health service rescue teams to its aid.

The mobile support communities may be anywhere from 50 to 150 miles from the nearest principal city And while these latter communities might not be the deliberate aim of a bombing attack there is always the possibility of a bomber's error, as many communities in Europe and Asia discovered in the last war.

The organization of these mobile support communities in rural counties are of greatest importance to the whole civil defense program. The health service in these communities would be organized to operate as self-contained teams in such fields as first aid and radiological defense. Larger communities with hospitals or sizable clinics would also be prepared to receive casualties and should be able to supply complete surgical, burn and shock teams to disaster areas.

So just because you do not live in a large city, do not get the idea that you and your family should not be trained in every possible aspect of civil defense or that you will not be called upon for aid in case of an emergency disaster. You will be. If the weight of atomic attack or other of the phases of warfare discussed in these articles ever falls on this nation, the responsibility of defense will not fall so much upon a plan of organization as it will upon the shoulders of individuals who are trained and ready and who know how to save their own lives and the lives of their neighbors. So be ready to join the United States civil defense corps.

STAGE—SCREEN—RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

Red-haired, blue-eyed Polly Bergen won all hearts when she visited New York to help promote "At War with the Army," the Dean Martin-Jerry Lewis comedy in which she has the leading feminine role. Nothing phoney about that girl! Polly's husband, Jerome Courtland, under contract to Columbia, came along, to see his family and show her New York. She is under contract to Hal Wallis, so her screen future is assured. But if anything should happen to it she can fall back on television and singing with orchestras; that's how she got her start.

Ten Presidents of the United States are seen in Warners' "My Country 'Tis of Thee," the Technicolor short dramatizing American history. Woodrow Wilson, Franklin D. Roosevelt and Harry S. Truman portray themselves in the picture.

KILLED INSTANTLY

By Richard H. Wilkinson

3 Minute Fiction

THE TELEPHONE on Sheriff Bill Streeter's desk jingled and he picked it up.

"Hello, Bill?" said an excited voice. "This is Guy Halbert. Say, for God's sake, get out to the ranch at once! Homer's been shot!"

"What makes you think so?" Bill asked.

"I just telephoned him. He said he'd been plugged and tried to tell who did it, but his voice trailed off. Then I heard a crash, as though he'd fallen.

"Where are you now?" said Bill.

"In Stansboro. I came in this morning to see about a cattle shipment. I was to call him and report this afternoon."

"O. K.," said Bill. "I'll go right out."

Two hours later Sheriff Streeter entered the main building of the Diamond G and found the place in a state of excitement. Jay Leonard, Gorham's foreman, dark-skinned, surly, ill-tempered, met the officer.

"Hello, Jay, what happened?"

"I dunno, Minnie, the housekeeper, went in to the office to call the old man to lunch and found him."

"Doc Humphrey here yet?"

At that moment a door behind the store fireplace opened and gray-haired Doc Humphrey emerged. "Killed instantly," he said. "Can't say how long ago. Maybe two—three hours."

"Thanks." Sheriff Streeter entered the office. Gorham had been laid out on a cot and covered with a blanket.

Streeter's voice was suddenly cold, accusing. "The doc says Homer was killed instantly, mister. Instantly. He's sure of it."

Streeter returned to the main living room. Doc Humphrey was still there.

"Who do you reckon would want Homer killed, Doc?"

Humphrey scratched his chin "Plenty. Everyone who worked for him hated him. He was a hard task master." He glanced swiftly toward the scowling figure of Jay Leonard near the door. "I reckon Jay hated him as much as anyone. Then there's Guy Halbert.

"Guy was in Stansboro and Jay ain't the type to hate bad enough to kill."

"Well, I don't reckon Minnie would kill anyone."

STREETER WENT out on to the veranda, and sat down and rolled a cigarette. He had a lot of thinking to do. He didn't want to make any mistakes.

Suddenly the officer bounded to his feet and went into the ranch house where Doc Humphrey was packing his bag . . . Minutes later he returned to the veranda just as an automobile swung in at the ranch gate. Guy Halbert leaped from behind the wheel.

"Is he dead? Lord! I got here as soon as I could."

"He's dead," Streeter nodded.

Halbert's eyes widened. "I was afraid of that. I was afraid that's what had happened when his voice trailed off—."

"That so?" said Bill Streeter.

Halbert produced a handkerchief and began mopping his brow. "This is terrible. Who do you think would want to kill him, sheriff?"

Suddenly, Halbert stopped mopping his brow and stared. Behind the sheriff he saw the dark face of Jay Leonard. Behind Jay he saw Doc Humphrey.

"Say!" he said, "what's wrong? What are you all staring at me like that for?"

"You otter know, mister," said Streeter quietly.

"I? Why should I know?" His voice rose wildly. "Say, what's the matter? Lord! You don't think I did it? Why, I was in Stansboro! I can prove it."

"Sure you can. But you can't prove Homer wasn't shot before you went down there."

"I talked with him on the telephone. It was me he told about his being shot. It was me called you."

"Called me so's I wouldn't suspect you. Streeter's voice was suddenly cold, accusing. "The doc says Homer was killed instantly, mister.'

"But—" Halbert stopped talking Terror leaped into his eyes as the significance of the sheriff's words dawned on him.. Killed instantly! A man who is killed instantly couldn't tell him over the telephone that he'd been shot!

Ike's Duty Is To Integrate 11 Military Commands

By Wright A. Patterson

THE INTERNATIONAL ARMY General Eisenhower is to organize, equip and command, should the Russians attack us or any one of the Western European nations, presents many intricate and difficult problems.

It will be composed of troops from 11 different countries, speaking and understanding 11 different languages. All must understand army orders in exactly the same way so that none work at cross purposes in battle and cause what could prove to be disastrous confusion. He must devise a workable system that will make any misunderstandings impossible before he can hope to defeat the Russian hordes on land.

In Korea, General MacArthur, as commander of the United Nations forces, composed as it is of troops from several nations, speaking and understanding several different languages, has had somewhat the same problem, though to a smaller extent. and he has solved that problem. He also has had the problem of arms and ammunition supply for the troops from different nations. That was difficult, but he solved it.

Eisenhower will have the greater problem of providing interchangeable arms and ammunition for his army, so the same rifle bullets will work for all troops regardless of the country from which they come. The agreement between the nations of the North Atlantic pact is that each nation will provide the needed items of supplies for which they are best equipped. America, England, France and Germany will each contend it can provide the best of planes, tanks, trucks, guns and ammunition. The decision will rest with Eisenhower.

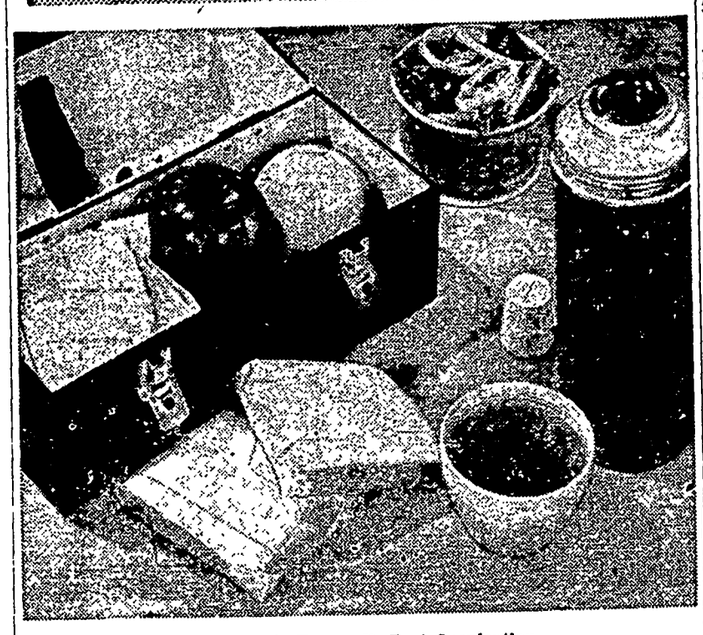
That decision, when made, will arouse many antagonisms which can only be removed by the contesting manufacturers being shown, diplomatically, the reason for his decision. To permit such antagonism to go unanswered would create distrust on the home front that could result in disaster on the battle front.

That problem of production of arms, munitions and supplies for this international army constitutes what is probably the greatest single problem Eisenhower has undertaken. It will call for the exercise of all the diplomacy he possesses to keep peace in the international family, without which victory on the battlefield will go glimmering. But to attempt to fight a war with the arms, munitions and supplies not being interchangeable, coming from 11 different sources, would be impossible.

The general will have no great difficulty in organizing his general staff. He can pick the best of the officers from each of the 11 nations involved, and the combined ability of the general staff, applied to the many problems involved will aid materially in providing solutions. One of the small ones is the full understanding of road signs on the part of drivers of trucks, tanks, and other self propelled pieces of equipment, or transportation in general. Whatever a road sign says must be understood by all as meaning the same thing. Camp signs would come within the same category. Road signs are of seemingly small importance, but on them could hinge success or failure when it became time to move reinforcements to a threatened weak spot in a battle line.

Such a job as that Eisenhower has assumed calls for the ability of a superman. No soldier in all the world's history has ever before been expected to do so much, to solve so many intricate problems. Eisenhower is the one man in the armed forces of all the 11 nations who could best be expected to have the organizing ability and strategy in the field, the patience and diplomacy to meet problems of the home front, and those of army organization and training.

Can Eisenhower do the job? My guess would be that he can, that he can and will solve the innumerable problems the job presents. And should Joe Stalin and his Russian Commies start anything, they will find out before they get far that they are up against a real adversary. To solve all the problems involved calls for a genius, and Ike is our available genius in whom all 11 nations have faith.



Let Lunch Boxes Reflect Inspiration

(See Recipes Below)

Adequate Lunch Boxes

IF YOU'VE BEEN packing lunches without respite for several months, chances are that both the lunch and you have fallen into a deadly sort of routine. It's easy to make the familiar things, but then it's not very interesting, either to pack or eat, is it?

Those boxes or packages opened at noon to furnish a meal are important to nutrition and well being. A great deal more than just a snack must go into them. It's essential they have the right amount of sustaining food value, energy units and vitamins, in addition to surprises so they'll do the right kind of job

Smartly planned lunch boxes will also leave you with enough good things for the stay-at-home members of the family, so no planning is really necessary for an extra meal. You'll be getting two meals with variety and sound nutrition, for the effort it takes to plan one Isn't it worth it?

Lunch in a box will be a real adventure if it is specially delicious and varied from day to day. Little extra surprises tucked into corners may include cookies, peanuts, dates and raisins. Be sure to include at least one-third of the day's food needs and try to have variety and texture, color and flavors.

A LUNCH BOX plan may include a thermos of hot soup for cool days, or milk or iced tea or hot coffee when the thermos is not in use. Milk should always be included in a child's lunch, while the other beverages may go into an adult lunch.

Give them a large, nourishing sandwich, and include pickles or relishes, a deviled egg, or a salad in a covered carton or plastic container. Fruit, cookies, cake, or even puddings in covered containers are excellent for dessert.

Celery and Green Pepper Sandwich

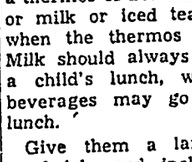
1½ cups shredded American cheese
¼ cup chopped celery
¼ cup chopped green pepper
⅓ cup salad dressing
Whole wheat bread

Combine the cheese, celery, green pepper and salad dressing. Spread between slices of bread.

Sandwich Filling Ideas

Cabbage and Peanut: Combine ½ cup chopped cabbage, ½ cup chopped peanuts, 3 tablespoons mayonnaise.

Cream Cheese and Dried Beef: Combine 1 3-ounce package cream cheese, ¼ cup chopped dried beef, 2 tablespoons cream. 1 teaspoon grated onion, and ¼ teaspoon worcestershire sauce; blend well.



Cottage Cheese and Green Pepper: Combine 1½ cups well-drained cottage cheese, 3 tablespoons chopped green pepper, 2 tablespoons chopped green onion, and ½ teaspoon salt.

Bacon and Egg: Combine 2 hard-cooked eggs, diced, with 4 slices bacon, fried crisp and chopped. Add ¼ teaspoon salt and 1½ tablespoons mayonnaise.

LYNN SAYS:
Perk up Those Lunches With these Ideas

Don't leave those corners of the lunch box empty. Fill them with munchy surprises such as cheese balls rolled in nuts, bags of peanuts or other nuts, cheese-stuffed celery, small bunches of grapes or clusters of seasonal berries.

When sandwiches get tiring, have an occasional lunch with a fried chicken and potato salad combination; or meat salad and crackers as the mainstay.

Banana Cup Cakes
(Makes 14 large cup cakes)

1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
⅛ teaspoon cloves
½ cup shortening
1 teaspoon vanilla
⅔ cup sugar
1 egg, unbeaten
¾ cup mashed bananas

Sift flour with baking powder, soda, salt and spices three times. Cream shortening and vanilla, adding sugar gradually, until light and fluffy. Add egg, beat well. Add flour mixture and banana pulp. Beat until well blended. Fill paper baking cups or greased muffin pans ½ full. Bake in a moderate oven (375°) until cake springs back when lightly touched, about 20 minutes. Cool. Frost if desired.

• • •

Creamy Rice Pudding
(Serves 6)

4 cups milk
¼ cup rice, washed
½ teaspoon salt
2 eggs, beaten slightly
¼ cup sugar
1 cup seedless raisins, washed
1 teaspoon vanilla, optional
¼ teaspoon nutmeg

Combine milk, rice and salt in top of a double boiler, and cook over hot water until rice is tender stirring occasionally. Beat eggs slightly and add a part of the hot rice mixture, stirring to blend. Add egg-rice mixture to the remaining rice in double boiler. Add ingredients; stir well and pour into a well-buttered 1½-quart casserole; place in pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven (350°) for 45 to 60 minutes, or until a clean knife inserted in the center comes out clean. Stir rice a few times, inserting spoon near edge of dish without disturbing top brown skin. For individual puddings, pour into individual custard cups and bake in a pan of hot water.

Peach Polly Pudding
(Serves 6)

1 quart peaches
⅓ cup minute tapioca
1 tablespoon lemon juice
¼ cup sugar
1 tablespoon butter

Arrange a layer of peaches in a buttered baking dish. Pour over the top the juice from the peaches to which has been added, lemon juice, sugar, and tapioca. Dot with butter. Bake at 375° to 400° for about 1 hour.

Fill the vacuum bottle with milk, cocoa, flavored milk drink or a hot cream soup. For variety add some pudding such as custard to get in the day's quota of milk.

If you pack lunches, plan a large enough roast on Sunday so you can slice enough for sandwiches on Monday Jelly or relish spread or the sliced roast makes a delightful sandwich for variety.

Good fillings for sandwiches that are to be frozen include meat, cheese, fish, peanut butter, chicken or chopped eggs (not sliced).

BRITISH VETS PROTEST . . . These British reservists, facing probable recall to the armed forces as a result of the present world crisis, are demonstrating at a Labor party meeting in London. They are holding aloft signs that express their various sentiments. The one in the center, reading "I've got mine. Where are Herb's?" is decorated with medals awarded for World War II. The Herb mentioned is Herbert Morrison, a member of the British cabinet, who was addressing the meeting at the time of the demonstration. The one reading, "Don't be yanked into war" probably refers to American influence.

PUNCHBOARD TAKE NEARS A BILLION . . Senator Charles Tobey (right), member of the senate crime investigating committee, listens as John W. Brookfield, federal trade commission attorney, who specializes in punchboard and other gambling cases, tells him the facts of life about punchboards. Expert Brookfield said that the "take" from the "suckers" by these boards is between 100 million and one billion dollars a year and that this "take" will get bigger because of the ban on interstate shipments of slot machines. The committee is emphasizing how the gamblers are making "suckers" of the public.

BRITISH BOMBER ARRIVES . . . The British twin-jet bomber, Canberra, which recently set a non-stop Atlantic crossing record of four hours and 40 minutes, makes a pass over Andrews air force base outside Washington shortly before landing at the capital. The bomber flew to Washington from Gander, Newfoundland, where it landed after the trans-Atlantic flight. Government dignitaries and newspaper reporters and cameramen awaited the ship.

LORD MAYOR WINGS IN . . . Berlin's Lord Mayor Ernst Reuter leaves airliner at New York's Idlewild airport to visit Secretary of State Acheson to discuss German problems. He does not foresee Russian attack on Berl'n.

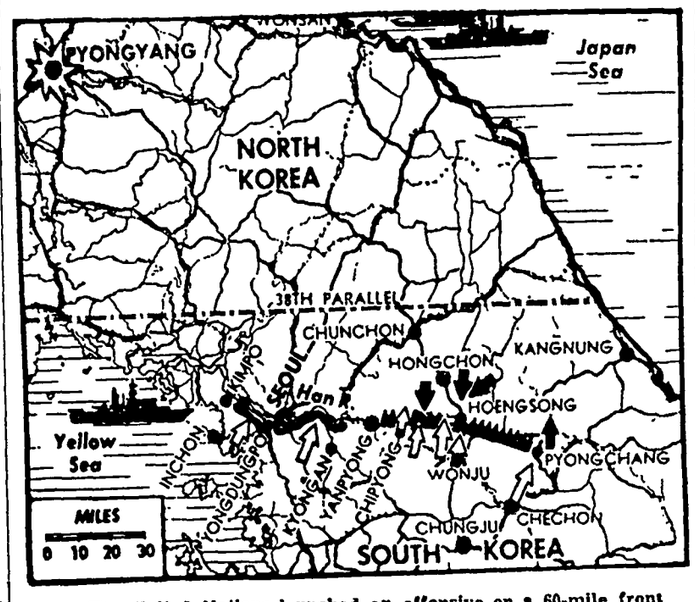
EISENHOWER TOASTED AT CHERBOURG . . . A smiling General Dwight Eisenhower raises his glass in a toast with Edmund Soufflet, mayor of Cherbourg, during the dock-side champagne reception given the new supreme commander of western European defense on his arrival aboard the Queen Elizabeth. The general said the last time he was in the city the docks were wrecked and now they are in good repair. His job is to keep them that way.

PRICE ENFORCER . . . Edward P. Morgan, Washington attorney and former FBI chief inspector, was formally sworn in as chief of enforcement for the price stabilization office. Post was refused by New York police commissioner.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Probers Charge Illegal Influence Exerted to Obtain R. F. C. Loans; Troops to Europe Fight Continues

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



The United Nations launched an offensive on a 60-mile front in Korea aimed at killing as many Communists as possible. The offensive, called "Operation Killer," moved forward behind continued artillery barrages. U.N. commanders reported Red forces retreated all along the line and set their losses at 64,000 in the period January 4 to February 28.

R.F.C.:
Illegal Influence

What may turn into one of the rowdiest battles in the administration's history began to take shape when a subcommittee of the senate banking and currency committee charged that influence emanating from the White House had been exerted on the R.F.C.'s lending policies.

At first the investigation seemed just another periodic urge to probe by investigating senators. But then President Truman stepped in where many Presidents have feared to tread and disclosed he had collected a file of letters written by congressmen to the R.F.C.

He let it be known that he had in his possession between 700 and 900 letters, most of them from congressmen, and some asking favorable consideration of loan applications.

At the time it looked like President Truman was turning the investigation from the White House back to the senators themselves. Immediately the senators screamed that they refused to be intimidated.

It was at this point that the President issued a statement saying he saw no reason to make the correspondence public since it did not show any illegality either on the part of the executive branch or legislators.

The investigation fell into something of a lull after the first flurry of publicity, but it is not likely to stay dormant for very long. It has all the ingredients for a mud-slinging battle. And the offended senators are not likely to forget Truman's tactics of turning the spotlight of publicity upon them.

Moreover, it appears that before the fight is ended a set of new, deep resentments between the President on the one hand and influential members of congress on the other will have been created—the latest in a long and bitter series.

FIXER:
Faces Huge Tax Lien

Salvatore T. Sollazzo, who allegedly spent thousands to fix big-time college basketball games, found himself the subject of an investigation by the federal government. The internal revenue bureau placed a $1,128,493 tax lien against him.

The effect of the lien was to freeze Sollazzo's assets until the government can collect whatever it may be entitled to. The lien listed allegedly unpaid taxes running into hundreds of thousands of dollars for each of the years from 1943 through 1947.

There was no indication from the government as to the source of Sollazzo's income during those years. He is a jewelry manufacturer.

Meanwhile, investigation of the bribery charges against players for three New York colleges continued. No investigation in recent years has caused so much comment in the sports world.

Basketball is the most popular high school and college sport in the nation. Repercussions of the investigation were felt even to the high school level.

BACK EUROPE:
Dewey and Stassen Plea

The split within the Republican party on the issue of sending troops to Europe came into sharp focus with testimony of Harold E. Stassen and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey before the senate foreign relations and armed services committees.

Dewey had previously backed the administration's policy of sending troops to Europe. Stassen joined Dewey in opposing Sens. Kenneth S. Wherry, Nebraska, and Robert A. Taft, Ohio, and supporting the administration's claimed authority to send American troops overseas without congressional restrictions.

In urging the policy of sending troops to Europe, Stassen said: "If America showed timidity and shortsightedness in refusing to back up General Eisenhower, I believe the reaction right inside America would seriously undermine the stability and confidence in our own economy which is essential for all purposes."

Governor Dewey went even further than Stassen. He told the senate groups, as he looked at Mr Wherry across 20 feet of space in the caucus room:

"The most terrible thing that has happened to this country and the world is the defeatism evidenced by some of the questions asked here as to whether we could hold Europe."

Dewey and Stassen visibly angered some Republican senators by their testimony. That anger will possibly find expression when the Republicans begin a serious search for a presidential candidate in 1952.

As far as sending troops to Europe and backing Gen. Eisenhower's plan to defend Europe, the congress finds itself in a position where it can do-nothing but back the administration. Any action to the contrary would be a serious blow to world peace.

AMENDMENT:
Two Term Limit

The 22nd amendment, baring future Presidents from serving more than two elective terms or more than 10 years in the White House, was added to the constitution when Utah and Nevada became the 35th and 36th states to ratify the amendment. A three-fourths majority, 36 states, was needed to make the amendment effective.

Minus the legal phraseology, here's what the amendment provides:

That a President may serve only two elected terms. A man who served up to two years of another President's unexpired term could still serve an additional eight years.

But a Vice-President succeeding to the Presidency and serving more than two years before the term expired would be eligible for election only once.

The proposed amendment had been kicking around in state legislatures since March, 1947, but only 24 states had voted to ratify until late in January of this year.

The amendment does not apply to President Truman. He was specifically exempted when congress submitted the proposed amendment.

The last amendment to the constitution—the 21st—repealed prohibition. It became effective December 5, 1933.

KOREA:
Operation Killer

United Nations forces under Lt. Gen. Matthew Ridgeway pushed forward in a limited offensive called "Operation Killer" with the idea of eliminating as many Chinese as possible. The offensive was operating on the Ridgeway thesis that "terrain as such is of no value."

There were also indications that the Chinese Communists were concentrating behind a maze of trenches and strong points for another counterattack against U.N. troops.

A new over-all picture of the Korean conflict was beginning to emerge from the confused fighting of the past few weeks. It seemed to be this:

The war was at a stand-off between Chinese manpower and U.S. firepower. Neither side could win a decisive victory without committing much larger forces than they seemed willing to commit. But of the two, the Chinese seemed to be getting hurt the worst.

With this thought in mind, a number of United Nations delegates were again hoping the Mao Tse-tung might be willing to reopen peace negotiations.

NAVY:
Senate Approves Bill

The Senate unanimously approved a $2,358,092,000 atom-age navy modernization program. The bill, already cleared by the house, was sent to President Truman for his signature.

It would authorize the navy to build a new 57,000-ton super-carrier capable of handling atom bombers. The navy also could buy about 140 new warships with a total weight of about 500,000 tons, and convert 292 others with a total weight of 1,000,000 tons.

Meanwhile, Gen. Omar Bradley reluctantly accepted a house armed services committee compromise bill to lower the draft induction age from 19 to 18½. The bill would increase the term for all draftees from 21 months to 26 months.

Bradley said he would accept the plan reluctantly because some form of legislation was needed to reach the goal of 3,500,000 men under arms as soon after July 1 as possible.

RENT CONTROL:
A Limited Extension

The senate banking committee approved a three-month stopgap extension of federal rent laws controlling the rents of 7,000,000 homes.

The committee resolution will be sent to the senate floor for action. Existing rent controls expire March 31, except in communities which decide to continue them. Communities so deciding may remain under federal ceilings until June 30.

Under the new resolution federal ceiling would stay in effect until June 30 except in communities which decide to abolish them.

The administration has been plugging for a law permitting more widespread application of rent controls. Since the war rent control has been removed from millions of homes.

TRUMAN:
Interesting Speculation

President Truman is the subject of a bit of interesting speculation in and about Washington. It has been rumored that he may run for his old senate seat when his term expires January 20, 1953.

Although no one would say for sure and it is much too early to speculate on presidential possibilities, old friends of the President continue to say he is seriously considering a return to the senate where he passed 10 happy years.

Most observers believe Mr. Truman will not make up his mind whether to run for another term until early next year.

Stassen

Harold E. Stassen, president of the University of Pennsylvania, called for "drastic and definite" support of Gen. Dwight Eisenhower by prompt rearmament of western Europe. The former GOP presidential aspirant made his plea in testimony before the senate foreign relations and armed services committees.

RUBBER:
NPA Announces Slash

The national production authority ordered a reduction in the amount of natural rubber in approximately 40,000 products. The order went into force the first of this month.

A NPA spokesman said the order was designed to conserve natural rubber for stockpiling, armaments, and industrial items for which demand will increase as the mobilization program advances during this year.

"DON'T BLAME US"

American Farmer Is on the Defensive

The American farmer is angry. He is on the defensive and he doesn't like it.

Since the government ordered price controls the farmer has been attacked with the charge that he is the "hog" in the high food price picture. And to make matters worse, there appears no way for the farmer to convince the consumer that he is not getting the big cut in higher food prices.

A number of farm editors in the midwest advise housewives to stop buying meat if they want to cut prices. They say the farmer is not getting the major share of the increase; that it is going to packers, wholesalers, processors, retailers and others. This view is widely shared through the midwest farm belt.

World War I Vet Praises Hadacol

HADACOL Supplies Vitamins B¹, B², Niacin and Iron Which His System Lacked

This little space is to be read by those folks who are always wishing they'd feel better. Now this business of wishing for "this" and wishing for "that" is all right. It sort of makes a person look to the future. But it is a mighty sorry state of affairs when folks keep wishing and wishing they would feel better. That just doesn't get the job done. Take Leo D. Fisher, 1001 Charles Street, St. Joseph, Missouri, for example. He just didn't wish he would feel better — he did something about it. He took HADACOL, and says he feels just fine for Mr. Fisher found that taking HADACOL helped his system overcome deficiencies of Vitamins B¹, B², Niacin and Iron, which HADACOL contains.

Here is Mr. Fisher's own statement: "I am a veteran of World War I. I have had stomach distress and was nervous and could not sleep. I had no appetite and could not eat any fried foods. I started taking HADACOL. I have taken 8 small bottles and now I am on my second large bottle. I eat anything. I feel fine and sleep good, thanks to HADACOL. I have recommended HADACOL to many people and they are taking it. I am a booster, for I cannot do without it."

If your druggist does not have HADACOL, order direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana. Send no money. Just your name and address on a penny post card. Pay postman. State whether you want the $3.50 hospital economy size or $1.25 trial size. Remember, money cheerfully refunded unless you are 100% satisfied. —Adv

Mayor Cook has not as yet named a Street Commissioner and will work with his Council on selecting a suitable man to look after the town property. Mayor Cook says he is well pleased with the men on the Council and that he is sure all will work together harmoniously for the good of the town.

Company Pays Out $1,500 In Taxes In Iowa Every Day Of Year

Hancock County Treasurer, Roy L. McMillin received a very sizable check the other day from H. O. Sandberg, manager of the Central States Electric Co. for $10,406.71, in payment of the first half of the 1950 tax to be paid by Central States Electric Co. for their property in the county.

The Central States Electric Co. is one of the biggest tax payers in the county, as well as in the state. The total tax payment by the company in Iowa amounts to $547,000 per year, or approximately $1,500 daily.

Mr. Sandberg states that the Company pays out in taxes 20 cents of every dollar of gross earnings.

WORTHY GRAND MATRON WILL VISIT GARNER EASTERN STAR

At a special meeting of the Eastern Star at Garner Thursday evening a banquet will be held in honor of the Worthy Grand Matron of Iowa and the District Instructress.

Past Worthy Matrons will serve a noon luncheon. Klemme will be represented by Miss Marie Blank, Mrs. Fred J. Arnold and Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson. The afternoon will be devoted to a School of Instruction and will be followed in the evening by the six thirty dinner and degree work in the evening. Members who wish to attend the dinner should get reservations.

DON SCHAEFER DEFERRED INDEFINITELY BY NAVY BOARD

Don Schaefer, proprietor of Don's D-X Service Station on Highway 69 west of Klemme, has been deferred indefinitely by the U. S. Navy Board and will not be recalled to active duty by the Navy.

Some months ago Schaefer was notified by the Navy to report for active service. He was given a deferrment until April to straighten up his affairs. He had been unsuccessful in disposing of his business and time was running out for him.

Last Wednesday Mr. and Mrs. Schaefer drove to Chicago and Don went to Navy headquarters to get an extension of time. His case was reviewed by the Board, who, instead of giving Schaefer an extension of time, gave him practically a permanent deferrment.

Mr. Schaefer is quite happy over the sudden turn of affairs and now can go back to work and continue to build up and expand his business.

GAS PIPES FOR KLEMME PROJECT ARRIVED LAST WEEK

With the arrival of a carload of iron pipe here last week end it looks very much as if Klemme will at last receive natural gas service this coming year. The Gas company has shipped its first carload of pipe for the project and will, if at all possible, start laying the gas line into Klemme this spring or summer.

It may be quite possible that the people of Klemme will be able to use natural gas before many months now. They have waited a long time for this modern convenience. Already a number of home and business owners have made plans to use natural gas for heating, cooking, hotwater heating and even refrigeration.

BASKET BALL GAME THURS. NIGHT LAST OF SEASON

There will be a basket ball game this week Thursday evening at the high school gym when the Independent men about town will play. This will be the last game of the season. No admission charge but the hat will be passed to defray expenses.

HAYFIELD VOTES $50,000 BONDS TO ENLARGE SCHOOL

Hayfield—A $50,000 bond issue for a new school building and equipment carried at a special election here Wednesday by an 82 per cent majority. Voters cast 192 of which 159 were in favor and 33 opposed to the bond issue. The present building is inadequate, the board says, and more space is needed for band and band equipment, shop, hot lunches and larger auditorium.

VOTE ADJOURNMENT OF SENATE APRIL 4TH

Des Moines—The Iowa Senate Friday passed a resolution calling for final adjournment of the 54th general assembly at noon April 14th.

Majority Leader Leo Elthon, Fertile, said the resolution would merely have the effect of a "goal" the legislature would shoot for.

He said definite adjournment date probably would not be determined until the second week in April.

The house recently sought to pass a similar resolution but could not agree on a date.

You're Invited.... TO THE 2ND ANNUAL IOWA SAFETY CONGRESS
ASSEMBLY AND EXPOSITION
APRIL 19-20 • DES MOINES...
HOTEL FT. DES MOINES
FOR RESERVATIONS AND INFORMATION Write to IOWA SAFETY CONGRESS 124 Des Moines St., Des Moines

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

ly and exposition in Des Moines, April 19-20.

You and all other safety-minded Iowans are invited and urged to attend.

Setting out to take coordinated action against the annual loss of more than 1800 lives in Iowa due to accidents and fires, the Congress divided its work into nine major areas of safety - - aviation, commercial, vehicle, farm, fire, home, industry, recreation, school and traffic

In its initial year, the group has done much to make a "safer Iowa." Last fall more than a dozen lives were saved through the "Drive Right Campaign" and Gun Safety Week, sponsored by the Congress.

A high school safe driving clinic and a fire prevention campaign were among other major projects.

Recently the Congress backed a program of emphasis on enrolling in first aid classes and sponsored the Safety Poster Idea Contest and 5 minute school lessons on the Safety Sake Weekly poster messages for all Iowa school children. Safety Sake posters, displayed in the more than 12,000 familiar stop signs throughout the state, direct attention to Iowa Safety problems.

So plan to be at the meeting April 19-20 and learn what you and your organizations can do to help in Iowa's "plan for safer living." Write for reservations and information to the Iowa Safety

JOLLY WORKERS CLUB NEWS

The Jolly Workers Club met at the home of Ruth Bachman Wednesday, March 28th. Fifteen members were present. We decided to send $2 00 to the Cancer Fund and $2.00 to the Easter Seals.

Nellie Ausborn passed out the greeting cards that we had ordered. Ruth Trampel and Nellie Ausborn had charge of the entertainment and gave a lesson on "Good Grooming." A lovely lunch was served by Ruth Bachman with Louise Pearson as co-hostess.

The April meeting will be at the home of Anna Ausborn with Norma Albers as co-hostess.

JUNIOR HIGH GIRLS WIN THIRD PLACE IN COUNTY TOURNAMENT

The Junior High girls won third place in the county tournament held at Crystal Lake on March 26-27.

Results of the first round were victories for Klemme over Goodell (46-6); Corwith over Kanawha by forfeit; Woden over Crystal Lake and Hayfield a bye.

Klemme's Rockettes came up against the fighting Corwith girls in the second round and were defeated by the score of 36-14. In the opposite bracket the Woden girls won over Hayfield 23-10

Klemme and Hayfield played for consolation honors with the Rockettes coming out on the long end of the score 32-16. Coach Juhl's Rockettes were behind 10-2 at one time during the second quarter and were also behind 10-6 at the half. After a very enthusiastic pep talk and finding our faults we went out the second half to show our stuff. We did and as a result we were the first junior high girls team to come home with a trophy for our trophy case.

The Corwith girls won the tournament as a result of an easy win over the Woden girls 54-20. Congratulations to both the Champions from Corwith, Runner-up Woden and to our own Klemme Rockettes.

Sgt. Albers Wounded In Korea

Sgt. Edward Albers, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Albers of near Belmond was wounded in action in Korea, according to news received by relatives. Sgt. Albers is with the First Marine Division. The Albers family are former residents of the Klemme community.

HELLO FOLKS

DISTRICT COMMISSIONER'S MEETING HELD

Plans for wildlife planting in Hancock County Soil Conservation District were reported by Vernon Moss, farm planner of the Soil Conservation Service, at the March 28th meeting of the District Commissioners. The Soil Conservation Service Nursery has informed Moss the Hancock District will receive 4 Wildlife Packets, 500 Jack Pine and 3000 Multiflora Rose for wildlife plantings. These are being planned to be put on farms under conservation plan to increase wildlife areas in the District.

The meeting of the District Commissioners was held in the SCS office in Garner Wednesday afternoon. Attending the meeting were: Chairman Ben Riemer, S. A. Barber, Martin Hinders, Vernon Moss, E. N. Fernley, Mercedes Formanek and Paul Henderson.

Two requests for farm conservation plans were approved They were: Alvin Johnson farm; tenanted by Donald Gifford in Amsterdam Twp.; and R. V. Upmeyer farm, operated by Merlyn Upmeyer in Liberty Twp. A replan on the V. A. Cook farm near Klemme was also approved by the Commissioners.

Moss reported receiving material on Rural Life Sunday and a possibility of having such an event in the county was discussed. Most of the material is already on hand and other has been ordered, which will be distributed to the clergy and plans begun for the event.

A meeting which was held in Mason City March 22nd explaining the PMA-SCS Merger was discussed by those who attended. All agreed District Commissioners would have a greater responsibility, and a greater amount of conservation on the land should be accomplished.

HANCOCK MUTUAL FIRM HAS INCREASE IN INSURANCE

A. B. Cooper of Kanawha was elected president of the Hancock Mutual Insurance association at a meeting of the board of directors following the annual stockholders' meeting at the I.O.O.F. hall at Garner Tuesday afternoon. A. E. Boman of Forest City was elected vice president; Orville Maben of Garner, re-elected secretary and Elmer Brooker of Forest City, treasurer.

At the stockholders meeting Orville Maben and Penn Eckels were re-elected directors for a 3 year term and Raymond Barz of Klemme was elected for a 3 year term to succeed the late Thomas C. Nelson, who served as president of the association for the past 8 years. John Huisinga of Woden was elected to fill the unexpired term of the late George Th. Gerdes. His term will expire in 1952.

The association was organized 62 years ago and has insurance in force totaling $25,000,000. This is an increase of $1,800,000 over the past year. Losses paid in 1950 totaled approximately $29,000.

BELMOND ASKS HELP FROM KLEMME FOR HOSPITAL

Belmond business men will visit Klemme this week Friday to solicit funds for the new hospital which is to be built in Belmond.

The new hospital will offer first class facilities in every respect and is being built to serve the surrounding community. $30,000 is needed immediately in order to assure the building of the hospital. The building will cost $180,000, and will replace the old Steele hospital familiar to many residents of Klemme and community who have been there as patients.

Dr. Dulmes, who has been invited to the staff of the new hospital urges that the Belmond hospital fund campaign be generously supported by Klemme and community.

DELWYN BREDE WINS TOPS IN STRONG FIELD

Won Two Blue Ribbons In Field Of 512 Top Quality Pigs

Delwyn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Brede of Klemme, entered three fall pigs in the Minnesota State Barrow Show and in a field of 512 entries Brede came out on top with two coveted blue ribbons.

One of Delwyn's awards was in the Junior Pen Market Pig division. The other was in the Junior Individual division of Market Hogs. For the latter showing young Brede picked one of three in the pen division.

Delwyn's entries were crossbreds, Duroc and Poland China and were picked from a litter of eight. He had kept an accurate record of these pigs in his 4-H work.

The exhibit totaled 146 pens, making a head count of 512 top quality market hogs, which made this show one of the toughest in slaughter hog competition in its history. Delwyn ranks among the upper one-fourth class. These hogs and all the blue ribbon winners were sold for 50 cents above the Chicago market price, which has amounted to $22.85. The winners also received a nice sum as a premium.

Delwyn was the only entry from Hancock County and the County Agent, Paul Henderson, remarked that he wish more boys were interested in this project so that there would be more entries from Hancock County.

Dale Brede and son, Delwyn, accompanied by Delwyn's grandfather, Roy Halfpop of Kanawha drove to Albert Lea, March 15th for the show. The men returned home the same evening but Delwyn remained for the duration of the show and came home on Saturday evening, a happy young man with his winnings.

GRAND JURY VISITS JAIL, COUNTY HOME

The Hancock County grand jury convened and made its annual inspection trips of the jails and the county home. The jurors reported finding the jails at Garner and Forest City clean, adequate and satisfactory. Painting and some repair was recommended at the Britt jail.

The jurors reported the county home under the management of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Paul, as steward and matron, is being efficiently operated and inmates satisfied and well cared for. A private telephone line to the home was recommended if this be feasible.

The grand jury made inquiry as to the filing of quarterly and annual reports by mayors and justices of the peace and recommended that those whose reports are in arrears be properly notified.

Edgar Mayhew served as foreman of the jury. Others serving Tuesday were: Wallace Donovan, A. G. Koerner, Semon Steiff, Budd Lawson, Ahtur Ross and Ray S. Baker.

Horse Laff

A politically influential motorist was hauled into court charged with a serious traffic violation. Looking for a convenient out, the magistrate kept demanding more and more evidence from the mounted policeman who had made the arrest.

"Were you the only witness?" came the final question from the bench.

"No, Your Honor," was the officer's weary reply. "My horse saw it too. Next time I'll bring him along."

FAIR VANITY

"Why did I sock my wife, Your Honor? Well, she kept deviling me all the time."

"Just how did she irritate you?" asked the judge.

"She kept saying: 'Beat me! Hit me! Go ahead, hit me just once and I'll have you hauled up before that bald-headed old reprobate they call a judge, and you'll see what he'll do to you'."

"Case dismissed."

Undoubtedly you have heard the story of the exasperated usher, badgered by an ill-mannered dowager who demanded a special seat for a murder mystery film who whispered in her ear just as the picture began, "The butler did it."

One of the pickets outside a reducing parlor whose staff went on strike adopted a somewhat similar techinque. He marched up and down in front of the shop's entrance, waving a sign that read "Don't patronize this place. The proprietress is fatter than you are."

WASTED BULLET

Pat and Mike were duck hunting. Pat saw a wild duck far overhead, and gave it both barrels. To his delight, he saw the bird fall to the ground. "Ye wasted that powder, Pat," said Mike.

Pat turned to Mike and said: "Didn't I get the bird?"

"Sure you did, Pat but the fall would have killed him anyway."

Bullpen Practice

A young interne, who walked past the psychiatric ward each morning and watched one of the inmates go through the motions of winding up and pitching an imaginary ball was finally asked by one of his friends why he stopped daily and watched the screwball go through the act.

"Well," he answered, "if things keep going the way they are, I'll be in there some day catching for that guy and I want to get onto his curves."

Painter Feels Good Again

HADACOL Supplies Vitamins B^1, B^2, Niacin and Iron Which His System Lacked

When a man works hard all day, he has to get a good night's sleep in order to keep going. Take Mr. Tony Wesalick of 1010 Tabor St., Houston, Texas, for example. Up until a few months ago Mr. Wesalick just couldn't sleep, had no appetite, and was bothered with indigestion. Then he heard about HADACOL and started taking it. A painter by profession, Mr Wesalick says that now he gets up in the morning feeling so rested, and so full of energy that he's almost never tired any more. He eats everything he wants without being troubled with indigestion, and has a wonderful appetite since HADACOL helped overcome his deficiencies of Vitamins B^1, B^2, Niacin and Iron.

Here is Mr. Wesalick's own statement: "I was run-down and I would get up in the morning feeling as if I hadn't slept at all. My appetite was bad, and I just didn't feel like eating, and when I did eat I had terrible indigestion. After a bottle and a half of HADACOL I felt much better. I have now taken about five more bottles of HADACOL and can eat and enjoy everything I want. I sleep much better and feel more rested. HADACOL has done this for me."

If your druggist does not have HADACOL, order direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana. Send no money. Just your name and address on a penny post card. Pay postman. State whether you want the $3.50 hospital economy size or $1.25 trial size. Remember, money cheerfully refunded unless you are 100% satisfied. —Adv.

Howl For Winner Hurts Football

By GRANTLAND RICE

THE FESTIVE (after a fashion) game of football has its share of troubles today, but nothing that encroaches on education is numerically too small to have any adverse effect on a student's career.

Grantland Rice

For example, in a midwest university of some 14,000 students you'll find around 100 football players. You will also find that in most cases the football player has to meet the same student requirements as anyone else. This isn't always true. There are colleges with low standards of admission and low student standards later on. But these are in the minority.

What is it about football that has caused Athletic Director Dick Larkin of Ohio State to label the game a "Frankenstein Monster"?

Apparently we have asked a question that we can't answer. What has hurt football is not only the demand for a winner everywhere—but also the various devices used in trying to get this winner.

You don't hear a demand from students or alumni for a winning baseball team—a winning crew—a winning basketball team—a winning track and field team—a winning hockey team. But if you have a losing football team for over a year the howl that follows is heard around the world as the losing coach is catapulted into oblivion.

The alumni and student body or bodies take to the warpath in full war panoply, including tomahawks. As fine a game as football is, we can't see that its importance belongs above all other sports. It is difficult to call a sport amateur that takes in from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000 at the gate in one season for one team. No other sport can draw 100,000 people for one game and often turn another 100,000 away The Army-Notre Dame game could easily have drawn over a million people at $5 a seat if there had been room enough. This is moving pretty high up for what was originally intended as "exercise, recreation and entertainment." A river is a fine thing for a community, but it isn't so helpful when it turns into a raging flood. A cooling breeze can be useful, but a hurricane or tornado seldom helps.

Suggested Cures

There is no questioning the fact that football's importance as a college sport should be brought back to the importance of other sports—if possible.

Many cures have been suggested. John Kieran, an ex-college athlete and a keen thinker, suggests that all gate receipts be abolished—as they are in some instances. That would be the complete answer.

Others have suggested the abolishing of all post-season and all Bowl games. This would reduce part of the annual autumn hysteria.

A big part of football's weakness is the pressure put upon college coaches. Such colleges as Princeton, Yale, Tennessee, Miami, Kentucky, etc., have answered this by signing coaches for 10 years or for life.

You can stop colleges from paying for talent, but no one yet has been able to think up a device that will stop alumni from offering under the table as much as $5,000 to a worthy athlete who can help win a few games. These outside funds often run from $100,000 to $150,000 a year. It costs around $250,000 to run a big-time football season.

A coach's job no longer consists of simply coaching a football team. He must become a touring orator, taking in banquets all over the map.

"I haven't been home with my family but two days since our season closed," one leading coach told me recently. "And that was over two months ago. If I have to look at rubber steak and stale potatoes again, I think I'll pick out some tall building for a jumping take-off."

Football is still a great game—one of the greatest of all competitive sports. It has simply been pushed into an importance it doesn't deserve. Just how to cure this overgrowth is something beyond our limited reach. Its so-called friends are the main wreckers.

The Big Smear

There have been intermittent scandal uprisings in sport between the Black Sox trouble of 1919 and the basketball mess of 1951. But these are the twin peaks of shame, corruption and complete crookedness. Baseball had a terrific letdown around 1918, 1919 and 1920 before Judge Landis took over in 1920. Any number of games were thrown by various teams and players in those three years. More than a few people knew about it.

Basketball has been under suspicion for some years. I first heard rumors of crooked play as far back as 1945. These rumors grew stronger in 1946 and 1947. They began to pick up force. Having little interest in basketball as a game to write about, or a game to watch, like many others I let these rumors slide.

KATHLEEN NORRIS

Stubborn Deaf

WHY NOT FACE THE FACT that you are deaf, or getting deaf? Why make your affliction—a very common one—a blight to your family as well as yourself? The blind are tremendously courageous in lessening the burden of their own particular cross for everyone; most blind persons take particular pains to assure you that they get along very well.

The toothless—also a large army in middle life—smile over their troubles. They smile rather as a picket fence might be supposed to smile, perhaps, but nevertheless they minimize their misfortune, if it is one, and assert gallantly that to be done with dentists and toothache and fillings and all the rest of it is a relief.

(A boy on crutches thanks you) as you give him a hand into a bus or train. Perhaps he lost that leg fighting to keep you free and secure, but he doesn't remind you of it; he thanks you. One man I know wears but one arm; he was young when a railway accident changed him physically, for all the years to come. He drives his car, ties his tie, manicures his hand, runs a big business, and says that perhaps that misfortune "kicked him upstairs." He might have been a cog in a big machine, with two arms. The shock of his loss forced him to think and act independently.

But the deaf! Why are they so sensitive?

"My daughters visited my mother in New York last year, looking forward to a wonderful time in the big city," writes Margot Younger from Plattsville. "It happens that my mother, my uncle, and an elderly cousin who lives with them are all rather deaf. The housekeeper is also deaf. None of these old persons would stoop to any of the hearing helps that are so wonderful now.

"... boy on crutches thanks you ..."

Deaf Go On Blandly

"The girls screamed and repeated and interpreted until they were hoarse. Then they secretly sent my husband a wire to say that on any pretext they must be summoned home. By co-incidence their brother was expected back from Seoul for a few weeks leave, and Ray used that as an excuse, and they came home. Of course, they were both disappointed and discouraged, and we all began to think of this question of the bald and the halt and the toothless and the blind, who face their own trials and carry them, while the deaf are going blandly on under the impression that nobody knows they can barely hear a word."

So much for Margot's letter. I quote it because when you are old you are constantly meeting this trying situation. Not long ago at a dinner I was seated between two elderly and impressive men, both of whom had almost lost their hearing. After you pass a certain age you rarely escape the necessity of having to shout, when you are in a group of your contemporaries. "Deaf!" breathes the hostess tactfully, as she introduces. And you come home from the party exhausted.

Patience Wins

One woman solved this in the case of a small, dainty little mother of 80, who had been a beauty and a belle, and was pretending that a wig, dental replacements, strong glasses and almost total deafness had not descended upon her years before. An aurist had ascertained that with a small apparatus attached to a thin cord, she could hear perfectly. But she wouldn't use it.

The family, her daughter, her son-in-law—a man of 50 who wore a hearing aid—her granddaughter and grandson conspired to bring her to reason. They began to talk in normal tones, and when the old lady shrilly demanded to be let in on the conversation they answered her in normal tones. They kept it up.

When the daughter explained that they were all afraid that the effect of shouting and explaining would be bad for the family nerves Grandma demanded indignantly, "What shouting and screaming? You don't have to shout and scream at me," she said. "Just stop mumbling the way you've been doing. I'll hear you."

"Then we'll go on that way," said the daughter inflexible. And again they did. And in less than three weeks Grandma was not only wearing a hearing aid, but hearing perfectly, back in the family circle.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Policemen Seen as Symbols

By Lawrence Gould

May a law-abiding person hate policemen?

Answer: Yes. And the less contact he has had with them as human beings, the stronger the hatred may be. For the "officer" is much more than a person—he's a symbol, and this is one reason why he wears a uniform instead of being dressed like anyone else. He is the embodiment of the restrictions which society's requirements put on the natural impulses of us all, from babyhood onward. The more harshly our parents imposed these restrictions on us, the more we shall tend to see the man who is a symbol of them as one to be feared and hated.

Is an "understanding" person at a disadvantage?

Answer: On the surface, it may seem so. If you understand why someone is in a bad humor, you will make allowances for him which you know he would not make for you, and you may be tempted to resent the fact that you "have o do all the adjusting." But what you are really envying is the other fellow's appearing to get away with being childish, even though your knowledge that childishness never is to anyone's advantage is what keeps you from acting as he does Take the "long view" and you'll realize that the advantage is yours.

Can music express humor?

Answer: Yes, writes Dr. Helen K. Mull, of Sweet Briar College, Va., in the American Journal of Psychology. Thirty college students who were "musical" agreed after listening to records that compositions like "Til Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks" or Rameau's "The Hen" are recognizably humorous even though one does not know what they are meant to picture. We might say that, in music as elsewhere, humor involves the descent from the sublime to the ridiculous, pleasing us by relieving the fear and awe which sublimity inspires.

Units for Studying Common Cold

By Dr. James W. Barton

WE HAVE ALL HEARD of cancer units—groups of research laboratory workers, practising physicians and chemists whose entire efforts are devoted to investigating the cause of cancer so that humanity may escape this terrible scourge.

On the same pattern, cold units have been established, to learn more about the common cold which, while not fatal in itself, nevertheless is the cause of much suffering and loss of time from work. It is, as well, forerunner of such dangerous diseases as pneumonia, bronchopneumonia and tuberculosis.

The findings of the Common Cold Research Unit, Harvard Hospital, Salisbury, Wilts., England, set up by the Medical Research Council and the Ministry of Health in 1946, are reported by Dr. C. H. Andrews in the British Lancet. The primary object of this cold unit was to try to find a laboratory technique with which colds could be conveniently studied. This object has not yet been reached. All attempts to cultivate a virus (the tiny organism believed causing colds) in fertile eggs or to infect by inoculation any laboratory animal other than the chimpanzee, failed.

Notwithstanding the failure of this unit to cultivate the virus and learn more about colds, some important information about colds was obtained by a study of injections into the nose of substances causing infection, into 899 human volunteers over a period of two and one-half years. Volunteers were isolated in pairs for 10 days of which the first three days was the quarantine period. Inoculations were made on the fourth day, test and control material being identified by serial numbers so that during the course of each experiment neither observers nor volunteers knew which material had been injected. In a test of the efficacy of the quarantine period and isolation precautions, of 47 volunteers receiving sterile injections (no organisms in the broth injections) only 2 developed doubtful mild colds and 45 had no symptoms whatever. Of those receiving injections of cold organisms, 60 per cent had symptoms of disease.

The Calendar Says Spring, But The Weatherman Says, Winter

North Iowa is still struggling with more or less winter weather. The past week we have had a mixture of some warm days, up in the 30s, some cold days below freezing, some rain, some sleet, some snow. Farmers are beginning to wonder when the spring field work will really start.

The rains and warmer days have melted lots of snow which in turn has caused rivers to rise and again threaten southern Iowa with floods. The Iowa River near Klemme was far over its banks and the lowlands along the river looked like a big lake.

CANCER CRUSADE TO RAISE $4600 IN HANCOCK

The 1951 Cancer Crusade will seek to raise $4600 in this county, to finance expanded programs of local education and service, and research on both a state and a nationwide scale.

The announcement made by Rev. S. Williard Cunningham, campaign chairman of the Iowa division of the American Cancer Society, at the Kick-off meeting held at Britt March 28th, pointed out that both the Iowa and national quotas are the same as in 1950, $301,900 and $14,565,000, respectively.

"Yet the cost of fighting cancer, along with everything else, is going up while funds for cancer control are not keeping pace with mounting prices," he said. "Therefore we must exceed our efforts of past years just to maintain the same level of attack against cancer."

"Nearly 28 per cent of all funds contributed in last year's Iowa Cancer Crusade is now being spent directly on cancer research. There are ten such research projects now being conducted in Iowa on funds given directly by the Iowa division.

In addition, the national ASC is sponsoring in Iowa two grants-in-aid and one fellowship. New avenues of attack previously closed to cancer researchers have been opened up this past year with the discovery of new clues to cancer."

"But even without new scientific discoveries it is now possible through early detection and prompt treatment, to save at least a third of the 3,900 Iowans and the 210,000 Americans who are dying of cancer each year. One out of five Iowans now living have cancer. One out of seven Iowans will die of it. That is too many."

The drive opened here in Hancock County April 1st and will continue to May 1st. If you are not contacted your contribution may be mailed to Cancer, Garner, Iowa.

TAXPAYERS PUT ON LAST MINUTE RUSH

The bad weather and blocked roads of recent weeks brought a flood of last minute taxpayers to the courthouse Thursday, Friday and Saturday to pay the first half of the 1950 property tax. Because of road and weather conditions taxpayers were unable to get in earlier and lines formed in the lobby of the courthouse frequently during the latter days of the week awaiting their turn at the cashier's window.

BRITT POWER PLANT PLANS STRIKE SNAG

Britt—The Central States Electric company's plan to erect another generating plant adjacent to its present plant in southwest Britt, ran into trouble as two residents in the area have refused to sign the building permit application.

In order to erect any type of building in the town, the builder must have a building permit signed by all residents within 300 foot radius of the proposed building.

Mr. and Mrs. William Schuver and Mr. and Mrs. Fay Bird whose homes are the closest to the Central States property, have refused to sign the building permit application. The Schuvers and Birds have also filed written objections to the building with D. E. Williams, town clerk. The matter is now up to the town council.

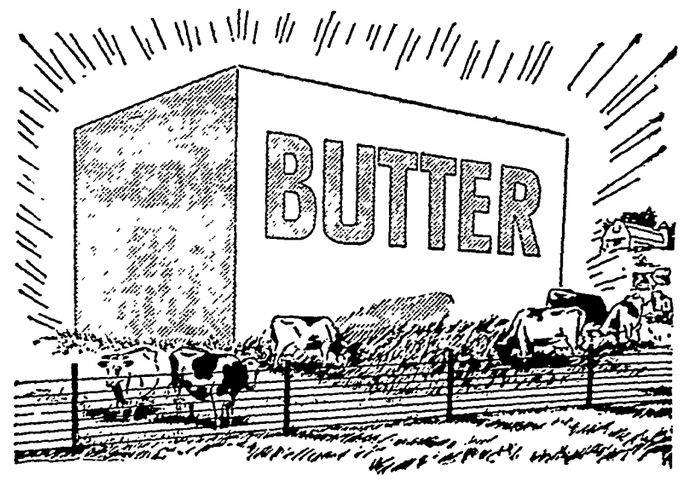
KLEMME SHOE REPAIR



it means SO MUCH to you...and to Iowa

To you and your family, Butter means Good Eating. For nutrition, for health, for downright goodness of flavor, there's nothing finer than good Iowa butter.

To Iowa land, Butter and Dairying mean increased productivity, for Iowa's 1,275,000 dairy cows provide a constant replenishment of fertility to help offset the effect of heavy cropping.

To every county in the state, Butter means steady income, through the steady milk and cream checks that mean good living for Iowa farm families—and good business for Iowa towns and cities. Last year, the value of Iowa's dairy production exceeded $175,000,000.00 — and Butter is Iowa's No. 1 dairy product.

Yes, Butter means so much to Iowa—and to you. Use it generously in cooking and baking. Let your family enjoy it at every meal. Penny for penny, it is an outstanding food value.

BOARD PROCEEDINGS

12TH ADJOURNED JANUARY MEETING

Garner, Iowa
March 19, 1951

The Hancock County, Iowa, Board of Supervisors met in session on above captioned date pursuant to adjourment with Clarence Bird, F. J. Schoun and Clint Daniels present.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved as read.

On motion and second notice of non-residence is hereby ordered served on Mrs. Joe Koenan of Goodell, Iowa and on John Harms of Goodell, Iowa.

This being the 19th day of March, 1951 a date heretofore fixed for the annual Board of Approval meeting as provided for by law, Section 309 31 and 309.32, Code of Iowa 1950, the representatives of the various Township Boards of Trustees and the Hancock County Board of Supervisors proceeded to act as a County Board of Approval and did review the proposed road construction program for 1951 as submitted by C. F. Merten, County Engineer.

On motion by Erwin Kahl of Erin Township and second by Reuben Grell of Concord Township said road construction program was approved as amended.

Said amendments being as follows and include grading and graveling.

CRYSTAL TOWNSHIP - amend from one mile between Sec. 23 and 26 to one mile between Sec. 26 and 35 - motion made by Leo Paulson and seconded by Edgar Mayhew.

BRITT TOWNSHIP - add west one-half mile between Sec. 15 and 22 - motion made by W. J. Rasmuson and seconded by Leo Paulson.

ELL TOWNSHIP - add one mile between Sec. 33 and 34 - motion by W. J. Rasmuson and seconded by Leo Paulson

AVERY TOWNSHIP - amend from through Sec. 32 to South of SE¼ SW¼ Sec 32 - motion by Edgar Mayhew and seconded by Reuben Grell

Chairman F J Schoun called the roll and a unanimous aye vote was recorded

On motion by Reuben Grell and second by W J Rasmuson, the Board of Approval adjourned subject to call of the County Auditor

IN THE MATTER OF DRAINAGE DISTRICT NO. 153

At a meeting of the Board of Supervisors acting for and on behalf of Drainage District No. 153 of Hancock County, Iowa, Supervisor Daniels read, introduced and offered the following

RESOLUTION

Whereas, Leo Paulson and others whose lands are included in Drainage District No. 153 have complained to this board respecting the laying of a tile through the culvert on Highway No 111 to extend Lateral D into the lands of Leo Paulson, and

Whereas, L. W. Mahone, Engineer, has made a change in the construction, and

Whereas, the tile has already been laid in said culvert, but the contract let for the construction of said work contemplated tunneling through said Highway No. 111, the present construction through said culvert be removed from the culvert back to a point approximately 50 feet east of the highway right of way, and that the 22-inch tile be relaid on the same grade as originally designed but on a line slightly south of the present construction, so as to lead to a point immediately south of the culvert, and that the construction through the road embankment be made as provided in the contract

And Be It Further Resolved that the tile through the road embankment shall be laid through the embankment on a flat grade such change and new work to be done in accordance with the provisions of the contract and the contract prices.

And Be It Further Resolved that the Board, or its Engineer, provide with the contractor for the extra work made necessary by reason of this change, such extra work being the removal of the tile from the culvert and such additional work as may be necessary by reason thereof, but that said extra or new work shall not be construed to permit the contractor for tunneling through said Highway No. 111, such work being contemplated in the original contract.

Said Resolution was seconded by Supervisor Bird and the Chairman put the motion upon the adoption of the foregoing Resolution, and upon call of the roll the vote was as follows

Supervisor Daniels Aye
Supervisor Bird Aye
Supervisor Schoun Aye
All members present.
Nays None

DENTAL HYGIENE

Child Dental Hygiene Changed Greatly as Result of School Study

WALPOLE, Mass.—In the schools here, they have added a new element to the traditional three R's, readin', 'riting, and 'rithmetic. The fourth item is brushing. Brushing the teeth has become a carefully controlled, carefully recorded daily event, as the children lend themselves to a study that may bring about a major change in child dental hygiene. Every afternoon school session in the past two years has had a period devoted to supervised brushing of the teeth.

The Walpole studies have been carried on by the Tufts College Dental School in Boston. Dr. Helmut A. Zander, professor of dentistry at Tufts, chose the town (population 9,000) because it offered the opportunity to study the dental problems of children in two schools representing similar home environment. In some cases, different children were enrolled from one family in each of the two elementary schools. His purpose was to note the effect of penicillin when applied locally as a dentifrice.

Following three years of laboratory study and experiments, Dr. Zander's research staff had settled on penicillin as an effective control for dental caries (cavities). They had eliminated several hundred chemical compounds during their experiments.

WALPOLE SCHOOL and health authorities cooperated with the Tufts hygienists, dividing 400 youngsters into two groups, one in each elementary school. Their ages ranged from 5-14 years. Each child brushed his teeth regualrly—following a course of instruction on the proper method for brushing teeth—under classroom supervision.

One group used a tooth powder containing penicillin, and known as dentocillin. The other group used the same tooth powder, without the added penicillin. Both groups were given dental examinations at frequent intervals.

The children who used the tooth powder with the added penicillin showed a reduction in tooth decay of 55.3 per cent at the end of the first year. At the end of the second year of the study, the same group had 53.8 per cent fewer cavities than the children who used the tooth powder only, without the penicillin formula.

Information on these studies has been requested by school administrators in many areas of the country, as the statistics developed.

To study the possibility of penicillin sensitivity or induced resistence to the penicillin ingredient, research was conducted by the Tufts dental hygienists on more than 4,000 adults. No serious reactions were noted, even in people with known sensitivity to penicillin in other forms.

THE FICTION CORNER

INSTINCT WINS

By Richard H. Wilkinson

WHEN "SNICKER" Snyder, owner-manager of the Whirlwind baseball club, signed on a new player he always handed the newcomer a sheaf of typewritten papers and told him to read every line. Snicker was 50 years old and had been affiliated with baseball and baseball players all his life. The game had certain fundamental rules, certain regulations that Snicker felt no rookie could possibly acquire on either a home-town or a college team. Therefore he had written them all down and he made each new player read them.

3-Minute Fiction

When Jock Dudley was handed the sheaf of papers he stared at it blankly and grinned. Snicker said sharply: "You read 'em, young feller! Every danged word."

Butch Garrison, Snicker's head scout, had found Jock. Butch was enthusiastic: "The kid's a natural," he told Snicker. "He plays by instinct."

"Instinct be damned!" Snicker said sarcastically. "Some players are naturally good, but, by gum, I've been in the game long enough to know you gotta learn the fundamentals or you get no place!"

Three days later in the bullpen Snicker watched the new rookie throwing a few to old Dutch Feverell. Snicker flew off the handle. He could tell by the way Jock was throwing them that he hadn't read the typewritten sheaf of papers. He called Jock aside and laid into him.

But a week passed before Snicker was sure that Jock had read the typewritten rules. Then he wasn't satisfied.

"Maybe he read 'em," he snapped at Butch, "but they

Facts, however, are facts. Jock pitched in 10 games that season and won them all.

didn't do him much good. He ain't polished yet."

"He don't need to be polished," Butch says. "I tell you the boy is a natural."

"You're crazy! That stuff's for books. It don't happen."

"It is happening," said Butch. "The kid's throwing 'em and he's hitting 'em. What more do you want?"

"Polish," said Snicker. "He's got to do better."

Facts, however, are facts. Jock pitched in 10 games that season and won them all.

Snicker wasn't satisfied. He wouldn't admit that Butch was right. Yet at the same time he did confess that Jock was a profitable addition to the team.

PERHAPS Snicker was right in his insistence. At any rate, throughout the winter training, Jock steadily improved. He had acquired more polish. Snicker was almost satisfied.

"See!" he said to Butch. "What'd I tell you! The kid's been reading my rules. It's helping him."

"You're balmy," Butch replied "The kid don't need rules."

And so the two old cronies continued to disagree throughout the summer. Jock Dudley brought laurels to the team.

Snicker was happy. He took all the credit for Jock's fame for himself.

The only thorn in his rosebed was Butch. Butch insisted that Jock's greatness was due to no one but himself.

"You're sore," Snicker told him, "because folks are giving me the credit. Every one knows one knows it's them fundamentals I thought up that put Jock where he is. Instinct! Nuts!"

Butch was fed up. He got sore. He told Snicker a few things about himself that Snicker had never heard before. "If you were anything but pig-headed," Butch roared at him, "I'd have told you some thing long ago."

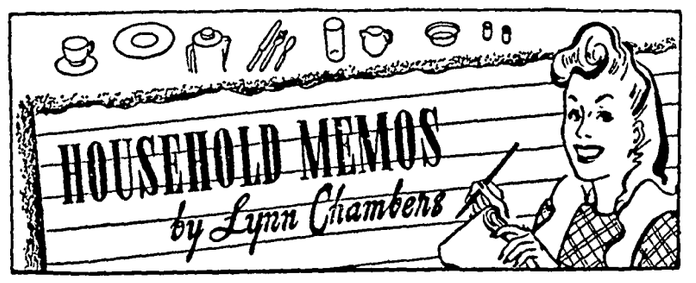
"Told me what?" yelled Snicker "I'm always willin' to listen to reason."

"If the reason fits in with your ideas you are," Butch yelled back "I'd a told you this long ago only I knew the kid was a natural, but you're so thick-headed you'd a thought he wouldn't make the grade unless he read your rules."

"He did read 'em!"

"Like hell he did! That kid that you're so sure got places because of your danged old fudamentals can't read or write! He never read your paper because he couldn't. Now what do you think of that?"

And Snicker didn't snicker.



Economical Easter Dinner Possible With Seasonal Vegetables

MOST OF OUR HOLIDAYS call for big meals that require a lot of preparation. Easter dinner can be different! Delicious to eat, lovely to look at with its generous sprinkling of fresh Spring green color in the foods, and simple to prepare is the Easter dinner if you follow these recipes.

Vegetables for the meal and the salad are seasonal, and thus economical; so, too, is the ice cream with its lovely green plums that require no preparation except the serving.

Lamb Shoulder Roast

Before roasting shoulder of lamb, be sure to note its weight in order to determine the proper cooking time. Low cooking temperature is important for best results. For roasting, wipe meat with a damp cloth, sprinkle with salt and pepper and place on a rack in an open pan. Insert a meat thermometer into a part of the roast which is free from fat and gristle. Roast in a low oven (325°) for 35 minutes per pound or until meat thermometer registers an internal temperature of 182°.

If you like a hint of garlic flavoring in the lamb roast, do this: Grate a clove of garlic and mix with 2 tablespoons olive oil or melted butter. Before roasting, cover the top of the lamb with this mixture, using a pastry brush.

HERE'S A TASTY way to use the leftover portion of the lamb roast:

Creamed Lamb on Toast
(Serves 6)

3 cups cold, cooked lamb, diced
4 tablespoons flour
4 tablespoons butter
2 cups milk
Salt and pepper
Paprika
Button Mushrooms

Make a white sauce of the butter, flour and milk. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Add meat and mushrooms, cut in slices. Serve hot on toast triangles. Garnish with a sprinkling of paprika and a sprig of parsley.

Quick Celery Crescents
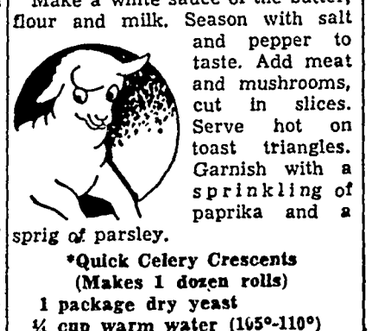
(Makes 1 dozen rolls)

1 package dry yeast
¼ cup warm water (105°-110°)
½ cup milk
1 tablespoon sugar
½ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons soft shortening
2 cups sifted flour
Melted butter
Celery seeds, salt.

Add yeast to water and let stand. Scald milk and pour into a large bowl with sugar, salt and shortening. Blend together and cool to lukewarm. Stir yeast mixture and pour into bowl. Mix in flour, one cup at a time. Place in a greased bowl. Cover with a damp cloth and let rise in a warm place for 30 minutes. Punch down. Toss dough onto lightly floured board. Roll into a 12-inch circle, ¼-inch thick. Brush with melted butter. Cut into 12 pie-shaped pieces. Stretch wider end of each piece a little as you roll, so the long point winds up on the outside. Curve ends to form a crescent. Brush with beaten egg. Sprinkle with celery seeds and salt. Let rise

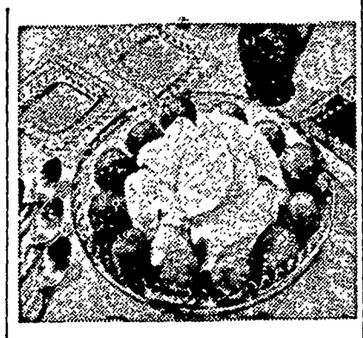


If you're fond of leg of lamb, you'll like the similar tasting lamb shoulder roast. It's not only a fine flavored cut of meat, but it also has the distinction of being an economy cut as well. Apricot halves with mint jelly centers offer a simple but tasty garnish.

LYNN SAYS:
Reflect Easter Theme In Food Preparations

Clever cookies for Easter can be cut from plain rolled cookie dough. After baking top with a slice of marshmallow and return to oven until topping melts. Sprinkle with green cake candies or one or two jelly beans.

To make Bunny cookies, cut plain rolled dough with a bunny cutter. Frost with confectioners' sugar icing. Tint remaining ice pink and apply nose, ears and eyes.



Let dessert for Easter be easy to prepare, so you can enjoy the holiday. Ice cream is simply placed in a large attractive bowl, then granished with canned, green gage plums. If desired, roll the plums in shredded almonds or other finely chopped nuts.

for 15 minutes. Bake in a hot (400°) oven for 12 to 15 minutes.

Franconia Potatoes

Wash and peel medium-sized potatoes. Rinse well in cold water. Parboil for 10 minutes, then place in pan in which meat is roasting. Bake until fork tender, about 45 minutes, basting with fat in the pan. Before serving, season with salt and dust with paprika.

Either asparagus or green peas are a good choice for a vegetable with the lamb dinner. Pay special attention to seasonings if you want them to be at their best.

Minted Peas

Cook green peas in a small quantity of boiling, salted water. Season with butter and minced mint leaves. Toss until leaves are well mixed with the peas.

Asparagus Polonnaise

Use fresh or quick-frozen asparagus tips and cook in a small amount of boiling, salted water until tender. In the meantime, melt butter in skillet, and brown fine dry bread crumbs in it. Toss this mixture into the asparagus just before serving.

Tossed Spring Salad
(Serves 6)

½ head lettuce
Few leaves of leaf lettuce
1 medium-sized cucumber
½ cup sliced radishes
1 green pepper
Salt and pepper
2 tablespoons blue cheese, crumbled
French dressing

Break head lettuce into bite-sized pieces. Arrange on leaves of lettuce. Add cucumber, peeled and sliced with radishes and green pepper which has been slivered. Sprinkle with salt and freshly ground pepper, then cheese. Add French dressing and toss lightly.

French Dressing
(Makes 1 cup)

¾ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon sugar
¼ teaspoon paprika
⅛ teaspoon dry mustard
¼ cup vinegar
¾ cup salad oil.
1 teaspoon minced parsley
1 clove garlic, cut

Combine all ingredients in a bottle; cover and shake. Chill and use as needed.

Plums for the ice cream dessert may be chilled in advance, though it's not necessary to remove them from cans or jars until almost serving time.

Ice Cream with Green Gage Plums
(Serves 6)

1 quart vanilla ice cream
1 No. 2½ size can green gage plums

Drain syrup from plums. Arrange ice cream in a large bowl with large spoon or scoop. Garnish or surround with the drained plums. Serve immediately with a pitcher of the syrup, drained from the plums.

Cream filling in biscuit baskets or tart shells becomes a special Easter treat when decorated with pale green coconut and jelly beans

Pears, cut in two, hollowed out and filled with cream cheese and mint jelly make a snappy garnish for any lamb cut, roast or chops

Plan to use some of those decorated Easter eggs, which have been hard-cooked, for Sunday night supper. Slice and fold into cheese sauce. Pour over some canned drained sardines which have been arranged on toast.

Your Bank Account Backs Up Government Deficits

By Wright A. Patterson

SINCE JULY 1, 1950, the government has spent more than it took in. The government now owes $255,979,876,517. Although the government is not taking in as much money as it is spending, it is paying all bills promptly. No one with a bill to collect is left standing on the steps of the treasury building to wait for more money to arrive. I have frequently wondered about the government's continued cash operations and have just had the answer.

• Government bills are being paid with the money of American bank depositors from both saving and checking accounts.

The government demands that each bank maintain an extra reserve in addition to that maintained for the protection of depositors. This is a sum equal to a prescribed percentage of deposits. Against this extra reserve, the government writes checks.

So, out of the money of depositors, the government writes checks in settlement of its debts when sufficient taxes have not been received. Simple, isn't it? People with bank accounts are financing government deficits.

I know of one rural bank that is forced to carry $4 million dollars of extra reserve so the government may draw on the bank for all or any part of that amount. The government pays no interest on that reserve it forces the bank to keep.

But the bank must pay the deposit insurance covering its depositors. The people of the community are denied the right to borrow any part of the $4 million. The denial affects not only the bank's earning, but the accommodations it can offer its patrons. The local economies are affected.

I do not know whether it was congressional or presidential edict that demanded this extra reserve, but it is a long step on the road to socialism. It socializes the money of people with bank accounts. If it is the result of presidential edict, it is a long step toward dictatorship. When government can control people's money, it can control all their activities.

The fact the government is paying its bills does not mean it is not going into the red. Bills are being paid from American bank deposits to the detriment of the banks' stockholders at a cost to the communities the banks serve.

It is fair to assume that the people of no community would have approved of such methods of government financing had they known what was happening. But neither the government nor the banks explained. It was just another of the moves the clever guys in Washington got away with.

Now that the method is well established, it undoubtedly will be continued until something more drastic takes its place.

Not since the period during and immediately following World War I have American farmers enjoyed such prosperity. During that former lush period, which they expected would continue indefinitely, the farmers went wild in the investment of more land. Then the war time prices dropped, leaving mortgaged farms and no high-priced market. To-day many of the mortgages have been paid off or greatly reduced, and prices for what they raise are still high, but the farmers should not continue to expect those prices to continue to advance. When and where it will stop is within the hands of congress, and the farmers should not forget that there are five urban votes to each one on the farms. When the families of the towns and cities get fed up with paying exhobitant prices for farm products they will appeal to their representatives at Washington and congress will act. The farmers must moderate their demands if they are to be allowed to continue a reasonable degree of prosperity. Just remember those five urban votes to one farm vote!

People on both the east and west coasts are clamoring for the installation of radar signal stations on both coasts as protection against Russian bombing planes. Congress made an appropriation for such installation, but nothing is being done. It is all talk and no action. That could be a job for the corps of engineers instead of the building of needless and expensive projects on which they are engaged, and which we could get along without.

ASSAULT ON ENEMY HILL . . . Men and tanks move out on an assault on an enemy-held hill north of Wanggok, Korea. Note soldier (lower left) who has stopped to fix part of his gear. Allied troops were pressing gains all along the front when this assault was made. The first marine division was back in the battle. A new Communist drive was expected, but attacks by the leathernecks near Hoengsong were designed to throw the new Red push off balance. The fighting has been characterized by steady but slow advances by UN forces up to three or four miles a day, no spectacular gains being made recently by any side.

VICTIMS OF AMBUSH . . . Bodies of American soldiers are found by United States troops advancing through the Hoengsong area. These men were trapped in ambush along the Wonju-Hoengsong highway nearly a week before other units found their bodies. The area in which the ambush occurred was being hotly defended by the Chinese Communists who were vanishing like will-o'-the-wisps from other areas it was thought they would try to hold.

God Invented Us

Lesson for April 1, 1951

"GOD INVENTED it," says C. S. Lewis about the universe. It is a 20th-century way of saying what the Bible says about God and the world. There have been whole religions based on the idea that God is good and spirit is good, but anything which is not God or not spirit is bad. If this were true, then our bodies would be bad, and all the physical world about us would be bad; our souls would be prisoners, so to speak, in a vast fortress of evil.

Dr. Foreman

This is not the truth the Bible tells. The story of Creation in Genesis tells us that when God had finished with making the world he saw that it was good, very good. He invented the world, he invented spirit and matter both, he invented us body and soul. Whatever evil is now in the world and in man did not come from God, it is not a mistake of God's. The world, as God invented it and intends it, is good.

The World Did not Happen

THE Christian church has changed some of its ideas about creation, but it has never ceased to believe in creation. Very few churches, if any, now affirm that the world was created in precisely six 24-hour days, and still fewer would be willing to name the dates on which creation took place.

Nevertheless the Christian church has not given up, and will not give up, her belief that God created all things. The doctrine of creation means, first of all, that the one God willed the universe and what is in it.

The universe did not happen. It did not make itself. It was not made by different gods working against one another. Zoroastrianism, for instance, teaches that the world was made by two gods, one of light and one of darkness. Whatever the god of light created, the god of darkness would make something exactly opposite. No, Jews and Christians alike say, there is only one Creator, the infinitely wise and good God.

Nature's Laws

NON-RELIGIOUS philosophers have sometimes said that the world explains itself. But Christian philosophers, not to mention Jewish ones as well, have seen that the world does not explain itself. There is too much evidence of purpose and design running through the patterns of the universe. Definite laws can be discovered and to some degree understood.

The same laws which govern matter on this planet, and indeed the very same elements, the "building-blocks of the universe," are to be discovered in the remotest stars. If the universe were an accident it would not be tied together as it is.

It would not be a universe of law but one in which nothing could be counted on, nothing expected. It would be no universe but a multiverse, a mad world, indeed no world at all but an infinite confusion.

Why Are We Here?

BUT CREATION means something more personal. It means that we ourselves have been called into existence by the Almighty,—not by a god of mere sheer power, but by the one God of infinite and all-powerful Love. Man is not here on this planet by some trick of blind fate, mankind is not a mere fleck of foam tossed up by the restless ocean of the Infinite, soon to be washed away in the ebbing tides. Man—that means also, we ourselves—are God's invention.

We are not now as he intended us, to be sure; sin has changed the picture sadly, as we shall be thinking next week.

Why are we here? We are here because God put us here. This means that life has a meaning; but also that we cannot find that meaning without knowing the will of God. His will is for our welfare; only the Creator knows what is best for his creatures. God intended this world to be used by us, not abused.

When any man or group of men get the notion that this world belongs to them alone; or when one generation misuses the resources of the lands and the waters, leaving to their descendants a wasted earth, then God's will in creation is being defied. But when we take his will as life's guide, we are on the way to fulfilling his purpose in Creation.

Labor's Recent Revolt Called Open Warfare on Truman Administration

LABOR IN REVOLT—The Truman administration has had many and varied difficulties in its history, but few of them ever approached the seriousness of labor's recent revolt against the government's mobilization effort. The decision of labor to withdraw from the wage stabilization board and other government agencies amounted to a declaration of war on the Truman administration.

The united labor policy committee, composed of 14 top officials of the C.I.O and A.F.L, ordered the withdrawal. As a result, labor men resigned from 24 advisory posts and other positions in defense agencies, including the military.

A MAIN STREET FEATURE

Labor made it clear that it felt "big business" dominated the mobilization effort, and that the several labor men in top federal jobs were used merely as "window dressing." The charge of "big business" was directed at Charles E. Wilson, director of the office of defense mobilization, who ignored labor when he first took office.

Labor was especially bitter about the 10 per cent wage formula as recommended by economic stabilizer Eric Johnston. The union leaders were not pacified when Johnston exempted from the wage ceiling all cost-of-living escalator clauses in union contracts written before January 25.

These grievances were serious enough in themselves, but there seemed to be other motivating facts behind labor's revolt. Hidden behind the curtains of petty disagreements was the fear of a labor draft during the present crisis, the same fear that labor struggled against during World War II.

In the interest of mobilization and the well-being of the nation, peace between the administration and labor has become a pressing, desperate need.

HOUSEWIVES' DISTASTE—It has been said by critics of this country that the United States is ruled by women, that our economy and way of life centers around the wives, sweethearts, daughters, sisters and mothers of the nation.

An example of the woman's influence on the nation's economy was reflected in the meat markets of the nation when housewives' distaste of costly cuts of beef caused some real price roll-backs.

A nation-wide canvas revealed that prices were cut from 10 to 25 per cent on the more expensive cuts of meat. And in every case, the price-cutters declared housewives' lack of relish for high red meat prices was the main reason for their action. There was evidence, too, that this trend might continue since meat supplies are abundant and getting more so. The agricultural department is on record as saying "prospects are for a larger meat production in 1951 than in 1950."

Meanwhile, the agriculture department had other interesting statistics for the general public, namely, farm-product prices climbed to a record level in February. The figures revealed that prices paid farmers for all their commodities was 2.25 per cent higher than the old record set in January, 1948, and about 26 per cent above the level prevailing before the Korean war.

However, despite the high level of the farm commodity market, only nine major products were selling at or above parity—the price standard declared by law to be equally fair to farmers and those who buy their products. The products above parity were beef cattle, veal calves, lambs, sheep, cotton, cotton seed, wool, rice and soybeans. Such products as wheat, corn, peanuts, potatoes, butterfat, milk, oats, barley, rye, flaxseed, grain sorghums, dry beans, citrus fruits, apples, sweet potatoes, chickens, and eggs were bringing less than parity prices.

CASUALTIES TOTAL 50,675—The people of the cities, home towns and crossroads of the nation were beginning to feel the full force of the Korean conflict. Every day families in communities across the nation were being notified of casualties of war. The latest summary listed 50,675 wounded, missing or killed in action. Of the total, 7,639 were reported killed, 33,041 wounded and 9,635 missing.

And while American troops had suffered the greatest number of casualties, the 10 other nations fighting beside U.S. and South Korean troops reported casualties totaling 2,813. The breakdown showed Australia with 48 killed, 200 wounded, 6 missing, 2 prisoners; France with 44 killed, 201 wounded, 3 missing; Greece, 20 killed, 45 wounded, 1 missing; Netherlands, 24 killed, 76 wounded, 2 missing; Philippines, 150 casualties (not broken down into categories); United Kingdom, 145 killed, 442 wounded, 244 missing, 61 prisoners.

WATCHFUL WORLD—As deputy foreign ministers of France, Great Britain, the Soviet Union and the United States met in Paris in an attempt to work out an agenda for a big-four conference, a watchful, but pessimistic world waited for announcement of first results.

Considerable doubt existed as to whether or not even an agreement on an agenda could be reached among the four nations. The Soviet Union indicated it would stress the German problem and charge the western powers with rearming western Germany. On the other hand, the United States announced it would direct the discussion to the vast build-up of arms in the Soviet Union and its eastern European satellites, and argue that those arms are the basic cause of the world's ills.

It was believed doubtful, therefore, that the big four could even agree on a list of subjects about which the big-four could talk with any hope of success.

It was also reported the United States would try to put the settlement of an Austrian peace treaty on the agenda, an achievement long sought by this government, but continually blocked by the Soviet Union.

Even if the deputy foreign ministers could reach agreement on an agenda, there exists little hope that the big-four can reach any settlement of the world's ills that will materially decrease the possibility of open conflict in the immediate future.

SPRING OFFENSIVE—The threat of a big spring counteroffensive by the Chinese Communists still hung over the Korean front as United Nations troops continued their push northward. Heavy movements of troops were reported at several points behind the Red lines.

Increasing numbers of Communist trucks were reported moving south into Seoul and the Reds stepped up night mortar and artillery fire from the old South Korean capital. There were also indications that a new Chinese division may have been moved into Korea in preparation for the expected offensive.

Frontline observers pointed out that the Chinese have switched from night to day operations, usually a sign of desperation. There was no indication, however, that either side could chop out a clear-cut victory that might terminate hostilities. It remains a battle of Chinese manpower vs American firepower.

REDS DECLINE IN EUROPE—An indication that the Communists are losing the battle to take over western Europe by boring from within was revealed in a state department report that said the party had lost a third—1,295,000—of its members in the west since World War II.

The report said there were 1,673,000 Communist party members in western Europe (except Italy) in 1946, and 2,300,000 in Italy in 1948—a total of 3,973,000. The number dropped to 2,678,000 in 1950.

ATOMIC BOMB

Scientist Says It Could Destroy Russia

The often-questioned power of the atomic bomb was given a shot in the arm by one of the nation's leading scientists recently when he asserted that American atomic bombs "would destroy Russia" if the Soviets started war in Europe now.

Dr. Vannevar Bush, president of Carnegie Institute of Washington, one of the codevelopers of the atom bomb, said: "We could destroy not only the key centers from which her (Russia) armies would be supplied, but also political centers and the communications of her armies on the march. Initially equipped with weapons and supplies, those armies might keep rolling for a time, but there would be no Soviet Union behind them as we know it at the present time."

Higher Education

Percy had written home to his dad, asking for funds. He received a check by return mail in the amount of $10, with a little note appended: "My dear boy, you had better brush up on your spelling. For your enlightenment $10 is not written with two ciphers."

"Pat" Patterson Has Fine Record As Coach Here

PRODUCED 9 CHAMPIONSHIPS IN 7 YEARS

Basketball Teams Won 123 Games And Lost Only 48

Athletic Director "Pat" Patterson has resigned his position with the Klemme High School as both coach and principal after an enviable record over seven years.

Wesley Patterson came to Klemme in 1941 to take over the job of coaching, following on the heels of "Bodge" Bowles who enlisted in the army after 2 years at Klemme in which he built up a fine basketball team.

Won County Championship

During the 1941-42 season Coach Patterson's basketball team won 20 games and lost only three. They copped their first County Basketball Championship and were in line for a Sectional Championship but lost to Swaledale by 1 point.

Repeat Following Year

In the 1942-43 season, Patterson's basketball team again repeated by winning 20 games and losing 3. They again repeated by winning the County Championship and then breezed through the Sectional dumping Class A teams: Corwith, Belmond, Garner and Britt in that order. They then went into the final of District play and lost by one lone point to a powerful Iowa Falls team. That was the only year that there was no class distinction in district play and the Klemme B team should have gone to the State that year if they could have stayed in their class.

Pat Goes To The Army

"Pat" had to break off from coaching for 3 years as he had a job to do overseas, but when he came back to Klemme for the season 1946-47 he again whipped his outfit into top condition and his boys racked up 21 wins and 5 losses. They also had championship ideas so proceeded to again knock off a County Championship, a Sectional Championship, but lost out in the final District round to Rudd at Mason City.

Hit A Poor Year

The season 1947-48 was not quite up to parr, but better than the average B teams up around here when Pat's Shamrocks won 18 games and lost 6, which was not a bad record but they won no championships. They won second place in the County tournament and lost a Sectional title to Holy Family.

1948-1949 Season A Repeater

You just can't have a championship outfit every year and the 1948-49 season was rough However, the Shamrocks came through with 14 wins against 10 losses. They were, however, a real threat in the County Tournament and came out with a runner-up trophy. In the Sectional they lost to a Meservey team by one point in the last few seconds of play on an intercepted pass.

Shamrocks Snap Back Again

Patterson's Shamrocks made a real come-back for the 1949-50 season when they racked up 20 wins against 4 losses. They again sailed through the County tourny and won the Championship. They looked like State Tourny calibre and were rated to go clear through to the State. However, Meservey again repeated the same old stunt of the previous year with 3 seconds to go with the Shamrocks leading by one point the tall Meservey lads stole the ball and flipped a basket just ahead of the gun . . . . shattering the Shamrocks hopes of going to the State.

Past Season Not Too Good

The past 1950-51 season was Patterson's worst season as his Shamrocks won 10 games and lost 17. They wound up 4th in the county tourny, but gathered speed after that and won a Sectional Title at Forest City but were knocked out of the District by Ventura.

Total Outlook Good

Summing up Coach Patterson's record, it is one of the best coaching record in North Iowa. Patterson's Shamrocks have won 123 games and lost 48. The Trophies won include:

4 County Championships
2 County Runner-Ups
1 Fourth Place
3 Sectional Championships
2 Seven Eagles Championships.

Patterson has not decided just what his future occupation will be. He will, however, complete his summer college work on his Master's Degree and will be eligible for a Superintendency. He says he would like to go on his father's farm sometime and may take up farming sometime in the future. He may also go into business if he decides to give up the teaching profession.

Cappon Named Coach

Franklyn Cappon, high school teacher, has been named as coach here for the coming year. Mr. Cappon grew up in coaching as his father is at present coach of the Princeton University basket ball team. Mr. Cappon has prospects of a fairly good team coming up as some of the reserves this year, as well as the regulars are shaping up for a fine team in the next year or two.

WEATHER REDUCES SPRING PIG CROP

Some heavy losses have been reported to young pigs in the past weeks because of cold and wet weather. Hancock County farmers are keeping approximately 10 per cent more sows for spring farrow than a year ago. About the same number of chickens being hatched as a year ago and here too, the bad weather of March has caused some loss.

It now appears that spring seeding of small grains will be behind the seasonal average due to prolonged cold weather and heavy precipitation during the month of March. Several weeks of good weather will be required before farm operations can get under way.

This is a public safety service of your safety-minded businesses and this newspaper in cooperation with the Iowa Safety Congress.

Clean up! Paint up! Fix up! It's time for spring housecleaning. Yes, now is the time to don old clothes and give your nome a new look for the warm months ahead.

Is your home really clean and bright—and safe?

What about those ashes and old newspapers in the basement, that dingy basement stairway and that loose step on the back porch?

A few hours work and a few dollars invested in paint and repair materials will get rid of that useless trash and avoid a nasty fall downstairs or a fire.

Old clothing, paper and junk left around the basement or garage are a constant fire hazard. Dark, cluttered halls and stairways cause many of the 33,500 yearly home accident fatalities.

There are countless other things around your home that need attention after the hard winter months. Furnaces, roofs and gutters, water faucets and outlets, electrical wiring and fixtures, are just a few.

Your Iowa Safety Congress reminds you: A clean, well-cared for home is a safe, healthy home. So do your part in the Clean up - Fix up campaign.

Band Concert

BAND CONCERT DATE MOVED UP TO NEXT WEDNESDAY EVE

Stanley Bulka, Director, To Report Back For Army Duty

The Klemme School Spring Band Concert date has been moved ahead one week from April 25 to Wednesday evening, April 18th because Stanley, Bulka , director, has been called back into Army service.

Monday Mr. Bulka received orders from the War Department to report for physical examination at the Air Force Base at Rantoul, Illinois on April 22. Processing will consume the balance of the week after which he will report for duty at Patterson Field, Ohio.

Mr. Bulka will then be given a 40 day leave before reporting back for active duty.

KANAWHA LUTHERAN CHURCH WILL OBSERVE 50TH ANNIVERSARY

The Kanawha Lutheran Church will observe its 50th Anniversary on Sunday, April 15, with special morning and afternoon services.

A big dinner will be served at noon by the ladies of the congregation.

MARTIN BRINKMAN SERVED 27 YEARS ON FIRE DEPARTMENT

Irwin Lau Resigns After 30 Years Of Service With Company

Two of Klemme's really "old timers" in length of service have resigned from the Klemme Fire Department.

Martin "Slim" Brinkman, who has been Chief for quite a number of year, decided that he had put in his share of work after having served faithfully for some 27 years. Chief Brinkman has engineered the fighting of hundreds of fires in this community and has seen the fire department grow from a hose cart pulled by men or hooked back of a dray wagon, to a better Model T Ford Truck on which the hose was mounted, up to the time when the fire department became the owner of a large, modern, fully equipped truck purchased through the cooperation of farmers and townspeople. A year ago another large modern truck was purchased by Liberty and Ell Township and added to the Klemme Equipment.

With two modern trucks here the Town of Klemme built a new Fire Station in which the trucks are both housed.

Serving somewhat longer on the Fire Department is Irwin "Oofie" Lau, who put in about 30 or 31 years of service and was serving as Vice President at the time of his resignation. Like Brinkman, Lau is one of the "old timers" and also saw the local volunteer fire department "grow up." His brother, Lloyd, still a member of the Company, has served even longer. He is still a member of the department.

Some of the largest and worst fires the men have fought included the double front Ford Garage and Pool Hall building east of the Creamery; the old Hotel fire, the old Gruetzmacher Implement shop, the John Day and Ed. Jacobs stores on Main street and later the new Jacobs brick building, and more recent the Northern Implement Co. building. Of course there were innumerable houses, barns, and other buildings in town and out in the country to which the department was called.

Brinkman and Lau are both to be complimented for their fine spirit of community service throughout the year. They can feel proud of a job well done.

Kothenbeutel New Fire Chief

At a meeting of the Fire Department held Friday evening the members voted Harold Kothenbeutel as the new Chief; Graydon Back, Assistant Chief; Fred Bell was re-elected, President; Harvey Barkema as Vice President, to fill the position of G. Back and Elwood Geary as secretary and treasurer, to succeed "Mike" Lemke, who has held that position for 3 years.

Two new firemen will be appointed to fill he vacancies of Brinkman and Lau. At the present time there are 10 members on the Fire Department.

HELLO FOLKS

O.E.S. CHAPTER HOLDS SCHOOL OF INSTRUCTION

Past Worthy Matrons Entertain At 12:00 O'clock Luncheon

Mrs. Norma Long, District Instructor and Past Grand Martha of Iowa, of Renwick, Iowa, and Mrs. Dorothy Harris, Worthy Grand Matron of Iowa, from Council Bluffs were guests of Relief Chapter, Thursday, April 5th.

At twelve o'clock a lunch was served by Relief Chapters Past Worthy Matrons. The tables were beautifully decorated representing Spring, with the lattice fence, spring flowers, miniature bird houses, with little birds sitting on the fence, and daffodil nut cups, and printed napkins.

During the afternoon a school of instruction was held at the Eastern Star Hall, and each officer was instructed in the regular work of the Order.

At six o'clock a dinner was served in the dining room to 90 guests by a Methodist Circle group. The dinner table carried out the Spring Rain idea, decorated very beautifully with umbrellas, and carnation trimmed candles, with an array of Pastel napkins decorated with Stars.

Mrs. Burdette Beers, Worthy Matron, with her husband as Worthy Patron presided over the meeting in the evening where initiation was exemplified.

Following is a list of guests presented:

Mrs. Dorothy Harris, Worthy Grand Matron of Iowa; Mrs. Josephene Ruhsman, Worthy Matron of Minnesota; Mrs. Fannie B. Hammill of Britt, Chairman of the Ritual Committee of General Grand Chapter and Past Grand Matron of Iowa.

Mrs. Jessie Wheeler of Waterloo, resident of the Home Board at Boone and Past Grand Matron of Iowa; Mrs. June Watson, of Waterloo, Grand Marshall of Iowa, Mrs. Norma Long, District Instructor and Past Grand Martha, from Renwick; Mrs. Lulu McCoy, Past Grand Ruth, from Williams, Iowa; Mrs. Elma Freeman, Past Grand Ada, from Clear Lake; Mrs. Maude Wood, Grand Representative of Washington in Iowa, from Mason City; Mrs. Luella Hanson, Grand Representative of Delaware in Iowa, from Britt; and Mrs. Hubbard, District Instructor, from Worthington, Minnesota.

There were eighteen chapters represented by guests: Mason City, Clear Lake, Forest City, Britt, Corwith, Williams, Renwick, Kanawha, Grundy Center, Belmond, Strawberry Point, Council Bluffs, Nora Springs, Waterloo, Livermore, Jesup, and Albert Lea and Worthington, Minnesota.

Mrs. Leo Brown, Associate Matron presented Mrs. Harris, and Mrs. Long with gifts. Music was furnished by the Garner Trio Trumpet Players, and the Mens Quartette. Mrs. "Pat" Patterson, and Mr. McLaughlin of Britt, who sang the "Lord's Prayer," at the close of the Chapter.

The Grand Worthy Matron, Mrs. Harris gave a fine talk, outlining the Worthy Matrons Project for the year.

Mrs. Ruhsman, Grand Worthy Matron of Minnesota gave an interesting talk also and told of some of the changes in the work in her State.

After the ceremony of closing, refreshments were served by the social committee in charge.

The Chapter enjoyed being hosts to the largest crowd they have ever entertained at a Chapter Meeting. The last time a Grand Worthy Matron had visited the Garner Chapter was in 1913 when Annie E. Kellogg was Worthy Matron, and Edward T. Wesson was Worthy Patron.

MEEING FOR SOFT BALL SEASON THURS. NIGHT

Everyone, old and young interested in soft ball for the coming season are invited to attend a meeting at the Fire Station this week Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Both prospective players, business men and fans are all invited to attend the meeting.

Klemme has had a good soft ball team and a lot of people like to attend the games. Klemme wants to keep the soft ball team going, so come out and take part in the meeting.

Town Drivers

KLEMME OFFICIALS CLAMP DOWN ON TRAFFIC VIOLATIONS

The Klemme town officials have adopted a policy of clamping down on traffic violations and are going to enforce the laws with arrests and fines.

Monday evening Marshall Smid arrested Fred Hemness of Story City and brought him before Mayor V. A. Cook. Hemness plead guilty to driving through a stop sign and was fined $3.00 and costs.

On Tuesday morning Stephen Farington of Garner appeared before Mayor Cook and was fined $2.00 for making a U-turn in a posted zone.

Mayor Cook is also holding court this Wednesday afternoon for violators arrested by Marshall Smid Sunday evening. The result of the hearings will be published next week.

Mayor Cook, backed by the Town Council, states that the laws must be obeyed. Those who insist on breaking traffic laws will be dealt with accordingly. Marshall Smid, Sheriff Brower and the Highway Patrol will work together to carry out the law.

Mr. Cook stated, "We are not trying to be tough, but we can be tough if we have to. Some people just have to learn the hard way."

NEW FARM BUREAU HOMEMAKER'S CLUB ORGANIZED

Women from Ell school district No. 3 and 4 met to organize a homemakers club to carry on the action program through the remainer of the year. Thirteen women attended the organization meeting held at Mrs. Clarence Greiman's on April 2.

Mrs. Ray Ford was elected chairman of the group and Mrs. Harold Stromer was elected as secretary. Mrs. Clarence Greiman, Mrs. Verner Stromer, and Mrs. James Steward was appointed as the program committee.

HOUSEWIVES, ALERT

HAVE YOU been watching the ads for dress and suit sales? Housewives alert! for clothes-prices are going higher and higher, with the government prying up that lid on retail price-controls. So hurry, hurry, hurry to your favorite dress-store! And if you can't find just what you want for that spring wardrobe, why not whip up your own?

Home sewing has become the American woman's top hobby, and a most practical one it is these days of mounting clothes prices. Today 28,500,000 women are stretching their budgets by making their own clothes—and many of their home furnishings.

A MAIN STREET FEATURE

There never was or never will be a better time to join the 28,500,000 than today. Tomorrow, with the drain for defense needs, fabrics may not be so plentiful, but today there's a larger selection than ever before. Wool jersey, double-layered for the tubular treatment, flannels, colorful prints in both rayon and silk are all available for spring.

RIBBONS AND BOWS

Plentiful too are ribbons and other trimmings to dress up your old clothes or give that good suit a new touch, and to furbish the new clothes you make or buy. There are patterns galore published in your newspapers and magazines, and available at your general or dry-goods stores. And think of the saving of cost and taxes!

Even that new bonnet would be a cinch for your creative imagination and capable needle. You'd never see another like it, at least until your frineds asked "Where did you get that hat? Make me one like it!"

While you're about it, why not make your own slip-covers? After all, they're just chair dresses, aren't they? Fabrics for slip-covers and drapes are also new and many, and with furniture getting scarcer and more expensive, why not preserve what you have with new slip covers?

As for knitting—that's the one form of dress-creation possible to the TV fan.

Larger Number Of Small Town Students Urged

CHICAGO, Ill.—An increase in the number of medical students from rural areas was suggested as a means of increasing the number of physicians practicing in such areas. This might be accomplished either by preferential consideration of applicants from rural communities or by encouraging and assisting well-qualified students from small towns to attend medical school.

This opinion was expressed by Dr. Harold S. Diehl of Minneapolis, dean of the medical sciences, University of Minnesota. Dr. Diehl was a speaker at the 47th annual congress on medical education and licensure.

Dr. Diehl reported the results of a study of the present practice location of 545 graduates of the University of Minnesota medical school in relation to the type of community in which they grew up. For the purpose of tabulation and analysis, communities were divided in three groups: (1) with a population of less than 5,000; (2) with a population of 5,000 to 100,000, excluding Rochester, where the Mayo clinic constitutes a special situation; (3) Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth.

Of the 199 doctors who grew up in small communities of less than 5,000, 116 returned to small towns to practice, 35 went to towns with a population of 5,000 to 100,000, and 48 went to one of the three large cities.

Of the 104 doctors who grew up in towns of 5,000 to 100,000 population, only 25 went to small towns and rural communities. Of the 242 who were raised in large cities, 53 went into rural community practice.

This tabulation, Dr. Diehl pointed out, indicates that the chances of a student brought up in a small town of returning to such a town are more than 2½ times as great as the chances of a student from a large city going into a small community to practice.

Eisenhower Says He Would Employ A-Bomb Under Certain Conditions

DECISION— "To my mind the use of the atomic bomb would be on this basis,

"Does it advantage me, or does it not, when I get into a war? Now, if I felt that the material destruction that I was going to accomplish was not equal to the moral or great reaction otherwise to this act, then I would abstain.

"If I thought the net was on my side, I would use it instantly, because I proceed from this basis: The United States is not going to declare war or conduct an aggressive campaign. It is merely going to defend itself, and if someone, in spite of its peaceful purpose, jumps on it, I believe in using what we have in defending ourselves."

A MAIN STREET FEATURE

With these words Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower told the world—friend and foe alike—just how far he would go to defend western Europe. It was the kind of clear-headed, logical reasoning that people in the home towns of the nation could understand. It reaffirmed their faith in the man chosen to fill the most important post in modern history.

It is this kind of reasoning and determination that the Communist nations of the world understand. And if the world understands this reasoning, it could mean another step toward the preservation of peace.

18-YEAR-OLDS— It would be difficult to say at this point who was more surprised by the 79 to 5 senate vote that passed the bill to draft 18-year-olds, opponents or supporters of the measure.

For weeks the debate had raged in the senate over lowering the draft age from the 19-year-old limit. And although the bill must go to the house for action, it appeared that much of the pressure against the administration's defense plans has been relieved. Most observers were inclined to believe the bill will eventually reach the President's desk.

Striving desperately to make peace between labor and the administration, Eric Johnston (center), economic stabilizer, met several times with union leaders in Washington. Shown with Johnston (left to right) are: Meany, AFL; Leighty, RLEZ; Hayes, IAM; Murphy, presidential council; and Goldberg, CIO.

The senate vote caused considerable speculation across the nation. In the first place, the man on main street wanted to know is it possible for five senators—the number who voted against the measure—to bombard the U. S. senate with so much propaganda that it completely ties up important legislation for weeks? Second, what happened to the other senators who had ranted and raged against drafting the 18-year-olds? And third, were the statements by opponents that the mothers of the nation flooded Washington with telegrams against the draft entirely true?

NO! NO! NO!— After a full week of conferences, watched anxiously by the "average man" who does not understand very clearly the niceties of diplomatic language and maneuvers, the foreign ministers' deputies of the United States, France, Britain and Russia, meeting in Paris, had nothing to report.

The only statements were "no, no" issued by Russia's Andrei Gromyko to every proposal put forth by the western powers.

Gromyko first gained the attention of the home-towners of the nation as the "no" man of the United Nations.

The main point of difference between the west and east remained the subject of rearming Germany.

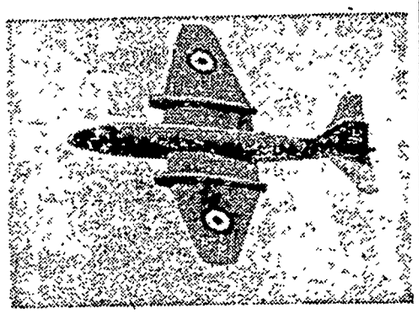
KOREAN BATTLE— Slowly, methodically United Nations troops advanced in Korea, storming the hills, digging the Communists out of foxholes with bayonets, stopping and breaking a Red attack at other points, but always pushing toward the 38th parallel.

U. N. commanders continued to expect a spring offensive by the Reds, scheduled for some time during the last part of March or April. Meanwhile, the Chinese suffered severe casualties as U. S. troops pushed ahead, estimated by some observers at 20,000 to 30,000 in two weeks.

There were reports that the Communists had 200,000 men in the front lines below the parallel. In addition they were reported to have 100,000 more troops in immediate reserve in North Korea and a great reservoir, perhaps more than 300,000, across the Yalu river in Manchuria.

RUSSIAN ARMS— According to Russian reports the Supreme Soviet (Parliament) has adopted a 1951 budget of 451½ billion rubles, of which 96 billion would go for defense purposes.

Russia has placed a value on the ruble of four to the American dollar, but since there are so many imponderables involved, the rate does not reflect the true position of the ruble. If the rate is taken, it would indicate a total defense budget of $24 billion.



The U. S. air force has ordered of Glenn L. Martin of Baltimore, Md., an undisclosed number of the British Canberra twin-jet bomber above. Britain gave the U. S. the plans for the plane as a part of the mutual aid pact between the two nations.

However, Soviet production, through use of forced labor and purchases from dominated countries at extremely favorable rates, is considerably cheaper than that of the United States.

A NEW JOLT— The administration's price stabilization effort which has been called nearly everything, including "fraud", received another jolt, this time in the black and white of the wholesale price index.

The bureau of labor statistics' index hit an all time peak of 17 per cent above pre-Korean war prices and 20.2 per cent over a year ago. The bureau said all major commodities advanced except building materials.

The new figures wiped out any hope that the stabilization effort had finally started taking effect and a leveling-off was about to take place. The figures also brought renewed charges from labor that it would take a law "with teeth in it" to stop the inflation spiral.

Michael V. DiSalle, price director, told worried housewives in a television speech that it would be three more months before ceiling prices on food will be posted in stores. It couldn't be done sooner, he reported, because food prices vary by localities.

LAST HOPE— The supreme court refused by a vote of 6 to 0 to review the case of Alger Hiss, convicted of giving government secrets to a Russian spy ring before World War II. It was Hiss' last hope of escaping a five year prison sentence.

The Hiss trial made headlines in the nation's press for months. A guilty verdict and prison sentence was returned after a second trial.

The slender, brilliant attorney has stubbornly denied the charges of giving away government secrets.

COST OF LIBERTY

1,000,000th Man to Die for Country

The cost of liberty is high for this Republic.

As mothers and fathers throughout the nation ponder over the world's ills and worry about their sons in service, or soon to join the armed forces, somewhere in the mud and filth of Korea the 1,000,000th soldier to die for this nation may already be a casualty.

Adding in the Korea casualties, 995,100 men have died in defense of this Republic. This total, however, is not up to date since reporting of Korean casualties is two to four weeks behind. The latest Korean total stood at 52,448. Of these, 8,853 were dead of all causes and 9,899 missing. The remainder were wounded. This amounted to 300 weekly since the war started last June.

Marrying Harriet

"WE ARE THE MOST unmarried family you ever heard of," writes 19-year-old Harriet Sloper, from a Cleveland suburb. "Mother has been a widow since I was four and my sister Elena 10 years old. We have two half-sisters, teachers and part founders of a girls' school. Mother's sister, unmarried, lives with us. We all talk marriage and beaus and romantic affairs—mostly imaginary—all the time, and we're all unmarried.

"We have a big house and plenty of money; Mother has a car, Elena drives to and fro in her own car to a good job in Cleveland; I have a small car, attend college, but live at home. My half-sisters live at home.

"It is the fashion in this family," this unusually frank letter goes on, "to talk as if men were rather inferior beings, and as if we all had refused several good chances to marry. Lilian and Frances, my half-sisters, like to imply that they wouldn't marry the smartest man who ever lived. But this is not so. They are 34 and 37 now, and it is my honest conviction that neither one has ever had a real offer. Lil talks of some captain she met at the canteen in the last war, and Fran has snapshots of herself taken with several men when she was in college; that's all. Elena is delicate, reserved, bookish, fastidious. They all like her at the office, and the other girls tell her of their affairs, but nobody calls on her.

"... I envied her ..."

Wants To Marry

"Now, my problem is," Harriet goes on, "that I want to marry, and marry young, because that seems the safest way. My chum, 20 years old, eloped with a married man last Christmas, and they had an awful time getting his marriage annulled and everybody cried and talked to lawyers and was horribly shocked. I wasn't shocked; I envied her. I'm not unusually pretty, but I have a good figure, swim, play tennis, love hikes and camping—and I'm friendly. I've won prizes dancing, and I was president of the class in my last year high, and voted the best all-around citizen in the whole school.

"So why don't men come to see me? And why doesn't one of them, after we've had an afternoon of tennis, and a hot weather supper with my aspic and my strawberry ice cream, reach over and squeeze my hand when we're sitting out on the steps? What haven't I got? I want a home, I want children and a kitchen and a lawn to rake and a man to meet when the afternoon train comes in. Is that so unreasonable?

"I don't want to dry up and wither on the family stem; I want life!" Harriet's letter finishes. "Mother can't help me, she talks as if marriage was one long trial for a woman. Certainly my sisters and my aunt are no help; they are really a hindrance, watching and interested and all, but asking any man who ventures into our house what his intentions are. There must be men as anxious to find a good mate as I am. I forgot to say that I am studying to be a public librarian, and hope to have a job in about 14 months."

Sit Tight

That's the letter, and in answer I wrote Harriet that I would advise her to sit tight for those 14 months. I would advise her to give up the job of hunting for a sweetheart in these discouraging circumstances, but devote herself to her work, and to the family.

Then, when she graduates, let her go to the head of the library board and explain that she wants to go away. It will be a very simple matter for her to carry her new credentials to some other city, and the family, though perhaps shocked, cannot find that course anything but natural and understandable. Once away from home Harriet will make new contacts, meet all sorts of new people, spread her wings. Before she knows it she will be taking an acceptable man home for the family's approval.

That is, if nothing happens in the meantime.

But something romantic is extremely likely to happen in the meantime. Just her plan to go away will make her more interesting, and her enthusiasm over the complete change, with all it involves in clothes and luggage and books to read and a new fountain pen, will take her attention off the young man to whom she is talking, and make him a little anxious to get it back again.

Over and over again in this life, when we pull ourselves out of a rut and make one plan, another unexpected plan shoots across it.

THE READER'S DATE BOOK

Seventh Annual Sunday School Week Scheduled for April 9-15

One of the most important observances for the home towns of America during the coming month will be the observance of National Non-Sectarian Sunday School Week, April 9-15. Sen. Styles Bridges of New Hampshire will serve as chairman of the 1951 observance.

The acceptance of Senator Bridges to be chairman during the week of the observance which is designed to increase by hundreds of thousands the regular attendance of children in Sunday schools of all faiths, was made public by Dr. Alfred P. Haake, chairman of the layman's national committee, a non-sectarian, non-profit organization, sponsoring the activities for the seventh year.

A MAIN STREET FEATURE

Senator Bridges in accepting the post of chairman said:

"Ever since its inception, the National Non-Sectarian Sunday School Week has been a growing movement. It has the single objective in mind of impressing upon every American man, woman and child his responsibility to God and country.

"America was founded upon the principle that every nation's ultimate trust must be in God.

"Today, in face of the world situation, I am more convinced than ever that that faith which was so much a part of the lives of the founding fathers of our country, must find a rebirth. In the minds of those who are trying to build a sane and peaceful world our nation and the other free nations of the world today are committed to a life and death struggle with atheistic communism. This battle can never be won alone by force of arms or diplomacy. The ultimate strength which America brings to this struggle must come from a people consecrated to the principle that spirituality is the final reality.

"I believe, without hesitation, that the layman's national committee, through the National Non-Sectarian Sunday School Week, can make a much needed contribution to the strengthening of the spiritual life of our nation.

"I have agreed to serve as chairman of this very important movement. Our task this year is to form a 'committee of 100,' consisting of 100 outstanding executives, representative of 100 different industries to serve as honorary vice chairmen."

People in all walks of life, in the home towns and cross roads of the nation, will be encouraged by proclamations and statements of their governors and mayors to make this week a major one in their communities. Veteran groups, industrial organizations, labor unions, civic and fraternal organizations, women's clubs, youth movements, chambers of commerce, and other organizations have been asked for personal participation.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, in a statement read at the recent convention of the American association of school administrators, expressed one of the purposes of the observance when he declared the development of integrity and civic responsibility in all American youth is an essential element in the defense of the American system of government and democratic life.

This is the official poster to be used during the seventh annual observance of National Non-Sectarian Sunday School Week, April 9-15, 1951. It has already been posted throughout the nation.

RURAL ELECTRIFICATION

Efficient Use of Electricity Is Vital in Time of National Crisis

BY CLAUDE R. WICKARD
Rural Electrification Administrator

Adequate supply and efficient use of electricity on the farm in time of national crisis can well spell the difference between ample production for wartime needs and serious shortages.

In the last decade and a half, electricity has proved itself an effective tool in producing more food with less human labor. The nation consequently has much to be thankful for because there are 3,000,000 more farms now than at the time of Pearl Harbor wired and ready to use the power of electricity.

An increasing number of farmers know what electricity can do for them. This is shown by how quickly they put this new power to more and more farm tasks once service is available.

Farm labor already is hard to find, and many materials important to the farmer will increase in scarcity. Electricity provides a means of offsetting these shortages because it enables the farmer to do more with less.

With nine out of ten farms already connected to the high-lines, and construction being speeded to reach most of the others, farmers are in a better position than ever before to meet the nation's emergency needs. They have an opportunity to use electricity for their benefit. They have a responsibility to use it for the nation's benefit.

We know that in many tasks a one-horsepower electric motor, using a few pennies worth of power, can do as much work in an hour as a man can do in a day. We know that poultry and egg production, for instance, show 10 to 40 per cent increases with the use of electricity. A simple homemade pig brooder, made largely of a light bulb and some odds-and-ends of lumber, will cut losses at farrowing time by 30 per cent.

Electricity works through machines and appliances. Now there is a good possibility the farmer's electrical equipment will not be as easy to replace as has been the case. Repair parts may even be difficult to get if the emergency lasts any length of time.

This makes it highly important that farmers do everything possible to keep their power equipment in good running order. We strongly urge farmers to check over every piece of electrical equipment on their farms—clean it up, oil it as required, replace worn cords and broken plugs.

The county extension agent and other workers in the extension service either at the county or the state office will have information in this field of farm operation.

Iowa Testing Landing Fields for Small Towns

OSCEOLA, Iowa — Four Iowa cities are leading the way toward an airport program nearly every small town and city can afford.

Osceola, Hampton, Ida Grove and Guttenburg now have single-strip airports, adequate for farmers' and businessmen's private planes.

Each of the airports was built at a total cost of well under $1,000. They adjoin a main highway and are only a mile or so from town.

EASTERN STAR MET TUES. EVENING AT GARNER

The Eastern Star met Tuesday evening at Garner in regular session and later a social hour was enjoyed when Mr and Mrs. Burdette Beers were honored for their recent 50th wedding anniversary.

Tables were beautifully decorated with lovely color with sweet peas in vases. Novelty nut cups and place napkins added to the attractiveness of the color theme.

For a center piece Mrs. Mildred Day had baked and decorated a large cake, topped with a miniature bride and groom.

Mrs D P. Anderson, Mrs. Ernest Gerard, Mrs Day, Mrs. Leonard Swanson and Mrs. Art Arnold were the serving committee from Klemme. A program of songs was enjoyed and Mr and Mrs. Beers were presented with a silver offering as a gift.

A Mother and Daughter Banquet, sponsored by the Naomi Circle of the Klemme Methodist Church will be held Friday evening of this week.

Miss Agnes Jacox of Forest City will be the speaker and she will show pictures she took in Egypt and the Holy Land. Her talk will be given in the auditorium and the program beginning at 7:30 p. m. may be heard by any not attending the banquet.

It is expected that about 200 women and girls will attend the banquet.

Study Group Meets Thursday

The Study Group of the Klemme Methodist W.S.C.S will meet this Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs F J Arnold with Mrs Claude White and Mrs Roy Arnold as hostesses. Mrs. Henry Busse is Devotional Leader and Mrs Kenneth Medin is Lesson Leader.

SCHOOL NEWS

Kindergarten New

This past week Richard Miller had his sixth birthday. Richard brought us all such lovely treats.

We had one of our little girls move away. Darlene Lund had joined our class in October. We were sorry to see her leave us. The children hope she will like her new school and wish her a lot of happiness.

Last Monday I received a lovely letter from Nancy Kaye Smutzer, who moved to Cedar Rapids a few weeks ago. Nancy told us of her experiences in her new school. We certainly welcomed her letter.

First Grade News

We finished our phonics workbooks this week and have taken them home.

The Fairy reading group have finished the first unit in their readers and have started the second unit entitled Our Friends At Work.

Marie Hadsell treated us to frost sticks Friday to celebrate her birthday which was March 10th.

Mrs Roy Swanson visited our room last week.

Mrs Sumner Fuller visited us Wednesday afternoon of this week.

We have been bringing pictures of birds for our bird corner. We had many nice pictures this week.

—Mrs. Brinkman

Second Grade News

Our Weekly Readers told us that this was "National Laugh Week." In observance of this fact the children brought funny pictures and cartoons; learned funny songs, told funny happenings at talking time; and were read funny stories and poems.

Warmer weather found us taking long walks. It was lots of fun walking through mud and puddles seeing who could get the least wet.

We have a new girl in our room. Her name is Annette Drake and she came way from Rhode Island. We all hope she will like being here with us.

Miss Brones

Third Grade News

Since the playground has been so wet to play on this week the children decided they should take excursion trips through Klemme. So each afternoon we took certain parts of the town and observed the different signs of spring. They had a very enjoyable time watching for the different early spring birds.

We had two birthdays in our room. They were Jerry Hacketts and JoAnn Jacobs. Both of them treated the class.

A great many of the children have brought spring pictures which are now boardering our walls.

—Miss Sebben

Fourth Grade News

This week we have been studying about the Congo Land in geography. We found it fun comparing this land with the Sahara Desert which we studied previously.

Those to get prizes for getting perfect scores in Daily Instruction for a whole month are Harlan Baack, Myrna Barz, Jerry Janssen, Virginia Kudje, Jerry LaFavre, Cozette Lau, Carroll Priebe, Dorothy Roul, Mardell and Marlin Stadtlander.

In Arithmetic we started with fractions, and now find it very easy to add them.

LITTLE CATTLE FEEDERS MET MARCH 29TH

The regular meeting of the Little Cattle Feeders 4-H Club was held at the home of Larrie Hindman Thursday the 29th of March.

Our leader, Gene Janssen handed out 4-H calendars and enrollment sheets for the fair. Larrie Hindman gave a report on use of heat lamps. Dick Gilpen gave a report on construction of farrowing pens. The finding of teams to play was discussed and Carrol Morris and Cleon Prestholt were given this job. It was decided that we would have a float again this year.

The motion for the meeting to be adjourned was made by Carrol Morris and seconded by George Dirks. The next meeting will be held at Gene Janssens.

FARM BUREAU GROUP ARE GUESTS OF LAWMAKERS

Twenty-five Hancock County Farm Bureau members visited both the Iowa house of representatives and the senate recently. This trip was awarded to them by the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation for their outstanding record in "get-out-the-vote" program carried on prior to the primary election last year.

Hancock county was ingeniuty in the district and second largest county in the state in the number of eligible voters who voted in the primary. The trip was made in cars furnished by Gilbert Guenther, Jerry Fox, Verne Grau, Elsie Mae Van Wert and Paul G. Shurts.

The group was introduced from the floor in both the house and the senate and had conferences with Hancock County representative Penn Dickels and Senator Herman Knudson. After visiting both the house and senate the group was invited to Governor Beardsley's office and the governor expressed his appreciation for the fine work done.

Following a dinner at Bishop's cafeteria, the group toured the Farm Bureau building at 10th and Grand. Those making the trip were: Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Fox, Mrs. Ed. Cink, Mrs. Richard Schubert, Mrs. Lyal Fox, Mr. and Mrs. Gibert Guenther, Mrs. Richard Madson, Mrs. John Paulson, Mrs. John Dolphin, Mrs. John Benhuis, Mrs. Donald Burk, Mrs. Aaron Stromer, Mrs. Harold Haberkamp, Mrs. Norman Madson, Mrs. Gordon Schubert, Mrs. William Hoeft, Mr and Mrs. Paul Shurts, Mr. and Mrs. Verne Grau, Mrs. Kenneth Olson, Mrs. Jerome Erdman, Mrs. Harold Rockow and Elsie Mae Van Wert.

Mrs. Daisy Lemke Honored With Party On Birthday

Last Wednesday evening Mrs. Daisy Lemke was honored with a birthday party at her home when her children and families came to spend the evening. Games were enjoyed and a nice lunch was served. Mrs. Lemke received many nice gifts from her children.

Sylvan C. Oleson, Forest City drainage contractor was the successful bidder at a letting held at the courthouse Monday afternoon on the cleanout of lateral No. 16, drainage district No. 1 and 2. His bid was $2,313 on the project. A contract was awarded by the Hancock County board of supervisors to Oleson.

The project will entail the removal of approximately 7,088 cubic yards of silt and dirt, some clearing and the lowering of a concerte culvert. Work on the project will get under way as soon as weather and soil conditions permit. William Henschen, Garner drainage engineer, was appointed construction engineer on the project.

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

By Ray Eastman

Just for our own enlightment, sometime, try to draw from memory a picture of the back of one of your hands. See how faithfully you can put down the tracing of the veins, the creases of skin over the knuckles.

Chances are, you'll find the back of your hand is really quite a stranger to you. And that's the point of our story:

* * *

It's great, thought Joe, to come back to the old home town looking prosperous—big car, good-looking clothes, and a few extra pounds that spell good living.

As he wheeled off the highway on to the dirt road that led out from town to the folks' farm, he turned to his wife.

"Well, Edie, things begin to look familiar? he asked.

"Yes, except I've never been here in early spring," she answered. "And Joe, aren't you going a little fast for this road?"

"Naw, not in this car," he laughed. "Besides, I know this road like the back of my hand."

But spring thaws and rains make soft spots, even in familiar roads—holes that can wrench a steering wheel right out of a man's hands. That must have happened to Joe, judging from the tracks and the way the car rolled. There's no way to find out for sure, of course. Joe was killed in the crash, and Edie died on the way to the hospital.

HANCOCK COUNTY BOARD PROCEEDINGS

13TH ADJOURNED JANUARY MEETING

Garner, Iowa
March 26, 1951

The Hancock County, Iowa Board of Supervisors met in session on above captioned date pursuant to adjournment with Clint Daniels, F. J. Schoun and Clarence Bird present.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved as read.

On motion and second the extension of time of the contract on the completion of D.D. No. 13 by Lee I. Osborn of Muscatine, Iowa, is hereby approved.

On motion and second Dr Thomas McMahon of Garner, Iowa is hereby awarded a contract to furnish medicine and medical care at the Hancock County Home for the year 1951, beginning April 1, 1951 and ending April 1, 1952.

This being the 26th day of March, 1951 a date heretofore set for a letting on the printing of the 1950 Financial Report of Hancock County, Iowa, the time having arrived for said letting, the proof of publication being on file and the Board being fully advised said letting was held as scheduled.

The Chairman of the Board proceeded to open all bids on file and after duly considering all bids on file, the bid of The Klemme Times of Klemme, Iowa is considered the lowest and best bid therefore.

BE AND IT IS THEREFORE RESOLVED that a contract be awarded to The Klemme Times of Klemme, Iowa for the printing of 350 copies, in booklet form, of the 1950 Financial Report of Hancock County, Iowa.

The foregoing resolution was offered and read by Supervisor Daniels who moved its adoption, was seconded by Supervisor Bird, whereupon the Chairman, F J. Schoun, placed the motion of its adoption and upon roll call the vote thereon is Clint Daniels, Clarence Bird and F. J Schoun, ayes. Nays, none. Whereupon the chairman declared the resolution duly adopted

MODERN HEATING

Dirt-Free Home for the Average American Rapidly Approaching

The dawn of the dirt-free, dust-free home for the home owners of the nation, which will relieve the average housewife of endless hours of drudgery, is rapidly approaching.

The building industry reports that home builders in all parts of the country are not only installing air purifying devices to remove dust particles, but also are concealing the heating pipes and radiators in walls, ceilings and floors.

It's a far cry from the days of the 1870's when great-grandfather first installed a central heating system and gave up his attempt to heat his home with fireplaces.

Today the American home builder is taking cognizance of old Roman methods and is using hot water to heat his house and is burying the pipes out of sight and sound

The Greeks may have had a word for it, but the Romans were the ones who pioneered heating practice. Their fabulous baths at Pompeii and Caracalla contained steam rooms, "hot rooms", and "cold rooms", all of which precluded a knowledge of the three basic heating means known today—hot water, steam and warm air—and, of course, a smattering of air conditioning.

What is it for which heating experts have been searching all this time since the fall of Rome? To tell the truth, nobody was doing much searching at all in the thousand years immediately after Rome's eclipse. The fireplace served quite well, with all the functions of the home being done in, over or in front of it until the middle of the 18th century when Benjamin Franklin invented his stove.

This stove, a very neat invention at the time, was the forerunner of the modern warm air plant. It also was the grand-daddy of all dust dispensers and dehumidifiers. It used a large amount of fuel and gave off a minimum amount of heat.

DURING THIS TIME, the use of steam as a heating means also was evolved, first in England then in the United States. It's use followed, naturally enough, the development of the boiler and the radiator.

Hot water heating had its start in the chicken coop of one M. Bonnemain in the France of 1777. Mr. Bonnemain used a crude hot water loop to spur the incubation of chicks. Hot water, off to such a promising start, did not do well in competition with steam, however, until about 1920.

Today's homes are no longer uncertain compromises between heat and dirt, heat and health, and heat and cold With radiant panels, or with radiators recessed or concealed in walls or baseboards, the full use of the space of the room is available. The air remains cool and sensibly moist, whatever the room temperature desired.

Proof of the economy and performance of modern hot water heating is its exclusive use in large developments like Levittown on Long Island, perhaps the largest heating installation in the world. Here, forced hot water systems supply heat to the radiant panel floors, and serve year round by furnishing the domestic hot water for baths, kitchens and laundries from the same boilers that heat the homes.

The perfection of radiant heating to the installations in general use today, leaves only one uncertainty —what now in heating? Where to go, short of atom heat? Home builders will have to wait and see, but whatever it is it will be good.

THE FICTION CORNER

COMPLETE WITH GADGETS

By Richard H. Wilkinson

DANA BRIDGES is a printer by trade, but every one says he should be a salesman. He has a very competent and confident manner. His choice of words is vivid, his gestures impressive, his delivery powerful.

3-Minute Fiction

Back in 1934 Dana bought a Northland Special Six. As every one knows the Northland is one of the most expensive cars on the market. Dana's income is not large, but he is the type of man who likes the best or nothing.

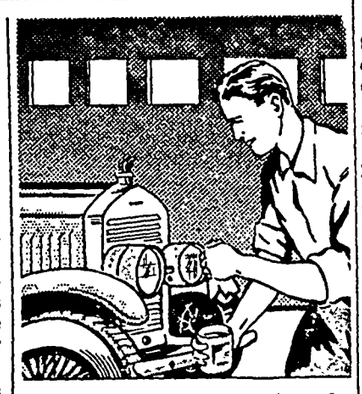
"In the long run a Northland is the best buy," he told his wife. "It will outlive three smaller and cheaper cars."

Rachael, Dana's wife, knew by experiece that Dana usually knew what he was talking about.

So when Dana stated they ought to own a Northland she nodded and smiled and felt confident that everything would be all right. She didn't, however, anticipate owning and driving the same car for 16 years. Not that she minded too much. The Northland, as the world knows, is expensive enough so that the manufacturers don't have to change the design too radically each year. Fundamentally the 1934 Northland had the same lines that the new 1950 Super Special possessed.

Moreover, Dana being a painstaking type of person, kept the machine in perfect order.

Nevertheless, it was an ancient hack and the neighbors used to grin when the Bridges' drove by, and Rachael felt embarrassed and wished that they could have a new car.



Dana was a painstaking type of person and kept the machine in perfect order. The paint looked like new.

"Why," Dana demanded when she hinted at such an idea. "The old hack's doing all right. No engine trouble. Looks good. Why swap her in?"

After the Bridges' had owned their Northland seven years a salesman tried hard to sell Dana a new car Dana listened to his talk and then asked what he'd offer for the 1934 model. The salesman named a figure so low that Dana got mad and kicked him off the place. And Rachael decided, with a sigh, that now their chance of buying a new automobile was remote indeed.

She was right. For 16 years the Bridges' kept their Northland Special Six, and after awhile the neighbors stopped laughing and some of them began to think that maybe Dana was pretty smart.

IN THE SPRING of 1950 Dana drove his Northland Special down to the Northland salesroom and told the floorman he wanted to buy a new Super Special Eight, complete with radio, heater, clock and any other gadgets they had.

"Have you a car to trade in?" the salesman asked.

"Sure," said Dana. "It's a pip, too. A 1934 model."

"You mean, of course, a 1944 model," the salesman said politely.

"No," said Dana, "I mean 1934."

The salesman coughed. "I'm afraid we can't allow you very much on a car as old as that."

Dana waved an airy hand. "Take me to the president of this outfit. I can't be bothered with underlings." He glared at the salesman.

So a few minutes later Dana was ushered into the president's office. "Commere." he said to the president, beckoning him to a window. "See that shiny, good looking car out there? It's a Northland 1934 model. It's been driven over 200,000 miles. It runs as good as new. Looks as good as new, doesn't it? Now, look, Mr. President, would it or would it not be a good advertisement for you if you stuck that car in your show window and put a sign on it, saying it was 16 years old and has gone 200,000 miles and doesn't that prove that a Northland can take the gaff?"

The president got his hat and went out and looked at Dana's car. He drove it around the block. "What kind of a trade do you want?" he asked Dana.

"I'll swap you even," said Dana, "for a 1950 Super Special, complete with gadgets."

The president smiled, then sobered, then figured on the back of an envelope, then looked at Dana's car again, then nodded. "It's a deal," he said.

And now poor Rachael is wondering if she will have to wait another 16 years before she gets a new car.

Chinese Reds Laughed at MacArthur Across River

By Wright A. Patterson

HOW UTTERLY FUTILE would be any United Nations armed force in preventing the suppressing acts of aggression was amply demonstrated by the Korean debacle. It was not any lack of ability on the part of MacArthur that caused that result; it was not any lack of valor on the part of United Nations' armed forces—it was the delay and lack of decision on the part of an international debating society. It was a case of "too many cooks spoiling the broth." It could not change its instructions to its field commander without debate.

The first instance of the inability to decide came when the United Nations forces reach the 38th parallel. MacArthur had instructions not to go beyond that line. It took better than a week to get those instructions changed. That more than a week of delay gave the North Koreans time to reorganize their shattered divisions; to get new arms and munitions from the Red Chinese army on the Manchurian border.

It prevented the total distruction of the North Korean army in North Korea. The job had to be done all over again, and before the Manchurian border was reached. The next stopping point was the Yalu river.

Just north of the Yalu river in Manchuria, a vast army of Red Chinese was being assembled. Into its camp was being poured vast numbers of transport vehicles and tanks. Great munition dumps were being erected. There was no slightest question as to the purpose of it all.

The United Nations had an adequate supply of airplanes and bombs. Those planes and bombs could have destroyed the transport vehicles and tanks. They could have blown up the ammunition dumps and scattered the million men the camps contained. But MacArthur's instructions would not permit the firing of so much as a rifle across that river.

The planes at his command could neither fly beyond the south bank of the Yalu or drop so much as a fire cracker on the amounts of military supplies. Both the North Koreans and the Red Chinese could stand on the north bank of that dividing stream and thumb their noses at the impatient United Nations troops on the south bank. Nothing could be done about that situation unless and until MacArthur received new instructions.

He waited, as he was ordered to do, while the discussion went on and on, and then came the attack. That Red army, with its transport vehicles, its tanks, its munitions crossed the Yalu, the debating society had talked too long, and the United Nations' forces in Korea paid the penalty for that delay.

What happened in Korea would be the inevitable result in any case where the activities of a United Nations force came under the orders and directions of an international debating society, representing 53 nations, all of which insist on being heard. It creates an impossible condition for a field commander, just as it did for MacArthur.

It is a safe bet that he would not again undertake such a job as was assigned to him by President Truman. When the time and conditions were urgent both the President and Secretary Acheson failed to urge speed in arriving at a United Nations decision.

It savored of more consideration for the Chinese Reds, of which we have had entirely too much in the past. There should be no place for any who had a part in such actions in the American government. It has cost the lives of many thousands of Americans fighting under the flag and the instructions of the United Nations. In future we should have no part in any armed activities that operate under the orders and direction of the members of an international debating society. Such bosses do not keep pace with military necessities.

The leaders of organized labor, like leaders of other segments of the American people, proved themselves selfish in their demands for those they lead, and the general public turned on them, as it turned on capital when it ignored the interests of the people. The people will turn on the farmers if they ignore the general welfare, and keep on pushing prices of food up.

Cookie Jar Time

"WHEN I HAVE the cookie jar filled," says many a homemaker, "I feel that I'm ready for anything, the children's coming home from school, teen ager's get together, or friends dropping in."

With an assortment of delicious cookies on hand, you can indeed be ready for almost any form of simple entertaining. Serve them with a beverage for most occasions, add ice cream, sherbet or a delectable creamy pudding and you add a flourish to your entertaining.

If the drain on the cookie jar is heavy, make simple drop cookies which are so easy on effort and keeping quality.

• • •

Stone Jar Molasses Cookies
(Makes 3½ dozen)

- 2½ cups sifted flour
- 2 teaspoons double-acting baking powder
- 1 teaspoon ginger
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup molasses
- ½ cup butter
- ½ teaspoon soda

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, ginger, and salt, and sift again. Heat molasses, remove from fire; add butter and soda. Add flour gradually, mixing well. Chill until firm enough to roll. Roll very thin on slightly floured board. Cut with floured 2½-inch cutter or with fancy cutters. Bake in greased baking sheet in moderate oven (350°) 10 minutes.

• • •

Fudge Squares
(Makes 20 1" x 3" squares)

- ½ cup shortening
- 1 cup sugar
- 3 eggs
- 2 squares bitter chocolate
- ¾ cup sifted all-purpose flour
- ½ teaspoon baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 cup broken nut meats

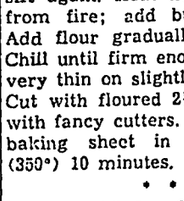
Blend shortening, sugar, and eggs. Melt chocolate over hot water and add to first mixture. Add flour, baking powder, and salt which have been mixed together. Add vanilla and nut meats. Place in 7"x10"x2" pan which has been rubbed with shortening. Bake in a moderate oven (375°) for 25 to 30 minutes. Cover with Fudge Icing.

• • •

Fudge Icing

- 2 tablespoons shortening
- 2 squares bitter chocolate
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 cup sifted confectioners' sugar
- 1 tablespoon milk
- ½ teaspoon vanilla

Melt chocolate over hot water. Pour over the shortening and mix thoroughly. Gradually add the confectioners' sugar, salt, milk, and vanilla. Stir until smooth. Cover fudge squares while still warm.



• • •

Date Nut Drops
(Makes 4-5 dozen)

- ½ cup shortening
- 1 cup brown sugar
- 2 eggs
- 2 cups broken nut meats
- 2 cups seedless raisins
- 2 cups chopped dates

LYNN SAYS:
Serve Palatable Desserts To Satisfy Big Appetites

There's always time to make a dessert if you use simple ideas which can be dressed up easily. For instance, melt some chocolate peppermint wafers and use to frost pound cake. Sprinkle with chopped nuts.

Griddlecakes make an excellent dessert if they're fruit-filled. To regular batter add some chopped, tart apples and fry. Serve with brown sugar and cinnamon.

- 1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
- ¼ teaspoon baking soda
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon baking powder
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- ½ teaspoon cloves
- ½ teaspoon allspice
- 2 tablespoons orange or pineapple juice

Cream shortening and sugar; add eggs and beat well. Add nut meats, raisins, and dates and mix. Add flour, soda, baking powder, salt, cinnamon, cloves, allspice which have been mixed together, and fruit juice. Chill dough. Drop from teaspoon two inches apart on a baking sheet rubbed with shortening. Bake in a moderate oven (375°) 12 to 15 minutes.

• • •

Corn Flake Kisses

- ½ cup sugar
- 1 egg
- ⅛ cup melted shortening
- 1 cup flour (sifted before measuring)
- 1 cup corn flakes
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ cup chopped nut meats
- 1 cup finely cut dates

Combine sugar, shortening and egg. Sift dry ingredients together. Add to the first mixture along with remaining ingredients. Drop from a teaspoon onto a greased cookie sheet. Flatten tops slightly. Bake in a moderately hot oven (400°) for 10 minutes.

• • •

Scotch Oatmeal Cookies

- 1 cup lard
- 1 cup brown sugar
- ½ cup sour milk
- 2 cups flour, pastry (sifted before measuring)
- 2 cups oatmeal
- 1 teaspoon soda
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- ¾ teaspoon salt

Cream lard and sugar until light and fluffy. Add sour milk in which the soda has been dissolved. Add oatmeal and flour, reserving enough flour to roll out cookies (about ½ cup). Roll out and cut into squares. Place on a greased cookie sheet, sprinkle with sugar. Bake in a moderate oven (350°) 15 minutes.

• • •

Sour Cream Cookies

- 1 cup brown sugar
- ½ cup shortening
- 1 egg
- 1 cup chopped nut meats
- 2 cups pastry flour (sifted before measuring)
- 1 teaspoon nutmeg
- ½ teaspoon soda
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup sour cream

Cream shortening, add sugar, then mix well. Add the egg; beat thoroughly. Sift together flour, soda, baking powder, salt, and nutmeg, then add alternatively with sour cream to the first mixture. Mix well and drop from a teaspoon on well-greased cookie sheet. Bake in moderate oven (350°) 20 minutes.

Several kinds of fruit left in the refrigerator? Place in deep dish, top with piecrust and bake. Invert so crust is on the bottom, slice like pie and serve with whipped cream.

Baked fruit like pears and apples can be served on top of small slices of slightly stale cake. Have plenty of syrup from the fruit to spoon onto the cake.

Keep individual pastry tart shells on hand along with chocolate, vanilla and butterscotch puddings. You have a choice of tarts any time you want them.

UN TROOPS RELEASED BY CHINESE COMMUNISTS . . . A group of United Nations soldiers rests at a medical clearing station somewhere in Korea following their release from capture by Chinese Communists. They are, left to right, P.F.C. Robert Duncan, Dayton, Ohio; P.F.C. Joseph A. Collins, Selmer, North Carolina; Cpl. Lawrence Buckland, Sydney, Australia; Lieutenant Angus MacDonald, Brisbane, Australia; and First Lieutenant George E. Dowrie, Brunswick, Ga. They were held in the custody of the Chinese Communists for a total of 17 days.

ARMY PLANE CRASHES . . . Two officers of the United States air forces, one with a walkie-talkie radio set in his hand, stand by what remains of a B-29 which crashed and exploded eight miles north of Woodland, Calif., recently. Eight members of the nine-man crew parachuted to safety, but the fate of the ninth is unknown. He is known to have left the plane safely, but it is feared that he may have landed in the Sacramento river. Eyewitnesses at the scene of the disaster said the big bomber was afire before it crashed and burned in this sugar beet field. Note the long ditch dug by the wreckage which still burns.

NINA WARREN WALKS . . . Nina "Honey Bear" Warren, 17, daughter of California's Governor Earl Warren, takes her first public steps since an attack of polio several months ago. She walks between her smiling parents. She is recuperating in Arrowhead Springs, Calif. The governor also plans to take mud baths for his ailing right arm, which shows signs of arthritis. Nina has been taking a few steps daily, but this is the first time she has appeared for photographers.

HONEST NETTER IN ARMY . . . Junius Kellogg, Manhattan's center who refused a bribe and set off New York's basketball inquiry, passes through chow line at Fort Meade, Md. He's so tall the army doesn't have a suit to fit him.

NABS STEPSON AS BURGLAR . . . John Simerlein, retired policeman of New York, captured his stepson, Louis De Ford, as the latter tried to burglarize the Simerlein home. Acting on a hunch, after a series of minor robberies at the Simerlein home in Jamaica, the former policeman hid in a hall closet and nabbed the youth when he entered the house. Simerlein (left) looks on as police search the youth shortly after his arrest by his stepfather.

WINS DEBATE . . . Senator Lyndon Johnson (D., Texas), floor manager of bill to draft 18-year-olds, wipes brow after the senate passes the bill and raises the induction period to 24 months. Bill authorized U.M.T.

How Sin Begins

Lesson for April 8, 1951

NO ONE can believe in sin who does not believe in God. That is, no one can believe that sin is real unless he believes that God is real. For the meaning of sin is religious; it cannot be understood at all, apart from God. For sin means going contrary to the will of God. Sin may not consist of "doing" anything, of course; it may be only wishing or thinking against God; or it may be refusing to do, or neglecting to do, what God wants done.

Dr. Foreman

A thing is not right just because God wills it; he could not, by a mere proclamation, make murder good and mother-love wicked. But God never wills a thing unless it is right, or forbids it unless it is wrong; one reason for this is that he is creator of all, and so knows what is best for every creature. To go against his will is to go against one's own best interest.

Sin on the Outside

HOW does sin begin?

The Bible says sin has been on this earth as long as people have lived here. But the story of the temptation in the Garden of Eden is also a parable of how sin always begins. As Dr. Brunner says, Adam's other name is Everyman.

Now we can see in this story that sin came into the world because there came a suggestion from the outside. Not everything in this universe is now good; there is anti-God at work, as well as pro-God. There are forces at work that do not wish God's plans to succeed.

If this seems hard to take, at least it cannot be denied that a great many sins would never have been committed without some pull from the outside. A child who goes to school for the first time will pick up, in a few days, habits and language and attitudes that shock the parents. They wonder what's got into the child. Her playmates' meanness has got into her, that's the nub of it.

Sin on the Inside

BUT the fact is, we can't blame the situation as if the situation were the sinner. Not every one who passes a bar-room door feels an urge to go inside. Once in a while a bank clerk skips out with a suitcase full of the bank's money. But the money was there all the time, and no other clerk became a thief

If it were simply the situation that makes the sin, then every bank clerk would be as dishonest as the worst, and every man who passes a bar would not pass it but go inside and get drunk just like the bums who can't pass a bar-room door.

No, there is something on the inside of us that pushes toward sin What is it? The story in Genesis may offer a good clue. One of the New Testament writers put it this way: "A man's temptation is due to the pull of his own inward desires, which can be enormously attractive." (James 1:14, J B Phillips translation.)

Sin Beforehand

THERE is another sad feature of sin that stands out in the Genesis story and in the story of Everyman. That is, sin almost never looks the same afterwards as it did before

Before the sin, Eve sees the forbidden fruit as beautiful and desirable; afterwards in shame she hides away from God Living with herself, with her husband, with God, is no longer the pleasure it had been However sad or horrible sin may look when we see it in the cold light of Afterwards, when we see it beforehand it always looks attractive

In the last stages of sin, to be sure, it may be quite different; a man may be caught in the grip of a habit he hates, and no one can call him worse names than he calls himself. But in the beginnings of sin, few if any persons see anything repulsive or bad in what they are about to do.

That is why "I do as I please" is a fatally bad rule for living. If you do as you please, sooner or later you will please wrong, and down you will go. Adam and Eve did exactly as they pleased, and lost their Paradise. But if we take as our rule of life what God pleases, even if we never reach perfection we shall always be pointing in the right direction.

DOING BUSINESS ON MAIN STREET

A Weekly Newsletter

CONDITIONS FAVORABLE

Despite unsettled condition of the economy as result of materials scarcities, a survey concluded by the Office of Business Economics of the Department of Commerce indicates conditions "very favorable to small firms which constitute the great bulk of the business population."

The report points to an increase of about 50,000 business firms during 1950 and a 10 per cent increase in income of unincorporated and partnership firms such as line the Main Streets of the country.

A MAIN STREET FEATURE

Expansion in profit opportunities not only fostered a rise in the number of new enterprises, but cut down number of failures or discontinuances which averaged 10 per cent below the 1949 number and were lowest since 1947. The 50,000 increase in new business is in contrast to a 30,000 net decline in 1949.

The report indicated government restrictions introduced late in year on consumer and mortgage credit, non-residential building and on use of critical materials, had no noteworthy effect on business closings. From now on, however, uncertainties about prospective supplies of labor and materials may slow down establishment of new firms. Total concerns in country exceeds 4,000,000, or gain of more than 625,000--19 per cent, over 10-year period since 1940.

CASH RESOURCES UP

Tip to small business as to prospective consumer purchase is fact that cash resources of individuals as of Jan. 1, 1951, amounted to $145,000,000,000--$5,000,000,000 higher than at start of 1950. A large proportion of this vast sum is in cash resources of rural folks.

If congress adopts pay-as-we-go formula for financing current fiscal year's 71.6-billion-dollar budget, it will mean an average per capita tax payment of about $475 for every man, woman and child. This will eat into cash reserve held by individuals.

"MARGIN" CONTROL

More than 200,000 retailers, most of whom operate on Main Streets of America, are affected by newest regulation of Office of Price Stabilization which shifts regulation from a dollars-and-cents figure to "margin" type of control. The order affects all items commonly sold in men's and women's apparel and shoe stores, most of items carried in furniture and floor covering stores and about 75 per cent of volume handled in department stores.

Order permits retailers to get out from under squeeze between general ceiling price freeze of OPS and rising wholesale prices. In other words, it permits retailers to use their "normal" mark-ups instead of out-of-line mark-ups occasioned by unusually high wholesale prices.

ARMED SERVICES QUESTION BOX

(Send your questions about the armed forces or any aspect of military service to: Walter Shead, Armed Services Question Box, 1057 National Press Building, Washington 4, D.C. Answers will be given in this column.)

GEN. OMAR BRADLEY, and Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall are still holding out for 18-year-olds in the universal military training bill, while congress seems to be splitting hairs in the house military affairs committee stand for 18½ year-olds. Feeling here is that the military will finally win out on the controversy.

Q. If my son is given free insurance as a serviceman, will he be permitted to continue it after he again becomes a civilian? A. G., Fostoria, Ohio.

A. Under provisions of the bill (HR 1) passed by the house Jan. 24 and approved by a senate committee Feb 14, he will not. Either 90 or 120 days after he leaves active duty—and house and senate committee versions vary—the free $10,000 policy will be terminated unless the ex-serviceman is uninsurable at standard rates by regular commercial companies.

Q. Will the Veterans' administration increase my disability compensation if I go to a VA hospital for treatment of a service-connected disability? O.M.A., Ames, Iowa.

A. After you have been in the hospital for 21 days or more for treatment of your service-connected disability, VA, under certain conditions, may pay you a 100 per cent disability rating, which you would continue to receive for as long as you remain hospitalized for treatment.

Q. May I use a GI business loan to buy a car and be exempt from credit restrictions that now apply to car purchases? G. H., Fresno, Cal.

A. The only condition under which you can get a GI business loan to buy a car would be if the car is essential to your business. You could not get it for pleasure or to travel to and from work.

Q. The beneficiary of my National Service Life Insurance policy formerly was my father. Recently I married and want to name my wife as beneficiary. Do I have to get my father's consent to change the beneficiary? K. L., Independence, Mo.

A. No. You have the right to change beneficiaries at any time.

Q. How do I apply for the special National Service Life Insurance dividends which I understand VA will pay early this year? J.M.A., Bennington, Vt.

A. No application is necessary. Instead, payments will be made automatically. If VA has any question as to your address of record, it will mail you a return postcard for verification of your proper address.

Q. Who succeded Dr. Magnuson as chief medical director of the Veterans' administration? A.J.H., New Smyrna Beach, Fla.

A. Vice Adm. Joel T. Boone, U.S. Navy, retired, took the oath of office to succeed Dr. Paul B. Magnuson on February 28, 1951.

Q. In what way do the armed services and congress differ on extension of the draft? L.L.B., Lubbock, Tex.

A. Generally speaking, the armed services ask the minimum age for service be 18 years and service be extended from 21 to 27 months.

VA Cuts Operating Cost $428 Million

Veterans' administration has just issued a long report on the post-war activities of that organization indicating that it had cut its general administrative operating costs from $428,009,750 in 1947 at the peak of its expansion, to $285,928,156 for fiscal 1950, a reduction of about 33 per cent. And according to budget estimates cost at the end of 1952 will be further cut to $222,532,000. At the same time personnel for these general administrative offices has been reduced from 101,960 full and part-time employees in 1947 to 64,800 at the end of fiscal 1950.

Despite this, the Committee for the Hoover Report still is firing broadsides charging administrative waste and inefficiency at the Veterans' administration. The latest was the assertion by Robert L. Johnston, national chairman of the citizens committee, which included the charge VA had wasted $200,000,000 in overpayments.
